WAYS TO AVERT POLICE BRIBES BEING SOUGHT BY GRAND JURY

Foreman of Panel in Pay-Off Inquiry Asks Department Officials, Others to Offer Suggestions.

Police officials and several other persons have been invited to appear before the circuit court grand jury to suggest means to prevent a recurrence of conditions which led to the current police pay-off inquiry, the Post-Dispatch was told last night.

Letters signed by John Casey, jury foreman, were sent to the four members of the Police Board; Chief Jeremiah O'Connell, Assistant Chief Joseph E. Casey, Chief of Detectives James Chapman, Police Inspector George Parker, Capt. Elias Hoagland of the Ruskin avenue distict and Maj. James F. Thompson, head of a special police squad assisting in the investigation.

Also invited to appear before the jury were H. Sam Priest, former Police Board president; James W. Connor, operating director, St. Louis Crime Commission; Victor T. Brannon, director, Governmental Research Institute, and Isaac Gurman, head of the St. Louis Bureau for Men.

The letter listed Nov. 17, 22 and 23 as dates on which those invited could appear.

Explains Letter.

Explaining the letter, Casey told the Post-Dispatch: "The jury members were unanimous in feeling that we would like to do something other than merely indicting or not indicting policemen.

"We want to make some constructive suggestion in our final report which would minimize the possibility of policemen taking bribes.

"If there are any administrative weaknesses in the police department—or any organizational weaknesses—that are causing the public to lose confidence in the department, as it has since the present investigation began in June, then we are determined to find them.

"It may be that the weaknesses are due to statutory provisions under which the department must operate. We don't know, but we are going to find out.

"The morale and efficiency of the policemen, most of whom I believe are good officers, have been shaken by this cloud of suspicion hanging over the department."

Seek 'Constructive' Help.

Casey, who is general training supervisor for the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., said the jurors believed they would be helped in drafting "constructive" recommendations in their final report by inviting opinions and suggestions from persons informed on police department matters.

The grand jury will resume its investigation Tuesday. Its final report is due the first week in December. Casey's letter said the jury hoped to complete its phase of the inquiry by Nov. 15.

Mrs. Ethel Clift, brothel operator who has been a key figure in the inquiry has told investigators that she made payments to a detective sergeant, a police corporal and a police lieutenant in addition to Detective Capt. William Greenspan and Police Lt. F. Lyman Davis, the Post-Dispatch was told.

Greenspan and Davis have been named in bribery indictments voted by the present grand jury. Greenspan was charged in four indictments, Davis in three.

It is expected that Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd will ask the jury to vote indictments against other police officers this week.

$154,000,000 JETS WON'T BE FLOWN, NAVY SAYS

60 McDonnell-Made Craft Will Be Restricted to Non-Flying Application, Thomas Asserts.

By RICHARD DUDMAN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22—The Navy has abandoned efforts to get 60 McDonnell jet fighter planes costing $154,000,000 off the ground as operational aircraft, Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas disclosed tonight.

The F3H-1 Demons, built at St. Louis by the McDonnell Aircraft Corp., have been "restricted to non-flying applications," he said, in a letter to Senator Lyndon Johnson (Dem.), Texas.

Johnson is chairman of the Senate subcommittee on military preparedness which plans to hold hearings on the Navy's handling of the F3H-1 program.

The Navy Secretary's cost figure was much higher than had been indicated in previous Navy announcements, which formed the basis for estimates that each plane cost about $1,300,000, or a total of $78,000,000 for the 60 produced.

The 60 single-engine fighters were equipped with Westinghouse J-40 engines. Production was discontinued when tests showed the engine was not powerful enough.

The Navy used several for testing purposes, five or six others crashed and 50 are grounded at the McDonnell plant at St. Louis because the Navy would not fly them from the factory.

The St. Louis firm is now producing a later model of the Demon, powered with an Allison J-71 engine. Thomas said the new model, called the F3H-2, has passed most of its suitability tests and delivery is expected in 1956. He said the Navy expects to get 220 of the F3H-2 fighters.

He estimated that the cost of the program for producing the 280 planes, including the 60 now deemed not airworthy, will be about $510,000,000.

"Since the (J-40) engine selected originally did not meet requirements, every effort has been directed toward maximum recovery of sums expended and toward research to correct and, ultimately, replace the initial

HARRIMAN CALLS FOR 90 PCT. FARM PRICE SUPPORTS IN IOWA SPEECH

Urges Other Steps to Meet Agricultural Problem—Denies He Is Presidential Candidate.

By SAM B. ARMSTRONG
National Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 22—Immediate re-establishment of farm price supports at 90 per cent of parity was advocated by Gov. Averell Harriman of New York in an address before an Iowa Democratic fund-raising dinner tonight.

Deploring the decline in farm income, Harriman also suggested an emergency hog purchase program, a food stamp plan to enable persons on relief to buy more and better food, extension of the school lunch program to make use of all funds available and to reduce surpluses, and establishment of a soil-conservation program to take certain land out of production in order to build up its fertility.

Parrying questions about the Democratic nomination for President with the stock reply that he was "not an active candidate," Harriman said at a press conference that he expected to serve out his four-year term as Governor and hoped to be re-elected.

Asked if he would let his name go into any of the early presidential primary elections, Harriman said: "Even if I were interested, I wouldn't let my name go into a primary."

13-State Group.

Harriman's talk was heard by members of the 13-State Democratic Midwest Conference, most of whom remained for the dinner after attending a two-day meeting given largely to discussion of the farm problem.

These delegates—Democratic national committeemen and committeewomen and state Democratic chairmen and vice chairmen, who will be members of their states' delegations to the Democratic national convention next Aug. 13—already had received mimeographed copies of a telegram sent here yesterday by Adlai Stevenson.

Stevenson, in the running for the Democratic nomination for a second time, said: "Our objective for agriculture is equality with the other parts of our economy. Our yardstick for measuring this equality is parity—a formula for fairness based on relating what a farmer gets for what he sells to what he must pay for what he buys. And 90 per cent of what is fair is certainly not unfair or too high."

The two Democratic contenders found themselves in substantial agreement with Republican Governors or their representatives from eight farm-belt states who met here last week and in mild terms asked Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson to do something to arrest the decline in farm income.

Scores With Humor.

Harriman, who generally gives the impression of being cool and aloof, made an attempt at humor with his Midwest audience, with good results:

"Vice President Nixon says the Democrats are turning agriculture into a political football," he said, "Well, that's right, if this is what he means — the farmers kick, the Republicans fumble and the Democrats pick up the ball."

This was one of the few laughs Harriman drew. For the most part his talk was serious:

"They (the Republicans) made a flat pledge to maintain price supports on the basic crops at 90 per cent of parity," he said. "Then they raised the ante to 100 per cent. Yet they abandoned even the 90 per cent supports just as soon as they could after the election.

"Since 1952, the farmers have lost over $3,000,000,000 a year in income. That is almost one dollar out of every four, and this in a time of great prosperity when most other people's incomes have risen. The whole thing now looks like just what we went through in the Republican 1920s, when the country as a whole had prosperity, but the farmers had depression."

Flexible price supports of farm products, as championed by Benson, have proved a failure after three years' trial, Harriman said.

"It has not reduced production," he declared. "It has not cut surpluses. And the price cut to the farmer has not been passed on to the consumer. But one thing this low-price policy has done—that is to cut the farmer's income."

Farmers' 'Only Fault.'

The farmer's "only fault," Harriman went on, is that he has "done too well in serving us." He responded to demands for production during the war and now "he is being treated like some kind of economic delinquent."

"The first fundamental thing we should do is to put the farmer back where he was before by re-establishing 90 per cent price supports. We should bear in mind that these surpluses — although they should

DULLES CONFERS WITH PRESIDENT OF ITALY ON HIS WAY TO GENEVA

He Will Fly to Paris for Further Strategy Talks Before Big Four Meeting—Audience With Pope.

ROME, Oct. 22 (AP)—Secretary of State Dulles, on a circuitous route to the Geneva Big Four parley, conferred for an hour tonight with Italy's President Giovanni Gronchi and Foreign Minister Gaetano Martino.

Dulles told newsmen afterward he thought the meeting was "a very useful and important prelude to the further talks which I will be having in Paris."

The Secretary will be received in private audience at noon tomorrow by Pope Pius XII at the Pontiff's summer residence at Castel Gandolfo.

Accompanying him will be Ambassador Clare Boothe Luce, and probably members of the party who flew with him from Washington.

In tonight's conference with Gronchi, a leftwing Christian Democrat whose election was said to make some United States observers fear an Italian move to the left, Dulles broached the topic of Gronchi visiting America.

Brings Eisenhower's Regards.

An aid to the Italian leader said Dulles "brought the President regards of President Eisenhower, who also expressed through Dulles his desire to meet President Gronchi in the United States."

"But because of President Eisenhower's illness it is impossible to determine the time or circumstances of any meeting now," the informant said.

Dulles is spending 19 hours in Italy. He will fly to Paris tomorrow for final pre-Geneva strategy sessions with North Atlantic Treaty Organization and British and French leaders.

Martino said Dulles had invited him to fly along to Paris.

The meeting with Gronchi was the longest the Italian president has had with any foreign visitor since he took office last spring.

Dulles had an opportunity to assure Italian officials that their views would be taken into consideration at Geneva.

Italians have been piqued, observers said, because their voice has sometimes gone unheard since they are neither a member of the Big Four nor of the United Nations.

On arrival, Dulles made the point that he considered it "important to consult" with the Italian government prior to the foreign ministers meeting beginning at Geneva Oct. 27.

Rushes to Dinner.

Rushing off to a state dinner after the meeting in Gronchi's office, Dulles told reporters Gronchi made "some very valuable suggestions with respect to some of the matters which will be coming up at Geneva."

He said they also discussed "the importance of European integration and the close ties of an economic and cultural nature that exists between our two countries."

Dulles was dressed in the same light-blue suit in which he arrived at the airport earlier. The state dinner, with Premier Antonio Segni as host, was to be an informal "black tie" affair.

The Secretary of State packed a lot of talks into his first few hours in Italy. Martino was at the airport to greet him. So was Ambassador Luce, who bestowed a kiss on Mrs. Dulles as she walked down the ramp from the special United States Air Force plane.

A highly-placed Italian informant said both Gronchi and Martino assured Dulles Italy will hold firm to its Western alliances, and "has no intention whatsoever of changing its present policy toward Communist countries."

Dulles was reported to have assured the Italian leaders the United States will press vigorously for Italy's entry into the United Nations. He expressed confidence that this will finally be possible, the informant said.

'Glad to Renew Contacts.'

Dulles told Martino he "was glad to renew the personal contact which I have regularly enjoyed with the leaders of your nation."

Dulles said Italy is "one of the great powers," and one with which the United States desires to maintain the closest relations.

"Because of your deep concern with European, and indeed, world affairs, I consider it important to consult with your government prior to the forthcoming meeting in Geneva," Dulles told Martino.

He added that the United States "attaches high importance to relations with Italy which will permit our people always to continue in friendship."

Martino told Dulles he will find in Rome the "same hospitality and understanding" that then Premier Mario Scelba and he found in Washington last April when the Italian leaders visited the United States.

2 TO 3 MONTHS TO TELL IF PRESIDENT WILL FULLY RECOVER, DR. WHITE SAYS

Visitors in Denver

CHIEF EXECUTIVE LIKELY TO START HOME BETWEEN NOV. 5 AND 12

Probably Will Stop in Washington on Way to Farm—'On Road to Good Health,' Physician Asserts.

By JAMES DEAKIN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DENVER, Oct. 22—President Eisenhower probably will leave Fitzsimons Army Hospital here sometime between Nov. 5 and Nov. 12 and return to Washington for a few days before going to his farm home at Gettysburg, Pa., his chief physician said today.

Dr. Paul Dudley White, noted Boston heart specialist, told reporters it would be two or three months before he could tell with any certainty whether Mr. Eisenhower would make a complete recovery and be able to resume a fully normal life.

Mr. Eisenhower, Dr. White said "is on the road back to good health" and his doctors are aiming at the week beginning Nov. 5 as the time for his departure from Denver, although no specific date has been set.

Dr. White's Third Visit.

Dr. White, chief medical consultant on the President's illness, made his third visit to Mr. Eisenhower's bedside today. He was at the hospital for three hours, examining the Chief Executive, studying his medical records and consulting with the attending physicians.

Afterwards, Dr. White told a press conference Mr. Eisenhower's recovery from a heart attack was proceeding on schedule, without complications. "I can say he has done and is doing well, and week by week is on the road back to good health," the physician declared.

He sidestepped questions on Mr. Eisenhower's ability to run for re-election in 1956, saying: "We shall have to wait another two or three months to know."

It will take that long, Dr. White said, "to make sure of the completeness of his recovery. That is true in many patients with coronary thrombosis."

Dr. White held out the possibility that Mr. Eisenhower could go into Washington from Gettysburg occasionally to confer with his Cabinet and other top government officials.

He said, too, that the President should be able to meet with his advisers at Gettysburg, as he has done at the hospital here.

Dr. White said that a stop in Washington for a few days after leaving the hospital here would "break up" the long journey to Gettysburg for Mr. Eisenhower.

However, he stuck to his prediction that the President probably would not be able to return to Washington for good before Jan. 1 or later.

Cautious on Running Again.

Dr. White was more restrained than he had been previously on the question of Mr. Eisenhower's physical ability to run again.

On Sept. 25, the day after the President suffered a coronary thrombosis, Dr. White was quoted by reporters in Boston as saying it was "conceivable" the President could seek a second term.

Later, after a visit to the hospital on Oct. 9, the physician amended this to say it was "impossible" to tell at that time.

He repeated his view today, adding that the President's doctors now are measuring his recovery in terms of two-week periods and not making long-range predictions.

Asked whether it would be possible to tell in two or three months whether Mr. Eisenhower could run again, Dr. White said that was a matter of great concern to the President's family and many others, but that all the doctors could do was determine after that time whether Mr. Eisenhower's heart was fit.

On the subject of the President's work schedule after arriving at Gettysburg, Dr. White said Mr. Eisenhower might be able to meet with his whole Cabinet, adding: "He might even go into Washington by plane or car to meet them."

He opened the press conference by saying: "Ladies and gentlemen, I have only good news for you . . . so my report can be rather brief—briefer than usual."

Speaking rapidly, he described the President's physical condition at the end of his fourth week of convalescence. At times reporters had to ask him to slow.

37 DAMAGE SUITS SETTLED AT ONCE FOR $659,000

CHICAGO, Oct. 22 (UP) — Thirty-seven personal injury damage suits totaling $1,023,000 resulting from a 1953 factory fire have been settled en masse without trials.

Called the largest such settlement in superior court history, the suits grew out of an explosion and fire in which 34 persons were killed and 36 others injured in the Haber Corp. plant on Chicago's northwest side.

Judge Henry L. Burman and more than 100 lawyers worked intensively on the cases for a period of about six weeks before checks totaling $659,000 were handed to plaintiffs or their attorneys yesterday.

Lawyers estimated that if the cases had all gone to trial more than two years of court time would have been needed to hear them.

The largest individual settlement of $109,000 went to Joseph Loverde, 28, an employe on the plant who was burned and permanently disabled in the fire. The smallest settlement was for $2000.

Defendants in the suits were the Haber Corp., three owners of the building and two contractors who were remodeling the kitchenware plant at the time of the fire.

TEXTILE WORKERS FIND $1400 IN RAGS AT PLANT

TROY, N.H., Oct. 22 (UP)—Two Troy textile workers found that the proverbial pot of gold can pop up during the routine of everyday work as well as on extravagant quiz shows.

Norman Rouleau and Leonard Osborne found $1400 in woolen material they were processing at the Troy blanket mills. The money was in $100 bills.

Company president Fuller Ripley said he doubts anyone else can put up a valid claim to the money.

He explained that the woolen material comes from clothing and rags supplied by junk dealers from all over the nation.

SAYS EXECUTIVES OUGHT TO LEARN TO BECOME LAZY

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Oct. 22 (AP)—Business executives average about 53 to 60 hours of work a week, one of their number says, and advises they "should learn to become lazy."

Philip Rauch, youthful head of a Brooklyn (N.Y.) firm told a regional meeting of the Young Presidents Organization yesterday that "the ideal president is one who can develop a management team that is well balanced."

"If he does not develop adequate specialists, he usually gives a disproportionate amount of his own time to that area where he feels the company is weakest," Rauch said.

"An executive," he added, "has been defined as a man who gets things done through other people."

Hence, he gave this advice to his colleagues: "A good president should learn to become lazy."

MAYOR TO BE SUBPENAED IN WELLSTON PROBE

Duggan, Several Police Officers Also to Be Called, Garnholz Announces.

Subpenas for grand jury appearances will be issued tomorrow for Mayor Leo Hayes of Wellston, Maj. William Duggan, head of the Wellston police department, and three or four officers of the department, St. Louis County Prosecuting Attorney Edward W. Garnholz said last night.

The witnesses will be summoned to appear Tuesday before the grand jury in its investigation of a series of recent burglaries and the alleged connection of certain Wellston policemen with the crimes.

Garnholz denied that the proposal to issue subpeanas for Hayes and the others indicated any personal hostility on his part toward the Wellston mayor. He said the purpose was solely to expedite the work of the grand jury. Hayes had said he desired to go before the grand jury at the earliest possible time.

"Surprised" by Mayor.

The prosecutor said he was surprised last Thursday when Hayes called "at the last minute" to say he could not meet with the grand jury that day.

"To be sure he will appear, we decided to send him a subpena," Garnholz said.

The three or four officers to be subpenaed are the first members of the force to appear before the grand jury. They will not necessarily be men who already have been questioned, Gernholz added. Their testimoney is sought as a part of the over-all investigation of the department as well as the particular inquiry into the burglaries, he said.

A volunteer witness appeared at the Clayton courthouse yesterday and gave a statement in which he said he had turned down a request by a Wellston officer that he take part in some burglaries with policemen as lookouts.

Two patrolmen have been charged with second-degree burglary and larceny and are free on bond. They are Carl L. Howell, who was arrested in St. Louis Friday, and John P. (Jack) Graham, who was arrested by county police Wednesday night.

Hearings Are Set.

Howell's preliminary hearing is scheduled for Wednesday and Graham's for Friday, before different magistrates. Also due for a preliminary hearing Friday is Quentin Stewart, charged with receiving stolen property in the case.

Mayor Hayes who became angry with county officials when Howell was turned over to county authorities and not to home, said yesterday he was not sure he wanted the county police department to proceed with a check of all members of the Wellston department, which he had requested earlier. The orig-

SEEKING SOLITUDE, LIVES 3 WEEKS ON ARMY GUN RANGE

NEW ALBANY, Ind., Oct. 22 (UP) — David Gilkey, 30 years old, Cincinnati, O., who lived for three weeks on the Army's heavy artillery range near Madison, Ind., was fined $25 and costs in United States district court yesterday.

Gilkey, who told arresting officers he lived off pears and apples picked up on the reservation, said, "I guess you would call it a retreat I was after."

Gilkey said he scaled a fence at the heavily guarded Jefferson proving grounds Oct. 1. He said none of the high explosive shells fired on the test range fell near him.

The range is used daily to test weapons from hand grenades up to 155-millimeter guns and occasionally for night bombing by planes from Wright-Patterson Air Force base.

Expressing regret at his discovery and capture, Gilkey said in court, "I needed a few more days to think out something all personal."

PRIVATE ORDERS A SOLDIER TO HELP HIM, AND HE DOES

FORT LEONARD WOOD, Mo., Oct. 22 (AP)—An Army trainee was having trouble anchoring a foot bridge across the Big Piney river in recent night exercises when he spotted a pipe-smoking soldier standing nearby.

"Let's have some help here," he yelled at the soldier and grabbed his sleeve. "Pull on this rope."

"Pull harder," the trainee growled.

"I am," the pipe smoker said.

Then when the bridge was anchored, Brig. Gen. N. A. Costello, assistant division commander, took another puff on his pipe and walked away.

BUS PLUNGES 50 FEET, ONLY 9 OUT OF 41 SUFFER INJURIES

MONROE, Mich., Oct. 22 (UP) —A Greyhound bus plunged down a 50-foot incline into a bog today after colliding with an automobile, but the driver and 31 out of 40 passengers escaped injury.

A 26-year-old Detroit man, Jack Hutchinson, riding in the car with his uncle, Orlie Van Dosen, was killed and Van Dosen seriously injured.

Nine other passengers in the bus, a "Skyliner" en route from Pittsburgh, Pa., to Detroit, were injured but none of the injuries were serious. Seven were released after treatment and two, Robert Wallace, Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Gorganna Brooks, Pittsburgh, were hospitalized.

BULGANIN HAILS EISENHOWER ON DISARMAMENT

But Leiter Pushes Russian Plan for Control-Post Guarantees Against Attack.

MOSCOW, Oct. 22 (AP)—Soviet Premier Bulganin published tonight a letter to President Eisenhower hailing him for his position on the disarmament problem. Bulganin, however, pushed the Soviet plan for control-post guarantees against attack as a step toward settling the problem.

The Premier's letter was made public as the Big Four foreign ministers prepared to convene for their conference at Geneva Thursday.

It said that agreement on the Soviet control-post proposal would have "a great significance for furthering the settling of the problem of disarmament." Bulganin made no mention in the letter of Mr. Eisenhower's "open sky" proposal for reciprocal aerial inspection.

Bulganin said he was awaiting Mr. Eisenhower's recovery so disarmament proposals could be discussed. This made disarmament loom large as the principal topic for discussion at Geneva.

Some Western observers here feel the primary aim of Moscow at the Geneva foreign ministers conference is some form of disarmament. Diplomats here say if there is any significant progress at Geneva at all, it will concern that question.

The United States agrees it is important to avoid the possibility of surprise attack by either side in this atomic age, but still awaits a clear-cut reply to the President's "open sky" proposal. Bulganin's letter may mean Geneva will bring the answer to the President's latest suggestion that the Soviet plan for control-post ground inspection could be included as a starter in a disarmament plan although the West considers it inadequate by itself.

Bulganin's letter, dated Oct. 20, expressed happiness that President Eisenhower attached

Eisenhower an 'Ideal Patient,' Gets Gold Star for Good Conduct

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DENVER, Oct. 22—Dr. Paul Dudley White gave a gold star for good behavior to a distinguished patient today.

The Boston heart specialist described President Eisenhower as an "ideal patient."

When he walked into Mr. Eisenhower's hospital room this morning, Dr. White told reporters, the President was wearing a pair of pajamas given him as a birthday present by White House correspondents.

On the shirt were stitched the words, "much better thanks," and on each collar were five gold stars, symbolic of the President's Army rank.

So Dr. White gave his good patient a sixth star, a big gold one. It was engraved. "To D. D. E. for good behavior. Oct. 1955."

The physician said Mr. Eisenhower commented that it was the first time he had received any award for good conduct in 45 years.

As to the President's mental attitude during his convalescence from a heart attack, Dr. White said Mr. Eisenhower like his "beautiful" surroundings, feels he has a good staff on hand to assist him and is cheerful.

$160,000 Going Down Drain, Navy Cuts Water Dentists Use

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (UP) —The Navy announced today that it plans to save $160,000 a year by cutting the amount of water that goes down the drain in dental treatment.

It seems Navy dentists have been using 250,000,000 gallons of water a year while excavating tooth cavities.

This extravagance is going to stop, the Navy disclosed. All dental chairs are now being outfitted with a special valve which will control the water flowing into the cuspidor. From now on, the water will be used only when it's needed instead of running all the time.

This is expected to cut dental water consumption to a mere trickle of 4,653,500 gallons a year—a total saving of more than 200,000,000 gallons.

The saving is expected to amount to $44 for every land-based dental unit and $260 for ship units. Total saving for the taxpayer—$160,000.

The new valve will cost only about $12 to build.

GENEVA TALKS TO BE AT CROSS PURPOSES, WEST MOOD CAUTIOUS

Little Real Gain in Peace Expected — Russia's Record Hints Molotov Wants Cold War Truce.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

GENEVA, Oct. 22 (AP)—Russia and the western powers will be negotiating at cross purposes when they meet in the Big Four foreign ministers conference here next week. The prospects are for a battle of wits and little real gain in peace.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, Foreign Secretary Harold Macmillan of Britain and Foreign Minister Antoine Pinay of France are approaching the conference in a mood of public caution and private pessimism.

Russia's record during the past year, though glittering with promises of peace, suggests that Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov most wants is actually a truce in the cold war. He would thus ease internal and foreign pressures on the government of Premier Bulganin while preserving an opportunity for Russia later on to try to take over all Germany and dominate Europe.

Dulles, Macmillan and Pinay are seeking a permament peace, but only a peace which would secure all of Germany for the West and roll back Soviet power to the borders of Russia. They would like to use Russia's apparent need for a truce to kill off finally the momentum of Communist expansion.

Opens Thursday.

The head-on conflict between the two contradictory purposes will begin developing anew at a conference table in Geneva's palace of nations Thursday.

It is, in fact, the same conflict that controlled the course of the Big Four summit talks last July. At that time it was largely obscured by a gushing display of East-West good will, but the foreign ministers' negotiations will deal much more with harsh realities.

Dulles will confer in Paris with Macmillan and Pinay on development of common western policies for the talks with Molotov.

A solid front of the United States, Britain and France is vital if their purpose of rolling back Soviet power is to have any chance of success. Molotov's greatest potential gain at this time would be to divide the western allies on some major issue such as German unification or disarmament. He could then exploit the division to promote Russian aims in Germany.

From the western side the prospect of ending Communist rule in East Germany is at the moment very dim. It may be brightened if the western powers can discover enough pressures to force the Russians to consider letting the area go.

Unity Demand.

Chancellor Adenauer of West Germany, with this in mind, has urged President Eisenhower and other western leaders not to let Russia have the benefits of a cold war truce without extracting the price of German unification.

The great difficulty in following so tough a line—as Adenauer himself discovered in Moscow in September—is that the Russians can sometimes dictate their own price for relaxing tensions and do it in such a way that western leaders feel they cannot refuse. For example, Adenauer went to Moscow to establish something less than full diplomatic relations unless Russia agreed to advance German unification. When Bulganin offered him the freedom of thousands of German war prisoners in return for full diplomatic relations he decided he could not refuse the deal.

To some extent the Russians also are in position to write their own terms for a truce and put them into effect without the agreement of the West. By their own decisions they brought conclusion of an Austrian independence treaty (after years of stalling), opened diplomatic relations with West Germany, returned the Porkkala naval base to Finland and announced a cut of 640,000 men in their armed forces.

Western leaders regard these maneuvers cynically: in the atomic age Porkkala has no great strategic value; neither did Soviet troops in Austria. No one outside Russia can tell whether armed forces were actually reduced. Russia wants trade and a political foothold with West Germany. Despite such cynicism, Western leaders have been compelled to admit that Russia's moves have obtained at low cost a very great relaxation in East-West tensions.

Unity More Difficult.

They have made a powerful impact on free world opinion. They have made the unity and the military power of Western nations much more difficult to maintain.

They have done this by cleverly playing on Western hopes for peace, for lower arms cost and for military manpower cuts. Moscow naturally has initiative along this line since it was Soviet aggressiveness which brought on the cold war in the first place, but that does not make the problem of defeating Soviet purposes any less serious for Dulles, Macmillan and Pinay.

DETECTIVE WINS $50,000 ON TV SHOW, TO TRY FOR $100,000

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (UP)—Barney Arluck, a New York City police detective, won $50,000 on a television quiz show tonight. It was the second largest cash prize in TV history.

Arluck won the $50,000 on the NBC show, The Big Surprise. He can go on to win $100,000 next week and top the record prize of $64,000 won by Marine Capt. Richard McCutchen Sept. 13.

The detective, who is also a lawyer, correctly answered the following two-part question: "What three kinds of challenges of prospective jurors are used in New York State? One of these categories has eight specific provisions, what are five of them?"

Arluck said the three kinds of challenges were peremptory, actual and for implied bias. He gave these five specific provisions for disqualification of a prospective juror: Where he is a member of the family of the person accusing the defendant; where there is an employer-employe relationship; where the defendant was the adverse party in a civil action; where the prospective juror was on the grand jury which returned the indictment; and where the prospective juror had any prejudice against capital punishment.

Arluck keeps the $50,000 even if he misses in his bid for the $100,000 jackpot next week.

BULGANIN HAILS EISENHOWER ON DISARMAMENT

"such great significance" to the disarmament question.

The letter was written at Sochi, a Black sea vacation resort from which Bulganin and other Soviet leaders recently returned.

Text of Letter.

The text of the letter:

"To his excellency Dwight D. Eisenhower:

"Highly esteemed Mr. President, I thank you for your letter of Oct. 12 on the question of disarmament. I shall wait for the moment when you will be able to state your ideas on this point as you intend to do.

"It gladdens me that you are attaching such great significance to these questions and there can be no doubt that all that the governments of our countries can do to stop the armaments race and establish, with this aim, the necessary controls will answer the higher interests and expectations of nations.

"With satisfaction I mark your favorable treatment of our proposal concerning control posts having the aim of forestalling surprise attacks of one country against another. I consider that agreement on this question would have a great significance for furthering the settling of the problem of disarmament.

"We in Moscow are waiting for the speediest recovery of your health.

"With sincere respect, Nikolai Bulganin."

BRUCKER WARNS UNIT CHIEFS MUST BRING IN VOLUNTEERS

FORT BENNING, Ga., Oct. 22 (AP)—Army Secretary Brucker warned today that local unit commanders may lose their jobs if they fail to bring in volunteers under the Administration's new reserve program.

Brucker, here to attend a meeting of the Association of the United States Army, was asked by reporters about progress of the program approved by the last Congress.

The Secretary said, in answer to a question about inducing pre-draft-age men to volunteer for six months' active duty and then go into reserve units, that:

"Most certainly if a unit commander doesn't produce (in getting volunteers for his unit) there is no reason why he should expect to continue as a unit commander." The National Guard has been operating on the volunteer basis for years; "why can't we take a leaf out of their book?"

MOLOTOV TO SAY PLANS TO RESIGN IN GENEVA IF HE

MOSCOW, Oct. 22 (AP)—V. M. Molotov said tonight he will announce whether he plans to quit his job as Soviet foreign minister "in Geneva and from Geneva."

Molotov leaves Tuesday for the four power foreign ministers' conference which opens Thursday. Western diplomats here have speculated about his future as foreign minister ever since he confessed an "ideological error" in the magazine Communist Oct. 8.

Affable and smiling at a gala Kremlin reception for visiting Burmese Premier U Nu, Molotov was asked by a correspondent whether he intended to resign.

"I will give the answer to that question in Geneva and from Geneva," Molotov replied.

He was reluctant to discuss his plans in further detail.

In his confession in the magazine Communist, Molotov said he had erred "dangerously" in a major speech last Feb. 8 when he suggested the Soviet Union was not yet a full-scale socialist nation.

ANTI-REDS BLOCK RUSSIANS' PLAN TO VISIT NEWSPAPER

CLEVELAND, Oct. 22 (AP)—A crowd carried posters with such slogans as "Ivan, go home" today at one of the scheduled stops of a touring group of Russian journalists.

Walking around the Cleveland Plain Dealer building like pickets, they identified themselves as anti-Russians with Latvian or Lithuanian backgrounds.

Later the newspaper said the Russian group decided to skip its visit there. The seven visiting journalists had the daily newspaper on their list of places to see today, after a luncheon at the Museum of Art.

STEVENSON TO ENTERTAIN

CHICAGO, Oct. 22 (UP)—Adlai E. Stevenson and his sister will entertain Lake county Democrats at Stevenson's suburban home near Libertyville tomorrow.

About 150 to 200 Democrats from the strongly Republican county are expected to visit the Stevenson home to sip coffee and chat with the 1952 presidential candidate and his sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Ives, the hostess.

SLIMANE TO LEAD MOROCCO'S NEW REFORM REGIME

Says Ben Youssef Will Be Taken to France From Exile in Madagascar.

RABAT, French Morocco, Oct. 23 (AP)—A leading moderate nationalist accepted today the job of forming Morocco's first representative government. At the same time he announced Sultan Mohammed Ben Youssef soon will be taken to France from his exile in Madagascar.

Si Hadj Fatmi Ben Slimane, 57-year-old lawyer and former Pasha of Fez, began consultations aimed at building a cabinet in which he would be Morocco's first premier. Under the French reform program he expects to negotiate limited home rule for this North African protectorate.

Ben Slimane announced the arrival of the deposed Sultan in France would coincide with the great Moslem holiday Mouloud, celebrated Oct. 29 this year. It commemorates the birthday of the Prophet Mohammed.

Easier Task.

With the former Sultan in France, accessible for consultation with the Moroccan nationalists, Ben Slimane's job would be eased somewhat. The Sultan's dethronement and exile by the French more than two years ago has been an outstanding point of friction in Morocco.

Ben Slimane took the job of forming a government after a long conference with a four-man regency council acting in the absence of the two rival claimants to the throne: Ben Youssef and his successor, aged Mohammed Ben Moulay Arafa, who has gone to Tangier. Ben Arafa was installed by the French after Ben Youssef's ouster.

Ben Slimane said the government he plans to form would negotiate to place the relationship between France and Morocco "on new bases." He said this would permit Morocco to exercise its "full sovereignty." That would mean the end of the 43-year-old protectorate status under which France runs Morocco's foreign affairs, defense and most of the government functions.

Slimane, a small, bearded man who usually wears a white flowing robe, apparently agreed to the task at the behest of Si Bekkai, an independent nationalist who is the leading personality of the four regents. Bekkai is a personal friend of Ben Youssef and is generally regarded as his spokesman.

After Hesitation.

Slimane's decision, after days of hesitation, came in the face of the refusal of the largest nationalist party, the Istiqlal, to participate in a coalition government at this time. Istiqlal leaders said they could not be sure that Ben Youssef had indorsed the regents and their powers.

The new premier already had pledges of support from another nationalist group, the Democratic Independence party and many independents. He appeared to hope the Istiqlal would change its attitude in talks preceding the formation of a cabinet.

SAAR FRONTIERS SEALED ON EVE OF VITAL VOTE

Police on Alert — Neutral Observers Predict Defeat for European Status Plan.

SAARBRUECKEN, Saar, Oct. 22 (UP)—The Saar's frontiers were sealed today and its entire police force was mobilized in preparation for tomorrow's national referendum on its future.

About 670,000 of the rich little coal basin's 970,000 people will vote whether to accept or reject a so-called Saar statute under which it would be given "European" status pending the signature of a final peace treaty.

Pro-French leaders, who favor the statute, and pro-German leaders who oppose it, both confidently claimed victory.

Neutral observers predicted that the final returns, early Monday, probably would show a slight majority against the statute — and thus embroil France and West Germany in a new dispute.

Popular feeling has been aroused to fever pitch by a three-month campaign, and rioting is feared if the pro-Germans lose.

The frontiers were sealed against all but specially authorized persons seeking entry at noon today, and they will remain closed until 6 a.m. Monday.

Watching for Disorder.

The tough, French-trained police force of 2300 men was mobilized and put on an emergency basis to watch for disorder.

Saarland Premier Johannes Hoffmann, leading the fight for the statute, and one-time Nazi storm trooper Heinrich Schneider, leading the opposition, wound up the campaign with mass rallies.

Government buildings, the government - controlled Saarbruecken radio and pro-statute newspapers were put under heavy guard.

The Saar is historically German. But it was separated from Germany for a while after World War I and France has controlled it since the end of World War II.

It has its own government. But it is linked economically to France and France controls its foreign affairs and its security.

Chancellor Adenauer of West Germany and former Premier Mendes-France of France agreed a year ago tomorrow on the Saar statute. The referendum was called as the result.

Final Referendum.

If the statute is approved, the Saar will be put on a special international basis, under a neutral commissioner, until a German peace treaty is signed. It will remain economically linked to France, but West Germany will be given economic concessions.

After a peace treaty is signed, there would be a second and final referendum on the Saar's future.

If the voters say no, the status quo will continue. That means political autonomy, but still a close economic tieup with France.

The voting is being held under the supervision of an international commission.

A corps of 1005 neutral observers will watch the voting at the 929 polling stations.

Air Force Admits It Made Error on Planes for Senators

Failed to Have Aircraft on Hand When Expected — Defense Department Explains 'Misunderstanding.'

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (AP) — The Defense Department sought today to clarify what it described as "some misunderstanding" about air transportation for three Democratic Senators now in Europe.

The Air Force admitted that it was aware of the dates on which the Senators had to leave Europe to return to the United States but that it failed to arrange to have planes in the area at these scheduled times, with the result that special aircraft were ordered sent.

The Defense Department said in a statement:

"The Air Force knew in advance of their departure that Senators Stennis (Dem.), Mississippi, and McClellan (Dem.), Arkansas, expected to be returned on Oct. 23 and Senator Chavez on Nov. 3, and the Senators were advised that a way would be found to make suitable air transportation available on those dates."

However, the department indicated that it found that planes were not available in Europe to carry the Senators home on these specified dates. It tried to change the dates, it said, but was told the changes were not acceptable.

Therefore it announced last Thursday that it was sending two four-engined planes over on special flights. The cost of these special flights was estimated at $20,000.

The first of the planes has already arrived in Madrid but McClellan and Stennis refused to use it. They said they would leave with their wives tomorrow for Paris on a scheduled Air Force plane, and then catch a regular Military Air Transport Service plane flying from Germany to the United States.

Chavez, who had been scheduled to be picked up by a special plane in Paris on Nov. 3, declined to say whether he would change his plans and go home by a regular military plane.

All three Senators denied asking for any special service.

The Pentagon statement said the Air Force had offered to pick up McClellan and Stennis in Madrid on Oct. 25, instead of Oct. 23 as they previously had specified, and to fly Chavez out of Paris Nov. 6, three days later than he had planned on.

The statement said this proposal was rejected as "not acceptable" in a message from Col. Ralph J. Watson, Senate liaison officer acting as the Senators' military escort. It was not made clear who decided the plan was not acceptable.

Referring to the Senators' inspection of United States defense bases in Europe, the Pentagon statement said "the Defense Department appreciates the need for Senators to be informed with first hand information when they deem it necessary regarding our military planning and budget requirements abroad."

"This is clearly established by law and the Defense Department at all times has tried to fully co-operate in the matter," it said, adding:

"These Senators along with others started out after Congress adjourned to make such inspections. These particular Senators had informed the Air Force in advance that they would have to be back by certain dates.

"They outlined their transportation requirements and expected to be taken care of as is customary when such trips have been authorized by the chairmen of the standing committees."

The incident, meanwhile, brought good news for some G.I.s and their families stranded in Germany. Air Force headquarters in Madrid announced that the special DC-6 sent to Madrid for Stennis and McClellan will fly on to Frankfurt to take home stranded personnel. The big plane has seats for more than 60 persons.

There were said to be 400 Americans waiting at Frankfurt's airport for a plane home.

PREMIER OFFERS NEW PLAN ON FUTURE OF SUDAN

LONDON, Oct. 22 (AP)—The Foreign Office reported tonight Sudanese Premier Sayed Ismail el Azhari has made a new proposal on the way the Sudan might determine its future.

The Premier was reported to have suggested that a simple vote be taken in the present Sudanese Parliament on whether the Sudan, long ruled jointly by Britain and Egypt, should become independent or federate with Egypt.

Under a 1953 agreement, Egypt and Britain decided on a referendum. This plan provided the 7,000,000 Sudanese would elect a constitution-writing assembly which in turn would decide the territory's future. Then the Khartoum government last month said it desired a plebiscite under which the Sudanese voters would express their own choice on what the country should do.

TWO CATHOLIC PRELATES OUSTED BY PERON RETURN

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 22 (AP) — Two Roman Catholic prelates expelled by Peron from Argentina last June, returned to Buenos Aires by plane today from New York.

A big crowd gathered at the airport, despite a cold, windy afternoon, to give a thunderous welcome to Auxiliary Bishop Manuel Tato of the Buenos Aires diocese and Msgr. Ramon Novoa, the diocese pro-vicar. The new provisional government has restored both to their old posts.

The two were expelled June 15 on the eve of an unsuccessful naval-air revolt against the president-dictator, Juan D. Peron. Pope Pius XII excommunicated all persons responsible for the expulsion.

4 SOVIET ARMS SHIPS REPORTED IN EGYPT PORT

Being Unloaded in Heavily-Guarded Zone, Maritime Sources Say.

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Oct. 22 (UP)—Four Russian ships loaded with Communist arms for Egypt have arrived here in the last three days, informed maritime sources said today.

A fifth shipload of arms, brought by the Egyptian freighter Khedive Ismail from Red China, was unloaded at Suez Thursday.

The latest Russian ship to arrive was the Stalingrad, which reached Alexandria yesterday with a load of arms from Communist Czechoslovakia. The names of the other Soviet ships could not be determined immediately.

They are being unloaded in a heavily-guarded "prohibited military zone" in the outlying Agami area of Alexandria's port. Highway traffic passing the military zone has been diverted, apparently to prevent anyone's getting a close look at the Red shipments.

There was no information as to the type or amount of the arms received.

Moscow Hints Afghanistan Is About to Get Red Arms.

LONDON, Oct. 22 (AP)—The Moscow radio hints that another Moslem state, Afghanistan, is about to receive Communist arms. That country is engaged in a bitter feud with pro-Western Pakistan.

A Moscow broadcast last night said an Afghan military mission would tour a modern arms plant in Red-ruled Czechoslovakia soon.

A deal for Czechoslovakia to sell arms to Egypt has caused much uneasiness in the West which is trying to preserve a balance of power in the Middle East, particularly between Israel and the Arab countries.

Afghanistan and Pakistan long have quarreled over Afghan demands that tribesmen along the common border be permitted to set up an independent state.

Pakistan has a mutual aid pact with the United States and also is a member of the Iraqui-Turkish-British defense pact.

Russia protested against Iran's recent announcement that it was joining this pact.

$269,689 SAVING FOR UTILITIES IN REASSESSMENT, BENSON SAYS

Tax Bills Cut for 17 Companies in County Despite Increase in Valuation of Distributive Properties.

Seventeen public utilities will save a total of $269,689 this year in taxes on their property in St. Louis county as a result of the increase in assessed valuations on real estate ordered by the State Tax Commission, County Collector Willis W. Benson said yesterday.

Missouri's public utilities were instrumental in bringing about the tax commission's 60 per cent valuation increase order, the Post-Dispatch has reported.

The savings to county public utilities were made despite an increase of $3,513,998, from $44,576,570 to $48,090,568, in the assessed valuation of the utilities's so-called distributive properties in the county. Valuation of these properties, which include such items as right-of-way, rolling stock, poles and wire, is fixed by the commission rather than by local authorities. Distributive property of all public utilities except water and gas companies is affected.

Tax Rate Cut.

The increase in local assessments on real estate was accompanied by a commensurate decrease in tax rate. Valuations of utility distributive property, excluding newly acquired items, were not substantially increased because it already was assessed at 45 to 55 per cent of actual value.

After the state commission ordered officials in St. Louis county and other counties to make a blanket increase in real estate assessments from an average of 18 per cent of actual value to 30 per cent of actual value, the Missouri Legislature passed a law requiring that local taxing bodies cut rates so that approximately the same revenue would be raised.

Thus the reduced local rates when applied to the utilities' distributive property valuations resulted in substantial tax bill cuts. There were increases in taxes on non-distributive properties, that is, real estate and personal property, and these increases reduced the net savings to the utilities.

Total tax in St. Louis county on distributive property this year is $1,787,535, compared with $2,099,489 in 1954, a saving of $311,954. However, real estate and personal property taxes rose from $141,572 to $183,836, or $42,264, largely as a result of the increase in assessed valuations. This $42,264 deducted from $311,954 left the net saving of $269,689 to the 17 utilities.

School Tax Slash.

Chief saving to the utilities was in school taxes, on which the average countywide rate was cut from $2.966 on each $100 of valuation in 1954 to $2.402 this year. School taxes paid by the utilities last year totaled $1,322,141, or $167,000 more than this year.

The 66-cent county general revenue tax this year will produce from the utilities only $317,397 compared with $432,392 at last year's 97-cent rate.

The 7-cent state tax was unchanged from 1954 to 1955, so the utilities must pay $33,663, or $2459 more than last year, as a result of the $3,513,998 increase in their valuation as fixed by the tax commission.

The 17 utilities involved are Missouri Pacific, Frisco, Rock Island, Burlington, Wabash and Terminal railroads, Public Service Co., Union Electric Co., Missouri Edison Co., American Telephone & Telegraph Co., Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., Western Union Telegraph Co., Mississippi River Fuel Corp. and Phillips, Shell, Texas and Magnolia pipe line companies.

'The Finder' Leads 6500 Youngsters On Trek Through Big Farm in County

KETC Man Says 'I Didn't Know There Were So Many Kids'—Grown Ups in Attendance Also — Traffic Jams Develop.

By WILLIAM K. WYANT JR.
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

"The Finder" of Educational Television Station KETC, whose aim is to get children interested in the big, bright world around them, led more than 6500 youngsters and 500 adults on a visit yesterday to Will Eakin's Deep Springs Farm.

Long lines of Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Cubs, Brownies and miscellaneous small fry trudged over the 1100-acre property in the autumn sunshine, exclaiming at the white-faced Hereford cattle, inspecting the county's biggest barn and eating ice cream.

So big was the crowd that at one time the automobiles waiting to park stretched more than a half mile along the road, all the way to U.S. Highway 66 and along the highway itself, where state troopers were stationed to guard against accidents.

Strums Guitar.

"The Finder," 35-year-old Steve Bloomer, stood strumming his guitar beside a cowshed as endless hundreds of admirers marched past. A modest fellow, looking sunburned and rural in his worn khakis, Bloomer said he was astonished at the dimensions of the turnout.

"I didn't know," he said, after his third or fourth go at The Ballad of Davy Crockett, "that there were so many kids." He would keep playing until his fingers got sore, when he would retire behind a saltcake. A guitar string broke, but somebody produced a pair of pliers to fix it.

Bloomer had a hard time getting away, even for a few seconds. The children were good finders, too. One of them, Mary Lou Kuester, 8, a Brownie and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence G. Kuester, 9025 Brassie drive, Overland, reached out shyly and touched him.

Steve and everybody around laughed, and he led the group, members of Brownie Troop 771 under guidance of Mrs. Edna Leighton, in a brisk singing of "Old MacDonald Had a Farm." They went through four verses, cows, pigs, geese and ducks.

Scout Singers.

Among the best singers who came along were members of St. Louis Boy Scout Troop 557, a Negro unit. They sang "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" and, getting over into the Burl Ives field, seemed to know more verses to "The Old Gray Goose Is Dead" than "The Finder" did.

After chatting with Bloomer, the children visited silos and contoured fields, looked at some of Eakin's 200 head of cattle, and walked up the hill to see farm machinery and explore the 60 by 300-foot barn. The latter was constructed in the nineteenth century as a county poorhouse, but was not finished.

Paul Bernard, St. Louis county agricultural agent; Howard Funk, soil conservation agent with the Department of Agriculture, and representatives of the State Conservation Commission were on duty to explain what a farm was all about. At the top of the hill, a dairy served ice cream and an orange beverage to all comers.

Terrific Jam.

Afterward many visitors drove a short distance to Rockwoods Reservation, where a traffic jam developed. Children waited in line for an hour to climb the Rockwoods fire tower. Others romped on huge piles of hay, back at the farm. A rabbit raced from beneath a haystack.

Brownie Troop 594 of Ferguson kept together in the crowd by holding onto a length of rope. Smallest link in the chain of children was little Nancy Murphy, who is nearly 2 and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Murphy, 720 Gerald place, Ferguson.

Nancy has not yet become a devotee of "The Finder" program, which is beamed at children in the 9 to 12 age group. However, she showed a great deal of enthusiasm for the outing, second to be organized by the program.

Traffic snarls at the entrance were quickly straightened out by farm-owner Eakin, a powerfully-built, smiling man of 45, who strode about with a portable public-address apparatus. Eakin has appeared several times on the KETC program. He said he thought it was a great day for scientific farming.

Elaborate Plans.

Elaborate plans had been made by KETC officials for borrowing portable relief stations from the armed services, but difficulties developed and, as a KETC spokesman put it, "we just decided to ignore the problem." This seemed to work out all right.

Richard F. Hartzell, producer and originator of "The Finder" program, recalled that the program's first expedition lured 4325 children to Onondaga Cave last April 2. By noon yesterday, he and Bloomer and the assistant producer, Miss Katherine White, were happy but a bit tired.

"I feel a headache coming on," Hartzell confided as he waved another line of automobiles into the parking lot behind the barn.

Guiness Heir Marries.

PARIS, Oct. 22 (AP)—Patrick Guiness, 24-year-old heir to a British beer fortune, married Dolores von Furstenberg, 19, in the Irish chapel here today. The bride is the sister of 15-year-old Princess Ira von Furstenberg, who married Alfonso von Hohenlohe-Langenburg in Venice last month.

UNION WILL VOTE SOON ON P.S. CO. PAY RISE OFFER

Officers Seek to Set Up Meeting—Graduated Increase of 13 Cents Proposed.

Arrangements for a meeting at which bus and streetcar operators will vote on the new wage offer by St. Louis Public Service Co. will be made tomorrow, it was announced last night by Arthur E. East, union president, following failure of efforts yesterday to find a suitable meeting hall.

"The vote will be taken as early in the week as possible, but we were unable to make arrangements on Saturday," East told the Post-Dispatch. The 2600 bus and streetcar operators meet in two sections, due to their working schedules.

The offer, the first formal presentation to materialize from the long sessions conducted at Hotel Jefferson by the State Board of Mediation, calls for a graduated increase of 13 cents an hour under a proposed two-year contract dated last March 1.

While only 1 cent higher than the increase recommended by a public hearing panel, which precipitated the recent 3½-day strike, the offer includes a greater amount of retroactive pay and restoration of the one-hour Sunday pay allowance for selling weekly permits, which had been reduced by half under a prior fact-finding recommendation.

The offer will be "fairly and thoroughly" presented to the men, East declared.

"I promised I would do that, and I intend to do so," the union leader said. "In the event of rejection we hope to resume the mediation sessions immediately."

Suit by the union for an injunction against enforcement of the King-Thompson act is pending before Circuit Judge Robert L. Aronson.

A 38-page brief supporting its contention that the Public Service Co. is engaged in interstate commerce within the meaning of federal legislation, and is thus subject to federal laws in the matter of labor relations, was filed yesterday by the union. The brief argues that the King-Thompson act is an unconstitutional attempt to infringe on the federal government. The brief also stressed the right of the union to engage in a peaceful strike in support of wage demands.

CREDIT UNIONS ARE PRAISED FOR SPIRITUAL BENEFITS

Credit unions, by helping their members handle budget problems, contributed to their spiritual as well as their material well being, the Rev. Dr. C. Oscar Johnson, of Third Baptist Church, told members of the St. Louis Chapter of Credit Unions at a banquet at Hotel Jefferson last night.

More than 1000 credit union officers and members attended the dinner, which commemorated the 107th anniversary of the founding of credit unions in Germany.

Paul J. Roberts, managing director of the Missouri Credit Union League, presented awards of merit to W. H. Dunkin, William E. Shine and Alvin Baumann, all of St. Louis, for their years of service to credit unions.

Reserve Board Unveils System On Study of Slump and Boom

'Flow-of-Funds' Procedure of National Accounts Gives Clues on Economic Ups and Downs.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (AP)—The Federal Reserve Board today unveiled a new national bookkeeping system designed to help penetrate the mysteries of how and why ecomonic ups and downs take place.

It is called "a flow-of-funds system of national accounts," and has been nearly 20 years in development.

It involves periodic publication of economic data in a form that, for one thing, may provide an answer to a hot political question — whether a tax cut that lowers business costs results eventually in benefits to consumers, or whether the man in the street is benefited most, by a tax cut that helps him directly.

For the first time, the new flow-of-funds account of what goes on in the labyrinth of the economy brings together both financial and non-financial detail in the one comprehensive study. Previous over-all economic accounts like the gross national product figures and national income statistics developed by the Department of Commerce have dealt more with what happened than with how it came to pass.

Detailed Records.

The new account records not only the fact that you bought a car, a house or a refrigerator; it also shows where you got the money for the down payment, how much of the transaction was on credit, who provided the credit, and how your purchase sent ripples of money and credit up and down the line.

It is calculated also to show what general developments take place after a tax cut. If the cut is mainly for individuals, the account would show what the public does with its increased income — whether savings or consumption increase, and in what type.

The new system takes a cross-fix on all transactions relating to the production and sale of goods and services, plus transactions that involve only the shifting of values, like sales of stocks and bonds, or other financial instruments for cash or credit.

A reserve Board staff task force, which began work in 1946, has set up flow-of-fund tables for all years beginning with 1939 through 1954. This work followed a pilot study by Prof. Morris A. Copeland of Cornell University, which began in 1936. Copeland's work was sponsored by the National Bureau of Economic Research and the Committee for economic Developmeent, with the co-operation of the Reserve Board.

Annual Report.

The Reserve Board said the tables will now be published annually, probably starting in August 1956, and eventually on a quarterly basis.

By studying the relation of movements of money and credit through the hands of consumers from 11 main kinds of transactions (payroll, tax refunds, investments, sales of goods and services, taxes, etc.) and comparing this with movements of money through other sectors of the economy, students can determine how consumer buying, saving and selling reacts on the rest of the economy.

Reserve Board officials said it is hoped that over a period of time the new flow-of-funds accounts, in conjunction with other economic reports, will throw a strong new light on how and why business booms and recessions develop, and how better to control them.

MAN WITH PISTOL NO MATCH FOR POLICEWOMAN

Policewoman Ellen Luley, displaying the Amazonian mettle of the police department's distaff side, yesterday stood her ground in the face of an armed man, drawing her revolver and taking him into custody.

Mrs. Luley, sister of Chief of Detectives James Chapman, was arriving for duty at the Page boulevard station when she heard cries for help coming from an automobile parked nearby. In the car were a man and a frightened woman, who shouted a warning to Mrs. Luley that her companion was armed.

"I'm prepared to play that game," the patrolwoman replied cooly, fishing her weapon out of her purse. The man, a Negro, meekly climbed out of the car and accompanied Mrs. Luley into the station. He gave his name as Robert Bledsoe, 5200 block of Cabanne avenue. The woman, Ruth Watson, complained he had threatened her. She got him to drive to the police station on a pretext, she said.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 22 (AP)—Effective Oct. 30, the price of the Sunday edition of the Courier-Journal will be 20 cents, a nickel increase.

10 TOWNS WANT POLICE TIED TO COUNTY FORCE

25 Others Show Interest in Deputy Plan, Member of Board Announces.

Ten cities and towns in St. Louis county have indicated they wish to have their policemen deputized as members of the County Police Department, Walter L. Metcalfe, chairman of the County Board of Police Commissioners, announced last night.

Metcalfe said 25 other municipalities have shown an interest in having their officers deputized, but have asked for further discussion of the proposed deputization program before reaching a decision.

Police chiefs and marshals of all municipalities have been invited to meet with the County Police Board on Nov. 1 to discuss the program in detail, Metcalfe said.

Hopes To Act 'Promptly'.

He added that the board hoped to proceed "very promptly" with the program after the meeting, but remarked that the commissioners would not approve a final version until they were satisfied that it suited "all of the qualifying municipalities that take part."

He declined to name the towns which have indicated they will participate.

Tentative standards and procedures for the program were approved by the board Sept. 7. Copies of the draft were sent to municipal police chiefs for their comment. Metcalfe said the response thus far has shown no criticism of the plan, but some requests for clarification of particular points.

Program Explained.

Under the program, municipal police could go into other communities when in "hot pursuit" of a fleeing suspect, and would not have their arrest authority limited to their city. Uniform crime reporting is another aim of the plan.

The County Police Board will hear next Thursday an appeal by former Patrolman Obren S. Koprivica of his dismissal on Sept. 2. Koprivica was involved in an altercation Aug. 27 with former Lt. Harris R. Haycraft Jr., who also was dismissed.

2 OR 3 MONTHS NEEDED TO TELL ABOUT PRESIDENT

down, and he complied cheerfully, repeating his statements.

3 Other Doctors Present.

He was flanked at the conference table by three other doctors attending the President —Maj. Gen. Howard M. Snyder, the President's personal physician; Col. Thomas W. Mattingly of Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, and Col. Byron E. Pollock of Fitzsimons Hospital. Both Col. Mattingly and Col. Pollock are heart specialists. Presidential Press Secretary James C. Hagerty also sat at the conference table.

The President, Dr. White said, "feels well." He has no symptoms of breathlessness or discomfort, and examination showed "nothing out of the way," the physician went on.

Mr. Eisenhower's blood pressure, pulse rate and rhythm, temperature, lungs "and all other parts of him seem to be doing all right—they're normal," Dr. White declared.

"His electrocardiogram now shows definite proof of the healing process."

Denies Report Quoting Doctor.

In this connection, Dr. White denied a report quoting Dr. Eugene Lepeschkin, an electrocardiogram expert as saying he had observed a "complication" some time ago in Mr. Eisenhower's cardiogram.

"Dr. Lepeschkin confirmed our impression of the slowness of the evolution of the electrocardiogram, which is common in coronary thrombosis," Dr. White said. He read part of a letter from Dr. Lepeschkin, in which the cardiogram specialist wrote:

"While during the first 10 days in the electrocardiogram counterpart of the healing process appeared delayed, it has now caught up with the time schedule."

Dr. White explained that slowness of evolutionary changes showing up on a cardiogram is by no means uncommon. "It has been miscalled a complication, while actually it's all part of the original disease, not a complication," he added.

Turning to Mr. Eisenhower's schedule for the next two weeks, Dr. White said the President probably would take some steps tomorrow and would do more walking as the week progressed. His doctors also will weigh him for the first time.

The week after next — the sixth week of his convalescence — "we expect that the President will be able to walk much more freely on one level—he will be quite mobile and we will dispense with the wheel chair most of the time."

During these weeks, Mr. Eisenhower will be able to continue his conferences with Cabinet members and other advisers, Dr. White said the meetings with Cabinet officers — there have been five thus far—have helped the President and he has stood (them) very well."

'Stairs' In Seventh Week.

In the seventh week of Mr. Eisenhower's recovery, beginning Nov. 5, "it is hoped that we may be able to try him out on a few stairs," Dr. White said.

"It may well be that during the middle or toward the end of the seventh week, the President will decide he is able to leave," the physician continued.

He said Mr. Eisenhower would have a voice in deciding when he is ready to leave the hospital, just as he has had some say in deciding how long he wants to sit up each day.

In effect, Dr. White ended speculation that some other place than Gettysburg might be Mr. Eisenhower's destination after he leaves the hospital.

Gettysburg, Dr. White said, would be his suggestion. It is the place Mr. Eisenhower likes and considers home, he pointed out.

Gen. Snyder asked for his Gen Snyder, asked for his be the choice. Later Snyder told reporters he thought Mr. Eisenhower might spend "one to three days" in Washington, at the White House, before going on to his farm.

Explains Recovery Stage.

At this point in Mr. Eisenhower's recovery "we've reached the stage where the scar (on the President's heart muscle) is pretty well established; it's getting hard," Dr. White said.

"But now the question is how the rest of the heart is taking it. The heart must become accustomed—that is why we need to know whether the heart has become enlarged."

To determine this, X-rays will be taken of the President's heart next week while he is standing up, Dr. White added.

On the subject of whether surgery is indicated at some later date to increase the amount of blood flowing to Mr. Eisenhower's heart, Dr. White had this to say:

"I'm in favor of attempts to bring more blood to the heart muscle deprived of blood by coronary narrowing, but surgery is still in the experimental stage."

Elaborating on this, the physician said he would not be in favor of surgery for the President "until I have more proof than I've received yet of its ultimate value."

"You have to remember that many patients with coronary thrombosis do very well without medicines or surgery, due to nature's own curative powers."

He said it was impossible to predict whether Mr. Eisenhower would suffer another attack. Many of his patients have gone 20 years without a recurrence, while "a good many" have suffered second attacks.

Asked whether Mr. Eisenhower was sitting up at this stage in his recovery as frequently as it had been predicted he would, Dr. White said the President was sitting up for as long a time as he himself wanted.

"It's perfectly all right so far as his heart's concerned for him to sit up all day, and he undoubtedly will sit up more," the physician said.

He said Mr. Eisenhower's recovery was now proceeding on schedule, and the fact that it was a little slow at first was not at all alarming but actually common in such cases.

The President, Dr. White said, has asked his doctors not to hurry his treatment, preferring to play it safe and avoid a relapse.

Dr. White was scheduled to leave here tomorrow morning for New Orleans, where he will attend a medical meeting. He said he would return in two weeks to make another check-up.

He was accompanied to the Denver White House by Col. Mattingly; Maj. John Eisenhower, the President's son, and Sherman Adams, chief presidential assistant.

The afternoon bulletin from the hospital said: "The President spent a quiet afternoon. He rested in his bed, napped and listened to music. His condition continues to progress satisfactorily without complications."

A Little Bit of Home Arrives for Eisenhowers.

DENVER, Oct. 22 (AP)—A little bit of home for President and Mrs. Eisenhower arrived today at Fitzsimons Army Hospital.

Presidential Press Secretary James C. Hagerty told reporters the Eisenhowers were "quite thrilled this morning to receive what Mrs. Eisenhower called a little piece of the Gettysburg (Pa.) farm"—roses and chrysanthemums from the flower garden, along with turnips, turnip greens, tomatoes, corn and green peppers.

Flowers and produce picked by the caretaker staff arrived by plane.

HARRIMAN CALLS FOR 90 PCT. FARM PRICE SUPPORTS

be dealt with— are temporary. Only between 2 and 3 per cent of the total production is surplus now and consumption is rising constantly.

"Our population is increasing by over 2,000,000 a year. There are 8,000,000 families making under $2000 a year. They and many others do not have an adequate diet and if we help them increase their incomes they will buy more and better food.

"I am convinced that our total national output can be raised 40 to 50 per cent in 10 years if we pursue the right policies. So, we can anticipate that our present surplus problem will disappear.

"The Republicans have used production payments to support the price of wool but have refused them elsewhere. These ought to be applied to certain perishables, where there is no other satisfactory way of supporting farm income, on a temporary basis during the present emergency. One place, it seems clear to me it ought to be applied is to hogs.

"When hog prices hit $14.40 a hundred it's long since time to act, beginning with an emergency purchase program. Instead, we are told the Secretary (of Agriculture) is waiting until the price gets close to $11.

Republicans, Harriman went on, are trying to blame the Democrats for what agriculture is up against.

"All I can says is this: The parity ratio for all products never fell below 100 per cent for any single year in Harry Truman's administration. Today it stands at 85.

"By contrast, the profits of the food processors were 17 per cent higher in the first quarter of this year than they had been a year before. And the farmer's share of the consumer's food dollar has fallen from 47 cents in 1952 to 40 cents."

In resolutions adopted at the closing session of the Midwest Democratic Conference, Secretary Benson was asked immediately to start a pork-buying program requiring processors to pay 90 per cent of parity to farmers. On today's market this would be $20 per hundredweight, or almost $6 above the current price.

Congress was asked to repeal the law on flexible supports and substitute payments of at least 90 per cent of parity "for at least basic family farm production." Extension of 90 per cent support also was asked for hogs, eggs, poultry, beef and milk. Extension of support to non-basic feed grains, soybeans and flaxseed at the same levels as basic commodities, with adjustments on the basis of their comparative feeding value to corn was urged.

Also indorsed was the suggestion for withdrawing from production certain lands to increase their fertility, and protecting by legislation the right of farmers to direct and administer their own programs "through democratically-elected farmer committees."

State Democratic Chairman Jake More of Iowa was elected chairman of the conference; Kenneth T. Anderson of Emporia, Kan., vice chairman; Mrs. Daphna Nygaard of Jamestown, N.D., secretary, and John J. Nangle of St. Louis, treasurer.

MAYOR TO BE SUBPENAED IN WELLSTON PROBE

inal plan was to have all officers fingerprinted.

"I'm wondering whether the county police are capable of making a check of my men," he said. Then he recalled the dismissal of Lt. Harris R. Haycraft Jr. from the county police department last month after it developed that Haycraft had not mentioned his conviction on a common assault charge when he applied for a job.

Garnholz and Albert E. DuBois, county police superintendent, maintained that it was right for them to have custody of the patrolman, who had been sought for two days, since Wellston authorities had not questioned him at the outset of the case.

engine," Thomas wrote.

Westinghouse disclosed to the Post-Dispatch Oct. 9 that three main troubles were encountered in developing the engine: Fuel consumption was too great for the plane, the compressor section proved troublesome, and the gear box portion of the engine starter was unsatisfactory.

Meanwhile, the House military operations subcommittee will start hearings here Monday on the Demon program. Chairman Chet Holifield (Dem.), California, said 18 witnesses are scheduled to testify.

Witnesses who have been invited to appear at the hearings include Navy Secretary Thomas; J. S. McDonnell, president of McDonnell Aircraft Corp.; Rear Adm. Lloyd Harrison (ret.), former deputy and acting chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics and now a vice president of McDonnell; and W. W. Smith, general manager of the Westinghouse gas turbine division at Kansas City, and his assistant, R. L. Wells.

In his letter to Senator Johnson, Secretary Thomas said a Westinghouse J-34 engine had an excellent record, "and the manufacturer promised to develop the J-40 with the thrust required by the F3H in time to meet the F3H production schedule." Contracts for the McDonnell plane and the Westinghouse engine were let in 1951 and 1952.

Late on Deliveries.

"The desired J-40 engine was not delivered on schedule," he went on. "This necessitated substitution of a J-40 with a 20 per cent lower thrust in late 1951, the only substitute then available at a time when the Navy was faced with an immediate need for an advanced fighter.

"It was recognized that the lower-thrust engine would lessen the performance of the F3H-1. However, to bridge the time gap until Westinghouse could develop the high-thrust J-40, steps were taken to permit testing the airframe. It was expected that these few planes could be back-fitted with high-thrust J-40s as soon as they became available. Low-thrust engines were ordered in late 1951, and deliveries began in January 1953."

Meanwhile, early in 1952 the manufacturer of the Allison began to redesign the J-71 to fit the F3H, Thomas continued.

"At the insistence of the Navy, meanwhile, Westinghouse continued efforts to improve the J-40 as to engine design, engineering characteristics and quality control," he said. "That was the situation when I assumed office.

"The desired high-thrust J-40 did not become a reality, and the Navy did not receive it for evaluation tests."

The Post-Dispatch reported on Sept. 27 that three crashes of F3H-1 planes had been attributed at least in part by investigators to failure of the Westinghouse J-40 engines to develop sufficient power or otherwise function properly.

EX-ST. LOUISAN KILLS SELF IN WOMAN'S HOME

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DENVER, Oct. 22—James E. Carter, a former St. Louisan, shot and killed himself today in the home of a married woman who refused to go out with him, police reported. The 29-year-old social worker and clerk shot himself in the head with a newly-purchased .22-caliber pistol.

Mrs. Jeanine Haley, 26, said she had had dates with Carter about four years ago in St. Louis before she was married. About a year ago, after her daughter was born, Carter began pestering her, she said.

The Haleys moved to Denver a month ago. Today Carter walked into the Haley apartment shortly after the husband left for work, she said. After asking Mrs. Haley to go out with him, he pulled out a pistol when she momentarily turned away and shot himself, she said.

CITY-COUNTY PLAN SIGNATURE DRIVE AT GOAL

Minimum Requirement Reached but Campaign Will Go On, Say Sponsors.

Collection of the minimum number of signatures required to compel selection of a freeholders' board to draft a plan for some sort of merger or governmental co-operation of St. Louis and St. Louis county was announced last night.

Petitions for the signatures were circulated by the Citizens' Committee for City-County Coordination Inc., headed by A. J. Cervantes and H. Jackson Daniel, who said efforts will be continued to obtain additional signatures to raise the total far above the minimum number.

Although the committee has the minimum number of needed signatures, it does not plan to file the petitions now, Cervantes and Daniel said.

"We are well aware of the fact that, as soon as the petitions are filed and certified, state law requires the naming of freeholders and the freeholders then have only one year in which to produce a plan for consideration of the voters," their joint statement said.

"Washington University, St. Louis University and our committee are in agreement that it will be highly beneficial if the freeholders are provided with the results of research and study before they begin their deliberations—and during that period."

Grant Sought.

The committee pointed out that the two universities are seeking a grant of money to finance a study of problems involved in a city-county governmental co-ordination plan.

"However, we do feel there should not be undue delay in obtaining the grant and organizing the research," the committee added.

"We are anxious to proceed because we believe that all the evidence, piling up day by day, points to the fact that co-ordination of county and city is desperately needed right now."

Study and research on the proposal should "not be so 'exhaustive' that years pass away, or the goal be an eventual plan so perfect that it meets with approval of every individual," the statement said, apparently in reply to a recent talk by Mayor Raymond R. Tucker, who cautioned against hasty moves for a city-county merger.

Petitions Held Up.

James E. Darst, executive secretary of the committee, told the Post-Dispatch his organization was withholding filing of the petitions only with the understanding that action along the lines desired by the committee would be taken soon.

"We don't intend to let this thing drag on for five years or so," he observed.

Selection of a freeholders board requires signatures of registered voters equal to 3 per cent of the total vote in the city and county in the last general election. The committee said about 11,300 signatures are needed from city voters and 6000 from county residents.

CITY TO SEEK MORE LIBERAL POLICE PENSIONS IN 1957

President I. A. Long of the Police Board announced yesterday legislation authorizing liberalized St. Louis police pensions will be sought in the 1957 session of the Missouri Legislature by the board of trustees of the Police Retirement System. Long was elected chairman of the pension board at its meeting Friday.

Long succeeds Chief of Police Jeremiah O'Connell, who was defeated for re-election to the board of trustees last month by Patrolman Cornelius Powers of the Page boulevard district. It is the first time that the pension board will be headed by someone other than the Chief of Police.

Long, an ex-officio member of the group which directs the pension system, said legislation will be sought to increase retirement benefits and reduce service time required to get pensions. A similar proposal was dropped in the 1953 Legislative session because the city's earnings tax had expired at that time, and another measure failed to pass last session when the police salary increase bill was given priority.

SHOW BY AFFTON PUPILS TO DEPICT U.N. ASSEMBLY

Pupils in the Affton school district will take part in a United Nations mock assembly starting at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at the Affton junior high school, McKenzie road north of Gravois road.

Some of the participants will be dressed in costumes of natives of the countries which they represent. Prizes will be awarded to winners in a poster and essay contest which was open to pupils of both elementary and high schools.

The event is sponsored by the League of Women Voters Affton discussion group.

RECITAL BY GUITARIST

Ray de la Torre, internationally-known guitar virtuoso, will give a recital here Oct. 31 at 8 p.m. at the City Art Museum. He is being presented in his first appearance here by a group of St. Louis students, teachers and appreciants of guitar music. Admission to the public will be free.

The guitarist, born in Havana, Cuba, has been recognized as a prodigy on the instrument since he was 10 years old. He made his United States debut in 1941.

PEREGRINE SOCIETY GETS $10,313 OF $50,000 GOAL

A total of $10,313 has been contributed since Sept. 10 in the annual fund campaign of the St. Louis Peregrine Society, Mrs. Jules F. Hensgen, chairman, announced yesterday.

Goal of the drive, which will continue through this month, is $50,000, to be used to continue 11 free services to home cancer patients of the St. Louis area. A 37 per cent increase in the case load of patients over 1954 has increase demands on the society, Mrs. Hensgen said.

Contributions have been solicited through a direct mail appeal to individuals, businesses and civic organizations.

LILLIAN CHESSEN PAROLED FROM KIDNAPING SENTENCE

Mrs. Lillian Chessen, sentenced to life imprisonment for her part in the 1933 kidnaping of August Luer, Alton banker and meat packer, has been granted a parole after serving 22 years, the Illinois Pardon and Parole Board reported last night.

Mrs. Chessen, one of eight persons convicted in the kidnaping, had been imprisoned at the Dwight (Ill.) reformatory for women. She is 72 years old.

Luer was held for $100,000 ransom by the group but was released uninjured. No ransom payment was made. He died in 1942.

SYMPHONY OPENS ITS 77TH SEASON

Golschmann, in 25th Year, Is Given Standing Ovation.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN

Vladimir Golschmann began his twenty-fifth season as conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra last night in Kiel Auditorium in the presence of a large and appropriately enthusiastic audience. The occasion also marked the beginning of the orchestra's 77th year of continuous activity and, as if that weren't enough to make the evening significant, the concert was also dedicated to the tenth anniversary of the United Nations.

The fanfare played by the orchestra, as Mr. Golschmann made his entrance, however, was addressed entirely to the conductor, as was the standing ovation from the audience. In other respects the concert was a standard, institutionalized curtain-raiser for a new season. The program was drawn from the tried-and-true repertory with the Brahms Fourth Symphony as the central work. This was where Mr. Golschmann came in; it was the Brahms Second Symphony that occupied a similar place on the first program he conducted when he began his first season a quarter of a century ago.

The orchestra he faced had suffered a considerable change in its personnel since the closing concert of last season; and the 20-odd new players were not yet thoroughly assimilated into a cohesive whole as of last evening. This is not to say that the standard of tone and precision will be substantially different. The string quality was generally warm and brilliant, and in Samuel Barber's "Adagio" and in the Prelude to Wagner's "Tristan" they sounded with a reassuring roundness, depth and singing resonance. Replacements in more exposed positions—first oboe and third horn—did not have much opportunity for extended demonstration of their merit.

It is to be assumed that a general tightening up will take place within the next week or so and that an optimum cohesiveness will prevail.

Conductor Golschmann started his listed program a broad, grandiose statement of the Bach C Minor Passacaglia as arranged by Respighi. This arrangement departs even more conspicuously from the organ texture of the original than Stokowski's transcription of the same; and the splashes of color that were imposed merely diverted attention from its grandeur of design. Even so Bach was still hard to suppress. It was still an impressive, affecting performance.

The Brahms E Minor was relaxed and prevailingly lyrical. That is to say, Conductor Golschmann kept the affective elements, such as the notable second subject of the Andante, well to the fore by making them consistently fluent and tender.

The Barber "Adagio" was beautifully poised. The "Tristan" Prelude and Liebestod were expansive and sufficiently sensuous. The proggram, which will be repeated this afternoon, was brought to a close with the three standard excerpts from "The Damnation of Faust" by Hector Berloiz.

And so began another season.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS CUT CLASS SIZE HERE TO 35.9

Pupils Are More Evenly Distributed, Hickey Says—32 Per Room Is Goal.

Average size of elementary classes in the St. Louis public schools has been reduced this year to 35.9 pupils, lowest in many years, Superintendent of Instruction Philip J. Hickey told the Post-Dispatch yesterday.

Equally important, if not more important, he said, is the fact that pupils are distributed more evenly than at any time in recent years.

Grade school classes had an average of 36.2 children each at the corresponding time in 1954, rising gradually in the school year to 38.8.

Some increase is expected in the present class size, but it will remain well below last year's and the relatively even distribution will remain, the superintendent said.

Three Factors.

Three factors, Hickey said, have been responsible for the decline: Redrawing of district boundaries with desegregation in the elementary grades, opening of 24 newly constructed classrooms and hiring 66 additional teachers. This permitted establishment of classes in some rooms that had been vacant.

The leveling of distribution is shown by the fact that only six of 122 schools have an average class size of more than 40, compared with 17 with more than 40 in a class last year.

This year's most crowded school is Cole branch, with an average of 41.7 pupils in each class. Last year, Curtis branch had the largest classes, averaging 49.4 children.

High population in some sections and barriers to boundary adjustments, such as heavily traveled streets and railroad tracks, made it impossible to avoid having classes larger than desirable in some cases, Hickey said.

Part of Program.

The reduction this year is part of a Board of Education program to decrease the class size by one pupil each year until an average of 32 pupils is reached, 34 in the fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grades and 30 in first, second and third grades.

Through further boundary changes and the opening of more new schools, Hickey said, the reduction plan will be continued with greatest emphasis on the schools with the largest classes.

Kindergartens are not included in listing of elementary class loads. They are operated with an average of 30 pupils each.

Elementary school enrollment this year is 72,446, including 9434 kindergartners, compared with 71,193 last year. The 1954 figure included 9378 kindergartners.

Until 1942, the system had operated for many years with an average of 42 pupils in a room. Since then, efforts to reduce the load have been made, although the decline has not been steady.

ARMY DISCHARGES EX-M'CARTHY AID, CPL. DAVID SCHINE

FT. DIX, N. J., Oct. 22 (AP) —G. David Schine, whose early Army career led to the much-publicized Army-McCarthy controversy and a stormy televised Senate hearing, completed a two-year service hitch today with little fanfare.

The 28-year-old hotel heir told Fort Dix officers he did not want to be interviewed or have his picture taken, but he accepted a reporter's offer of a ride to an airstrip at Pemberton near the fort, and from there piloted a private plane to New York.

The former unpaid consultant to Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (Rep.), Wisconsin, was a specialist third class (corporal) with the military police. He volunteered the information that he flew "a lot" during his 11 months with the Seventy-first Military Police Co. at Ft. Richardson, Alaska.

Schine, a personal friend of Roy Cohn, chief counsel of the Senate permanent investigations subcommittee when it was headed by McCarthy, became an unpaid consultant to the committee at the age of 25. After his induction into the Army as a draftee on Nov. 4, 1953, the Army claimed McCarthy and his aids had brought improper pressure on the Pentagon to give Schine preferential treatment. The McCarthy camp replied Schine was used as a "hostage" to force the committee to go easy in its inquiry of alleged Comunists in the Army.

NEW YORK DISCONTINUES INSURANCE LOYALTY QUIZ

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (AP)— The state superintendent of insurance has discontinued "pending further study" use of a controversial questionnaire that required applicants for brokers' and agents' licenses to declare any connections with subversive organizations.

Leffert Holz said yesterday that, among other things, "I wish to reconsider . . . whether the policy involved is not one which should require legislative sanction before adoption."

Holz disclosed the "loyalty program" on Wednesday, asserting that holders of insurance licenses must be "trustworthy and competent." The move drew swift protest from the American Jewish Congress and the CIO Insurance Workers of America.

$2,350,000 SCHOOL BOND VOTE TUESDAY IN NORMANDY

Residents of the Normandy school district will vote next Tuesday on issuance of $2,350,000 in bonds for new construction and improvements to existing school buildings. Polls will be open from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The largest single project is construction of a new building at the present high school group, St. Charles and Lucas-Hunt roads, at a cost of $1,964,800. An addition would be built at the Bel-Ridge School, and fireproofing and miscellaneous work done at several other schools.

A two-thirds majority is needed for passage of the proposal. School officials estimate it would result in a tax increase of 20 cents for each $100 assessed valuation, which is $2.59 at present.

500 'Lost' Taxpayers Apply For Refunds During Week

1100 Names Printed Out of 3705 With Which Revenue Service Lost Contact.

More than 50 federal income taxpayers, "lost" by the Internal Revenue Service, applied last week for refunds due them following publication of their names in the Post-Dispatch starting last Sunday. A total of 1100 names have been printed, of 3705 "lost" taxpayers, and 200 more are published below.

Assistant Director Ernest M. Flinn of the eastern district of Missouri, said 438 persons applied in person at the refund office in the basement of the Federal Building, Twelfth boulevard and Market street, and about 65 applied by mail. They had abut $20,000 due them of the total of $136,000 in refund checks on 1953-54 taxes waiting to be delivered.

Refunds raige from 2 cents to $928. Largest amount claimed Friday was $300, by Walter Bawol, 32 Jean drive, Florissant. There hal been a mistake in the address on his return.

TRAIN BLOWN UP, 11 KILLED

RANGOON, Oct. 22 (AP)—A band of 300 rebels blew up an armored train 90 miles north of the Burmese capital today and killed 11 people. Seven of the casualties were policemen.

Three policemen were killed in another rebel raid on an outpost near Toungoo, 200 miles north of Rangoon.

CIO AUTO UNION'S STRIKE FUND SOARS TO $27,564,490

DETROIT, Oct. 22 (AP) — Strikes cost the CIO United Auto Workers Union almost $2,000,000 in September. But the expenditure didn't dent the UAM's big strike fund, which took in $6,154,294 in the 30-day period against actual costs of $1,940,387.

As a result, the UAW reported its national strike fund stood at $27,564,000 on Sept. 30.

The huge fund was built up principally through a fourth-month boost in union dues, raised from $2.50 to $7.50 a month. Dues now have reverted to the smaller figure.

Prolonged strikes in which the the union still is involved include the 18-month-old walkout at the Kohler Co. in Kohler, Wis., and the Perfect Circle Corp. stoppage which began at New Castle, Ind., July 25.

In a report to the membership the UAW said that 901,122 out of its 1,500,000 members now are covered by "Detroit pattern" contracts. Under the layoff pay plan, workers are guaranteed 65 per cent of their take-home pay for the first month of idleness and 60 per cent for the next 22 weeks.

Fire Damages Dickens House.

3 ADMIT STARTING FIRE TO ANNOY GIRLS

Students Say Blaze in Park Plaza Hotel Was a 'Prank.'

Three St. Louis University students admitted starting a fire in a Park Plaza Hotel corridor early yesterday as a "prank" to annoy three Villa Duchesne preparatory school girls, who had refused to admit the youths to their room, police reported.

Members of the police arson squad who arrested the youths identified them as James J. Raymond Jr., 6327 Bancroft avenue; Aderton Primm Samuel, 6015 Cabanne place, and John Thomas Peistrup, 1227 Arch terrace, Richmond Heights.

Raymond is a sophomore, the other two are freshmen. They were booked suspected of arson, and police said they will apply for warrants.

The three were arrested on descriptions furnished by the mother of one of the girls, who with her husband occupied an adjoining third-floor room. The daughter had invited two other girls to stay with her.

Her mother saw the youths when they mistakenly pressed the door buzzer of her room. She warned them she would call police after seeing them press the buzzer of the girls' room. Then they moved away.

The students said they opened a broom closet in the corridor, saw some cans on the floor and poured the contents of one on the floor in front of the door of the girls' room "so the stuff would spread under the door and get a rise out of them."

This didn't get the desired results, so one of the youths dropped a match on the solution, they said. It flared up and the youths fled after vain efforts to stamp out the flames. They drove several blocks west, to DeBaliviere avenue, and one of them telephoned a warning to the hotel switchboard operator and hung up.

The operator sent a house detective to the third floor and he found the corridor rug burning and the door and walls scorched. There was an overturned can labeled turpentine nearby. He put out the fire with an extinguisher and called police.

FIRST DONATIONS TO UNITED FUND SHOW INCREASES

Contributors Adding More Than 11.7 Per Cent Requested by Drive Leaders.

Early contributors to the United Fund have increased amounts given to last year's Community Chest campaign by more than the 11.7 per cent requested by leaders of this year's campaign, William A. McDonnell, general chairman, announced yesterday. This year's goal is $8,245,925.

The Wabash Railroad gave a corporation gift of $25,000, a 25 per cent increase over the 1954 contribution. An additional $21,205 was received from Wabash affiliates, making the grand total corporate gift $46,205.

The first company turning in a complete report for employe and firm contributions was the Visinet Mill of the Bemis Bros. Bag Co. The total was $5080, a 55 per cent increase over last year's $3279. Employes include members of Local 953, CIO Textile Workers.

Corporation gifts were received from two other firms, as follows: The Missouri Portland Cement Co., $15,000, a 29 per cent increase, and American Can Co., $5000, a 25 per cent rise.

U.S. GRAND JURY TO INQUIRE INTO OIL PROMOTION

Many St. Louisans Invested in Scheme Under Scrutiny in Danville, Ill.

An extensive investigation into a $5,000,000 oil well promotion scheme in which many St. Louisans invested will be undertaken this week by a United States grand jury meeting at Danville, Ill., the Post-Dispatch was told yesterday.

The grand jury will begin the inquiry Tuesday. About 85 witnesses, including many from the St. Louis area, have been subpenaed for the investigation, which is expected to last about two weeks. Thousands of midwesterners are reported to have lost money as a result of the promotion.

The case was referred by the Securities and Exchange Commission to the Justice Department some time ago, it was learned, after an investigation into whether federal laws regulating sales of securities had been violated.

Two Texans sold the leases in the period from 1949 to 1952, it was learned. The leases were for wells to be drilled in Texas, Colorado and Kentucky.

The promoters received the $5,000,000 the Post-Dispatch was told, from business men, wealthy farmers and professional men. They were said to have operated by mail and telephone, and also by holding investor conferences in large cities.

Amounts received from the investors ranged from $5000 to $50,000. They were promised a well producing 100 barrels a day, it was reported, and were told if the well called for in the lease did not produce, the lease would be assigned to another well which would.

Among the witnesses called are representatives of the SEC, it was said.

United States Attorney Clifford M. Raemer, who is directing the investigation, refused to comment on the inquiry. The grand jury is expected to report about Nov. 4.

MISSOURI BASIN COMMITTEE TO GIVE REPORT NOV. 2

OMAHA, Nebr., Oct. 22 (AP)—The Missouri Basin Inter Agency Committee will give its annual report at the next committee meeting to be held at Minot, N.D., Nov. 2, Secretary Charles A. Cocks said yesterday.

Other items on the agenda include discussion of the operation of Missouri river main stem reservoirs which now number four, the Garrison diversion and conservancy districts in both the Garrison dam area of North Dakota and in Colorado.

The committee is made up of representatives of federal agencies and states involved in the over-all development plan for the Missouri river basin. This will be the eighty-third meeting of the committee.

U.S. TO DEMAND MORE PROGRESS ON INTEGRATION

Industrialists Called to Meeting — Official Says Government 'Means Business.'

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (UP) — The Administration hopes that a meeting with high business officials next Tuesday will advance its campaign against racial discrimination in employment.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon will preside over the meeting. Cabinet members, the secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force and members of the Atomic Energy Commission will attend.

The invited guests are the presidents or board chairmen of 65 firms. They represent the largest Government contractors, and some small ones, from most major industries and all areas of the country.

The conference, as stated by Nixon recently, is "for the single purpose of exchanging ideas on effective methods of achieving the ultimate elimination of discrimination in American industry."

U.S. Means Business.

According to one Administration official, the conference is to let the industrialists know that "the Government means business" in its policy of requiring contract clauses prohibiting employment discrimination based on race, creed, color, religion or national origin.

The Administration hopes in return to get the views of the industrialists on discrimination problems and their attitudes toward solving them. For this reason, it was said, the conference is being held behind closed doors.

The meeting is sponsored by the President's Committee on Government Contracts, a little-publicized group of Government and private officials charged with the responsibility of seeing that non-discrimination clauses in Government contracts are carried out.

Nixon at Helm.

The committee is headed by Nixon with Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell as vice chairman. Its members include Mrs. Helen Rogers Reid, a member of the board of directors of the New York Herald Tribune; John A. Roosevelt, son of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt and president of Lee Limited, New York; Ivan L. Willis, vice president of the International Harvester Co., Chicago; Fred Lazarus Jr., president of the Federated Department Stores, Cincinnati; George Meany, president of the AFL; Walter P. Reuther, CIO president; James N. Nabrit Jr., secretary of Howard University here, and John Minor Wisdom, New Orleans attorney.

The committee, set up by President Eisenhower in August 1953, was given authority to investigate complaints of job discrimination at plants doing business with the Government and to advise Government contracting agencies on how to enforce non-discrimination clauses. A predecessor committee under the Democratic Administration had power only to study the job discrimination problem.

Administration officials say the difficulties of detecting discrimination and of enforcing non-discrimination are such that the Administration and the committee feel more progress may be possible through "education" and "persuasion."

Killed Testing Firecracker.

NETCONG, N.J., Oct. 22 (UP)—The owner of a fireworks company was killed yesterday while testing a new type firecracker. Police said William La Russo, 59 years old, owner of the La Russo Fireworks Co. in Roxbury township was hurled 20 feet in the air and killed testing a four-inch salute in an athletic field near the plant.

CITIZENS MOVE TO CUT COST OF TRANSIT SURVEY

Engineers to Be Instructed to Confine Intensive Study to City and County.

Steps to reduce the cost of a projected study of mass transportation problems in the St. Louis area have been taken by the citizens' metropolitan transit committee, it was disclosed yesterday when the committee made public its specifications for the study.

Private engineers who will be commissioned to analyze the transit needs and draft an improvement program will be directed to confine their intensive study to the city and St. Louis county. In the outlying areas of Franklin, Jefferson and St. Charles counties in Missouri and Madison and St. Clair counties in Illinois, the survey will call for less detailed analysis.

In another economy move, the consultants will be asked to use travel data collected by the Missouri State Highway Department and studies made by local agencies such as the planning commissions of St. Louis and St. Louis county.

May Require Two Years.

It probably will require two years to make the survey and map the improvement program, said James E. Crowe, committee chairman. Before the scope of the survey was determined, preliminary conferences with 11 engineering firms produced cost estimates ranging as high as $650,000. Now that some of the requirements have been modified, lower cost proposals are expected.

The committee will present its report on specifications to Mayor Raymond A. Tucker and St. Louis County Supervisor Luman F. Matthews in a conference at City Hall Friday at 2 p.m.

Tucker has stated that the city is in position to defray half of the cost of the study, Crowe reported. Financing arrangements by the county are yet to be made.

The specifications call for a comprehensive program to meet the transportation needs of the district comprising the city and St. Louis county. The consultants not only are to recommend measures to be taken in the immediate future, but are to forecast land use, population distribution and travel patterns for the years 1965 and 1975, and plan stage developments for periods of 10 and 20 years.

The final report is to include an independent analysis "from one or more reputable investment banking houses" as to the financial feasibility of the program to be recommended.

To Evaluate Present Service.

The engineers will evaluate the facilities and the transportation service now provided by St. Louis Public Service Co., St. Louis County Transit Co. and V-K Bus Line (the latter in its Jefferson Barracks operations).

A completely new survey of present travel patterns is to be made in the form of a combined transit and automobile origin-destination study. Home interviews are to be conducted at 17,500 dwellings in the city and St. Louis county, and these are to be supplemented by roadside interviews at bridges and on principal highways, by questioning people at large manufacturing plants and government buildings, and by interviews at transit loading areas in outlying as well as central business districts.

The engineers will study the feasibility of some form of rapid transit—railroad, subway, monorail, helicopter or belt conveyor through a downtown tunnel—estimate construction cost and parking requirements and analyze the possibility of subsidization.

Ownership Analysis.

One section of their report is to outline relative merits and disadvantages of various types of transit ownership and operation—for example, municipal ownership and operation; ownership and operation by a public transit authority; municipal or authority ownership with private operation; private ownership and operation with limitation of earnings; full-fledged private ownership.

This section will summarize other cities' experiences with various forms of ownership and operation, financing methods and costs, and arrangements for meeting deficits.

Co-ordination of present facilities, rearrangement of routes, establishment of new routes, the question of giving busses exclusive use of curb lanes, perimeter parking recommendations—these are some of the related problems to be studied.

The committee has worked for eight months, conferring with engineering firms and obtaining their views on the form the survey should take. In drawing up the specifications they had the help of Henry P. Ingebritsen, city engineer, and Eugene Baughman, planning director of the County Planning Commission.

3 ST. LOUIS ARTISTS OPEN BLOOMINGTON (ILL.) SHOW

Menges is represented by six gouache paintings, or opaque water colors, and the other artists by six transparent water colors each. Conway is advanced painting instructor at Washington University. Harmon teaches art at Ladue High School and Menges at University City High School.

TRUMAN PUT LID ON REPORT, SAYS GEN. WEDEMEYER

He Contradicts Denial by Ex-President That Far East Survey Was Suppressed.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22 (AP)—Retired Army Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer yesterday flatly disagreed with an assertion by former President Truman that the controversial Wedemeyer report was not suppressed.

Truman told the Chicago Executives Club Sept. 9 that the report on the Far East "was not withheld, but there was not a bit of common sense in it, so it could not be used."

One section of the report on China was released by the State Department in August 1949. The full report was not released until May 1, 1951. It contained recommendations on Korea and other matters pertaining to the Far Eastern area.

In an address before the Central Supply Association yesterday, Wedemeyer said:

"I never accuse anyone of deliberately lying, but I can state categorically that I did receive written orders from Mr. Truman, through the then Secretary of State, George C. Marshall, that my report on the Far East in 1947 not be disclosed to anyone until further instructions.

"Needless to say, I complied with those orders. It was two years before the Government released the report for publication. Of course, Mr. Truman's statement to the effect that the report did not make common sense is a matter of personal opinion."

Wedemeyer conducted a two-month survey of the Far East at the direction of Marshall and submitted his report Sept. 9, 1947.

"Don't forget," Wedemeyer said yesterday, that Mr. Truman and his predecessor, Mr. Roosevelt, withheld more important information; for example, the commitments or agreements made at Teheran, Yalta and Potsdam, and numerous other examples."

BOY, 14, WANTS BOOK ON HOW TO BE DELINQUENT

Mrs. Wilson Miller reported yesterday that a 14-year-old boy one day last week came to her desk at the St. Louis County Library, 6814 Natural Bridge road, and asked for a book on juvenile delinquency.

"We have no books about juvenile delinquency for children," she said, "only for adults."

"Oh," the boy replied, quickly, "I don't mean books about juvenile delinquency. I want one that shows me how to be one."

The same boy, undaunted by being denied this request, returned next day to the library, Mrs. Miller said, and asked if she had a book on "loaded dice."

COURT CANCELS PRINCESS'S BEQUEST TO CABINET MAKER

STUGGART, Germany, Oct. 22 (AP)—A German state court has ruled that Crown Princess Cecilie of Prussia was "probably mentally disturbed" when she bequeathed 250,000 marks ($59,500) in jewelry and other valuables to a former cabinet maker. It ruled her two wills invalid.

Otto Groha, 42-year-old postwar confidant of the princess, thus lost his suit against Prince Louis Ferdinand, head of the house of Hohenzollern, for the valuables willed to him by the Prince's mother.

Under the ruling, Groha, who was promoted to court councillor by the Princess, also must return a 52,000-mark ($12,376) diadem and 65,000 marks ($15,232) he received for an emerald she gave him before her death on May 6 last year at the age of 67.

STEALS AUTO EVEN THOUGH IT CONTAINS A PASSENGER

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 22 (AP)—A young thief stole a car, complete with an 86-year-old passenger, yesterday.

Mrs. Lillian Hansen left her mother, Mrs. Ida Hungerford, in the front seat of her car parked in the mission business district. A young man leaped in the automobile and drove it off.

After a few blocks the car stalled. The young man calmly stepped out, hailed a passerby and asked him to try to start the car. As the passerby obliged the thief disappeared.

COMMAND AREA SET IN FORMOSA, U.S. INDICATES

Island Liaison Center's Name Changed — Chinese Prefer Use of Taiwan.

TAIPEI, Formosa, Oct. 22 (AP)—The United States today indicated, quietly but unmistakably, that it has built up an organization instantly ready to assume all the functions of a battle command headquarters in the event of hostilities in the Formosa area.

The indication came in the form of an announcement by V. Adm. Alfred M. Pride, commander of the United States Seventh Fleet, that on Nov. 1 the name of the Formosa Liaison Center will be changed to the United States Taiwan Defense Command.

Pride also heads the liaison center, an organization representing all branches of the United States armed forces on Formosa. It works in close cooperation with Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist Chinese high command.

Phide gave two reasons for the name change:

1. Because of "the role played by the United States through the mutual defense treaty signed last March here in Taipei. Among other things, the treaty guarantees United States protection of Formosa and the nearby Pescadores.

2. "The increasing use of the name Taiwan in lieu of Formosa." The Nationalists prefer the Chinese name Taiwan, which means Terraced Bay, to the Portuguese Formosa, which means beautiful. Portuguese seamen named the island in the Sixteenth Century.

Other United States organizations here also plan to substitute Taiwan for Formosa.

The United States Military Assistance Advisory Group, Formosa, which is more commonly known as MAAG Formosa, will become MAAG Taiwan.

The radio station sponsored by MAAG has begun calling itself the Voice of MAAG Taiwan instead of the Voice of MAAG Formosa.

JET TRANSPORT FROM KANSAS CITY' IS HERE IN 21 MINS.

A jet transport plane averaged about 680 miles an hour last Sunday when it flew from Kansas City to St. Louis in 21 minutes in the course of a cross-country trip during which a speed record for airliners was set, the manufacturer, Boeing Airplane Co., announced yesterday.

By comparison, actual flight time after reaching the assigned altitude is about 48 minutes for the fastest conventional four-engine airliners now assigned to the 238-mile route. The jet plane, a Boeing 707, passed over St. Louis at an altitude of 35,000 feet.

It continued without stopping, passing over Cincinnati 29 minutes after leaving St. Louis and reaching Washington in one hour and nine minutes. Washington is 712 air miles from St. Louis, and present commercial four-engine planes take about two hours and 38 minutes to cover the distance.

The Boeing 707 flight started at Seattle and took only two hours and 49 minutes to reach St. Louis, a distance of 1500 miles. There is no airline service on that route at present. Deliveries of the plane to Pan American World Airways are to start in 1958.

300 WORKERS WALK OUT AT IDAHO ATOMIC PLANT

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho, Oct. 22 (AP)—Three hundred workers at the Atomic Energy Commission's experimental station in eastern Idaho went on strike today, protesting against the long distances they are required to drive to reach the remote plant.

The AEC national reactor testing station is on the Big Lost river desert of eastern Idaho, about 45 miles west of Idaho Falls and 20 miles east of Arco, the nearest community.

The strike was called by the CIO Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union against the Phillips Petroleum Co., an operating contractor for three installations at the plant.

Average hourly pay for Phillips employes was listed as $2.36. OCAW headquarters in Denver said the strike was over the issue of what the union calls "isolation pay" to cover two hours travel time for an average 100 miles daily to and from work at the plant.

TWO IMMIGRANT FAMILIES DUE IN CITY WEDNESDAY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22—Two immigrant families destined for St. Louis are among 1101 persons scheduled to dock at New York City Wednesday, arriving under the Refugee Relief Act, on the Navy transport General Langfitt, the State Department announced.

Matthias Becker, a Romanian laborer, is accompanied by his wife, Eva, and their two sons, Johann, 21 years old, and Nikolaus, 16. Their sponsor is Nick Becker, 4848 Goethe avenue, and their indorsing agency is the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Gerhard Knobelsdorf, a German painter, is bringing his wife Charlotte, and their two children, Claudia, 14, and Ursel, 7. Mrs. A. D. Brune, 6456 Eichelberger street, is listed as their sponsor. The indorsing agency is the Lutheran Refugee Service.

3 KILLED AS AUTO LEAVES HIGHWAY NEAR HERMANN

Three persons were killed yesterday when the automobile in which they were riding ran off State Highway 100 near Hermann, Mo., and struck a tree. Hermann is in Franklin county, about 65 miles west of St. Louis.

The dead, all of New Haven, Mo., were Francis Luecke, 34 years old; Harold Baer, 22, and Miss LaVerne Vollersten, 16.

MAN WHO SHOT WIFE SAYS HE WAS JEALOUS

Berkeley Woman Had Refused to Sign Complaint on Earlier Call to Police.

Herschel O. Courtney, a carpenter, was held yesterday in jail at Clayton in the shooting of his wife early yesterday at their home, 5945 Dowling avenue, Berkeley. Mrs. Courtney, shot in the back of the head, was in St. Louis County Hospital.

Chief of Police James Webber said Courtney admitted the shooting and said jealousy was to blame.

"I was crazy jealous of her," he quoted Courtney as saying. "We were jealous of each other. Jealousy caused me to do this."

A warrant charging Courtney with assault with intent to kill was issued by Magistrate Raymond I. Harris and his bond set at $25,000. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Oct. 28.

Courtney admitted the shooting, in a signed statement. In it he said he and his wife had been scuffling. He did not say the pistol was fired in the course of the scuffle, but said he did not know how it was discharged.

Police were called to the house by Mrs. Courtney about 1:30 a.m., Chief Webber said. When they arrived she told them she and her husband had gotten home from a tavern at midnight, gone to bed and then arose after an argument started.

She said she wanted Courtney locked up, Chief Webber continued, explaining he had a gun and had threatend several times to shoot her. However, when police asked if she would sign a complaint against him she refused and told them to "forget it," the chief said.

Courtney denied he had a pistol when police questioned him then, Chief Webber said, and when they asked Mrs. Courtney for the weapon she replied it was not in the house. Police later learned it was kept in a paper bag in a closet.

The officers left, and two hours later were called back by neighbors when Courtney ran from the house shouting he had shot his wife. When police arrived they found Mrs. Courtney lying on the floor of the bedroom, partly undressed.

Courtney readily admitted the shooting, Chief Webber said. A .45 caliber automatic pistol was on the floor about four feet from Mrs. Courtney. Courtney said he fired at her from close range as she faced him, Chief Webber said, but did not explain how she was struck in the back of the head. The bullet passed through her head.

Mrs. Courtney is 54 years old, her husband 49. They have been married less than a year, police said.

GEORGE A. BALL DIES; MADE FORTUNE ON JARS, RAILROADS

MUNCIE, Ind., Oct. 22 (AP) —George A. Ball, who built one of America's fortunes out of fruit jars and railroad stocks, died today after a three-week illness. He was 92 years old.

He was the last of five brothers who made the mason jar standard equipment for housewives' canning before the turn of the century.

Even before he finally became president of Ball Brothers Co. at 82, he had become nationally known in 1935 as a financier who controlled a huge railroad empire that included four major lines. Ball put up most of the $3,000,000 to buy up the stocks which Cleveland's Van Sweringen brothers had used as collateral for $48,000,000 in loans, when the brothers' 3-billion-dollar rail empire was hard hit by the depression.

After both M. J. and O. P. Van Sweringen died within a year, Ball found himself in control of the Chesapeake & Ohio, Nickel Plate, Erie and Missouri Pacific railroads, besides vast holdings in terminals, warehouses and coal companies. In 1937, Ball sold the rail securities at 100 per cent profit to a group led by Robert R. Young, now head of the New York Central.

HOUSE GROUP WILL HEAR TUCKER IN POLICE INQUIRY

Mayor Raymond R. Tucker will be one of three witnesses who will appear Nov. 1 before the Missouri House committee investigating the St. Louis Police Department, State Representative Jennie S. Walsh, chairman, told the Post-Dispatch yesterday.

Mrs. Walsh said the others will be Judges David W. Fitz-Gibbon and Louis Comerford of the Court of Criminal Correction. The meeting will start at 8 p.m. at Hotel Kingsway, and will be the fourth hearing held by the group.

Mayor Tucker will be questioned on the organization of and possible changes needed in the police board, Mrs. Walsh said. Among the latter points will be the advisability of auditing police board expenditures by a city official, and whether a return to home rule of the board is indicated. The judges will be asked about trends in crime, especially in younger age groups, and legislation needed to combat it.

Benson to Give Policy Talk.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 22 (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson will make a "major policy address" in Syracuse on Dec. 5, it was announced today, speaking to the Metropolitan Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, Inc. The agency is a federation of 66 dairy farmer co-operatives.

ACTION EXPECTED ON TAX SCANDALS

Indictments Likely to Be Sought When Grand Jury Reconvenes Tuesday.

A climax is approaching in the protracted investigation by the federal grand jury into tax scandals in the Truman Administration, the Post-Dispatch was told yesterday.

Indictments are expected to be sought soon after the jury reconvenes Tuesday. More witnesses will be heard this week.

Wyllys Newcomb, head of a Justice Department team supervising the investigation, is scheduled to return to St. Louis tomorrow from his home in upper New York state.

The investigation has been carried on by a succession of grand juries over the last four to five years. The inquiry was broadened last year to include several other cities besides St. Louis. A federal grand jury in Omaha, Nebr., also opened an inquiry.

Tre grand jury here is looking into circumstances surrounding the Government's income-tax case against Irving Sachs, president of Shu-Stiles Inc., wholesale shoe brokerage firm, who was fined $40,000 on his plea of guilty in 1951.

Theron Lamar Caudle, ousted former Assistant Attorney General, has testified before a congressional committee that Matthew Connelly, President Truman's appointment secretary, once intervened in behalf of Sachs with Government officials, Sachs was called as a witness before the grand jury 10 days ago.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (AP) —The American Political Science Association today announced an annual award of $500 to commemorate the work of the late Dr. Leon M. Birkhead, clergyman and founder in 1937 of Friends of Democracy.

SYMINGTON RETURNS FROM TEXAS TODAY

No Politics in Visit to Senate Leader Johnson, He Insists.

JOHNSON CITY, Tex., Oct. 22 (AP)—Senator Lyndon B. Johnson (Dem.), Texas, recuperating from a heart attack, had Senator Stuart Symington (Mem.), Missouri, as his weekend guest on the LBJ ranch near here today. Both insisted there was no politics involved.

Symington and Johnson hoped to find time for some bird hunting in the hill country near here before the Missouri Senator returns home tomorrow.

Dr. W. C. Whaley Jr., a young Johnson City physician who has been supervising Johnson's convalescence, said in an interview that he has not seen anything that would keep the Senate majority leader from "going back to work."

Johnson has been hoping to resume an active role in January and the latest reports have buoyed his spirits..

Johnson and Symington attended a dinner in Austin last night honoring Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, former Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare in President Eisenhower's Cabinet. They went to the Rice-Texas University football game today.

Dr. Whaley said that Johnson had come through from the attack suffered in July with his heart not enlarged and with "nothing to tell that he had had a coronary occlusion except the cardiogram tracings."

Asked if Johnson—who likes to operate at high speed — would be able to slow down if he returns to his post as Senate majority leader, Dr. Whaley replied:

"I would say that most everybody comes up with the decision that he has been doing things too fast and that he can do them in the future with less fuss and furor. I think Senator Johnson has pretty well gotten that idea."

There was considerable speculation over what if any political significance there was in Symington's visit.

Symington insisted there was none. George Reedy, Johnson's administrative assistant, said that it was "purely social." Symington, he said, has been a regular visitor in the past at the LBJ ranch.

In recent weeks, such political figures as Adlai Stevenson, Speaker Sam Rayburn and several Texas Democratic leaders have been visitors at the ranch.

Asians Give Signs of Angling For Greater Flow of U.S. Capital Conference of American Business Men and Oriental Diplomats Discloses Plans to Develop Better Economic Relations.

By GEORGE H. HALL
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22—Asian fear of United States power and intentions and American fear of political and economic instability in Asia still hamper the flow of private capital into the Far East, but there are signs that Asians are trying to provide a better climate for iinvestment and that American business intends to push ahead in the Orient. These facts became evident during a two-day conference of the Far East-American Council of Commerce and Industry, a private association of American firms organized to promote the development of economic relations with Asia.

The council is the only American trade group dealing exclusively with Asia and is said to be the only forum in this country in which American business men and officials can sit down and discuss mutual problems with their Asian counterparts.

Organizations such as the council can exert a significant influence because the American public appears to be much more interested in political and military relations with the Orient than with trade. Americans in the Far East constantly hear complaints from United States business men that this country does not go far enough in helping them open and maintain markets. The American attitude often is contrasted with that of the British, whose embassies and consulates are at the disposal of roving British entrepreneurs.

Asian Diplomats Attend.

Attending the council sessions yesterday and Thursday were leading American industrialists, bankers and business men; officials of the State Department in Washington, and ambassadors or other representatives of India, Pakistan, Ceylon, Thailand, Burma, Indonesia, Malaya, the Philippines and Japan.

One of the early speakers, Norbert A. Bogdan, president of the American Overseas Finance Corp., warned against generalizing about the diverse countries of Asia simply because they happen to be in the area called "Asia." Comments of other participants in the discussions bore him out. There were generalizations, nevertheless, and some of them ran counter to popular notions.

Question of Communism.

For example, Arthur K. Watson, president of the International Business Machines World Trade Corp., declared:

"I have heard it said on the part of some observers of the postwar Asian scene that unless rapid progress is made in raising living standards, the free peoples of the Far East will turn increasingly to Communism as a solution to their economic problems.

"This interpretation seems to me unduly alarmist. No free people have ever welcomed a Communist regime; moreover, only a modicum of knowledge concerning the true nature of Communist rule is sufficient to demonstrate the false claims of the Russians. There are no shortcuts, Communist or otherwise, to economic advance. The free Asian leaders most certainly know this and they will, I am sure, see that their constituents are properly informed."

If Watson reversed a popular conception of the Communist danger in the orient, so did Ambassador Pote Sarasin of Thailand. The majority of Asians, particularly in the neutralist countries, deprecated the Communist threat. Sarasin said, however:

"The Southeast Asia Collective Defense Treaty (to which Thailand is a party) . . . is a recognition of the fact that Communism, as a political force, thrives best in an atmosphere of poverty, misery and ignorance. Here I think it is well to warn of a danger that is often overlooked.

Evolutionary Process.

"We have been accustomed to thinking of Communism in terms of violent overthrow of government by force or by aggression from the outside. But I think we should not underestimate the possibility of Communism as an evolutionary process, asserting itself by peaceful and democratic means.

"When the majority of people live near a subsistence level, there is always the chance, no matter how remote, of private property being voted out of office in favor of state ownership of everything in existence."

A somewhat unusual analysis was offered by Dr. Sjafruddin Prawiranegara, governor of the Bank of Indonesia and one of a handful of men who have guided the young republic of Indonesia since the revolutionary days of the 1940s. Jealous of their hard-won independence, the Indonesians have been particularly sensitive about the admission of foreign investment. Inflation has been increasing, there has been corruption in the sale or transfer of licenses to do business. Dutch business men have been reluctant to give up and to allow other nationals to enter the Indonesian market and political conditions have been unstable. There is a severe limitation on the export of business profits and in general the so-called climate for investment has been forbidding.

Dr. Sjafruddin recognized the necessity (which some Indonesians do not) of obtaining foreign capital.

"We need foreign investment for specific sectors in the aggregate capital requirements and the reality of this need is gradually dawning upon the fiercely independent people of Indonesia," he said.

Two-way Street.

He went on to develop the thesis that not only trade but the necessity for trade is a two-way street.

U Hla Maung, Burmese ambassador to Yugoslavia and one of his country's delegates to the United Nations, said the United States has failed to establish a basis of understanding with Asians because "you seem a little frightened."

"With so great a resurgence of nationalism in the East and such great technological advances in the West, why is it that there is so little co-operation?" Maung asked.

"You seem afraid of this nationalism and hesitant to make your technology available to Asia," he said. "You feel you do not understand why states play such a dominant part in our economics, while to you private enterprise seems most effective. There is a great desire on the part of our people, who were dependent before the war, to achieve in a few years what has taken you decades; the only way is for governments to take the initiative."

Assistant Secretary of State George V. Allen, who has served as Ambassador to Iran, Yugoslavia and India, said the Far East is suspicious of this country and that it is up to America to prove it is not imperialistic. But he also pointed out there are sound economic factors limiting American investments in Asia.

He had noted, he said, that despite generous conditions for foreign investment announced by Pakistan a year ago there had been no great pouring of western capital into Pakistan.

In this connection, Allen said General Motors and Ford once had assembly plants in Bombay and had not only refused the request of the Indian government to set up manufacturing plants but had closed down assembly operations. He pointed out the consumption of new automotive units was only about 20,000 a year in India, a nation of 360,000,000 people, while in Australia, for example, which has a population of only 10,000,000, there is a consumption of 120,000 new units a year.

Private Industry in India.

Allen said he thought Americans, concerned about the "sweep of Socialism" in Asia, had read too literally Indian regulations on government acquisition of private industry. He said he thought there is more private industry in India today than the American public is aware of and that "my guess is it will continue."

The Ambassador of India, Gaganvihari L. Mehta, subscribed to this view. He asserted the Indian pattern of society does not envisage the elimination of private enterprise and listed a number of fields in which, he said, Government and private interests are participating successfully in mixed enterprises.

Optimism today in contrast to the pessimism of a year ago was noted by several American and Asian speakers, among them R. S. S. Gunewardene, Ambassador of Ceylon.

"The prophets of doom have been refuted," said Gunewardene. "The tensions of last year have been relaxed and there is even talk of peaceful co-existence. We have seen the Big Four summit meeting; next week the Big Four foreign ministers will meet; the United States is even parleying with Red China at Geneva. Asia has not gone to the Communists as some feared; we are alive and kicking."

Gunewardene took the position trade with Communist countries does not necessarily mean ideological involvement, citing as an example his country's 1952 agreement to buy Red Chinese rice in exchange for rubber. Ceylon turned to this barter arrangement with the Communists after an appeal to the United States failed. But Ceylon, as the Ambassador pointed out, remains anti-Communist.

There is something of a family reunion in the maternity ward of DePaul Hospital.

Mrs. Claude J. McClure, 10245 Tappan drive, Bellefontaine Neighbors, gave birth to a daughter on Wednesday. On Thursday her sister, Mrs. Charles Denton, 1918 East Linton avenue, and their cousin, Mrs. Edward Wieners, 10074 Coburg Lands drive, Bellefontaine Neighbors, each gave birth to a son.

It was the first child for Mrs. Denton, the second for Mrs. Wieners, and the third for Mrs. McClure. The newborn cousins—Janet McClure, who weighed 8 pounds, 6 ounces at birth; Kelvin Denton, 7 pounds, 4 ounces, and James Wieners, 6 pounds, 3 ounces—may have three-in-one birthday celebrations in the years to come.

CPL. THOMAS BAYES JR.

EX-P.O.W. CONVICTED OF AIDING ENEMY

Cpl. Thomas Bayes Gets 5 Years, Dishonorable Discharge.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 22 (UP)—Cpl. Thomas Bayes Jr. of Flat Lick, Ky., was found guilty by a court-martial today of collaborating with the Chinese Communists while a prisoner in the Korean war. He was sentenced to five years at hard labor.

The seven-officer court also found Bayes guilty of an additional charge of "speaking against American participation in the Korean conflict" but acquitted him of charges of promoting disloyalty among fellow P.O.W.s.

The sentence, subject to review, included a dishonorable discharge and forfeiture of all pay and allowances. The court could have returned a life sentence. With good behavior Bayes can leave prison within the next 3½ years.

The 3-year-old soldier whitened when he heard the sentence. He saluted the court and, with a slight smile, did a military about-face to watch his wife, Fondel, who had begun to sob.

Following announcement of the verdict, defense counsel Col. Max W. Hazelhurst urged that the sentence be light, noting that Bayes had received a meager education and that "anyone would have a breaking point" under Chinese Communist torture and brainwashing.

The court-martial began Sept. 12. The court deliberated two hours and five minutes. It found Bayes guilty of leading discussion groups and classes conducted by the enemy, praising communism and criticizing living conditions, discrimination and unemployment in the United States and criticizing the United States for alleged indiscriminate bombings in North Korea.

The court also ruled that Bayes had been guilty of stating that the Korean conflict was "caused by greedy Americans who were making war profits" and that the United States had no business in Korea.

It ruled that he had given aid and comfort to the enemy by making recorded speeches criticizing the United Nations effort in Korea.

The sentence must be reviewed by a higher military court here and in Washington.

250 POLICE SEEKING KILLER OF 3 BOYS

Give Up Off-Duty Time to Scour Chicago Area for Clues.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22 (UP) — Two hundred and fifty policemen, giving up off-duty time, combed a 13-square mile section of the northwest side today in a continuing search for clues in the brutal killing of three boys.

Officers were hunting especially for the clothes of the boys, whose nude bodies were found in a forest preserve Tuesday.

Police also sought leads to several autos linked to the case, including one bearing Wisconsin license plates reported to have stopped for three youths Sunday evening.

Meanwhile, services were held for John Schuessler, 12 years old, and his brother, Anton, 11. The third victim, Robert Peterson, 14, was buried Thursday.

Today's search, conducted by traffic policemen who normally have the weekend off, concentrated on garages, sheds, and sewers in the 160,000 population Jefferson Park district where the boys were believed to have been murdered.

At least three autos figured in latest leads being checked out by a special 50-man detective force assigned exclusively to the case. They were:

1. A green Mercury with Wisconsin plates. Taxicab driver Louis Tefft reported he saw a middle-aged, well-dressed man give three boys a ride Sunday night, the last evening the boys were seen alive. Whether the boys picked up were the three found killed has not been determined.

2. A 1956 DeSoto. Mrs. Margaret Crimmins, a waitress, told police she saw a man about 50 in a new DeSoto sedan pick up three boys about 10:30 p.m. Sunday and drive in the general direction of the forest preserve. Police has estimated that the boys were murdered between 9 p.m. and midnight Sunday.

3. A battered 1950 Ford. Emphasis was placed on the information of Edward Rohlfes, a former railroad worker, that he saw three men in the older auto approach a parking spot near the ditch two hours before the bodies were discovered. A lie detector test backed up his story.

Several other leads, at first considered hopeful by police, dissolved.

SERVICE STATION ROBBED OF $317 BY TWO IN AUTO

A service station at 6103 South Broadway was robbed of $317 last night by two men who drove in and announced the holdup after ordering gasoline, police said.

Dorris DeSheles, who works as an attendant at the station and lives at the same address, told police one man remained in the automobile while the other went into the office on the pretext of using the telephone. DeSheles said the man drew a pistol when he went in to collect for the gasoline and took $200 in bills from DeSheles's shirt pocket and $117 from a coffee can on the table.

The robber then jumped into the automobile, warning DeSheles not to call police, and the pair drove north on South Broadway, the attendant said.

ISRAEL HISTADRUT DRIVE FOR $100,000 OPENS HERE

Maurice Samuel, author and translator of works by Jewish writers, will be guest speaker at a program officially opening the St. Louis Israel Histadrut campaign at 8:30 tonight at the Sheraton Hotel. Goal of the fund-raising drive is $100,000.

The program also will include performances by Mrs. Emma Schaver of Detroit, soprano, who has appeared in recitals in this country, Israel, South America and Canada, and the St. Louis String Ensemble. Co-chairmen of the St. Louis drive are Nathan Shever and Paul Lyss. Jack Mitchell is executive director of the Israel Histadrut campaign.

Funds raised in the drive are used in Israel to help new immigrants become adjusted.

FORMER ILLINOIS HOUSE SPEAKER DEVINE DIES AT 77

DIXON, Ill., Oct. 22 (AP)—John P. Devine, former speaker of the Illinois House of Representatives, died last night at his home in Dixon after a long illness. He was 77 years old.

The widely-known Illinois Democrat first was elected to the Legislature as a representative from his home district in 1912. He served 12 complete sessions in the House and as speaker from 1934 to 1936.

Devine was considered by Democratic leaders as a candidate for Governor in 1943. He later retired from active participation in politics to devote most of his time to his private law practice in Dixon.

ADENAUER STILL RUNNING HIGH FEVER, DOCTORS SAY

BONN, Oct. 22 (AP)—Ailing Chancellor Adenaur still has a high temperature, his doctors announced today.

For five days official reports have said the 79-year-old Chancellor was making good progress toward recovery from bronchial pneumonia. His doctors, however, have had difficulty in getting his fever down ever since he was put to bed last Oct. 7.

Today's announcement suggested official hopes expressed yesterday that he might be back at his desk by the end of next week were too optimistic.

Bitten by Rat in Garage.

Frank Carnahan, 5423 North Broadway, a laborer, was treated last night at City Hospital for a rat bite on a finger. Carnahan was bitten in a garage in the 1500 block of Hebert street.

FIRE RAZES HOME, PAIR LOSES ALL POSSESSIONS

Mr. and Mrs. Fred M. Moore, Forder lane, Lemay, lost all their possessions last night when the rented house in which they lived was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin. The three-room, frame house was owned by a real estate firm.

Damage was estimated by Chief Herbert Bigott of the Lemay fire department at $7500. Firemen were hampered in fighting the flames because of lack of water. Nearest water lines were 2000 feet away. Firemen fought the blaze with a 500-gallon booster tank on a fire truck and by pumping dry a 1500-gallon cistern at the house.

Moore, a laborer, and his wife were away from home when the fire started. Mrs. Moore said there was $2000 insurance on the furnishings but that was not enough to cover the loss. She said also that their two cats and two dogs were missing, but it had not been definitely determined whether they perished in the fire.

Joseph Bell, Inventor, Dies.

ORLANDO, Fla., Oct. 22 (AP)—Joseph Bell, inventor of directional lights used on many automobiles, died at his home today following a long illness. He was 75 years old.

BELLEVILLE WOMAN'S AUTO INJURIES FATAL, INQUEST SET

An inquest will be held in the death of Mrs. John R. Schaefer, 3111 West Main street, Belleville, who was injured Wednesday in an automobile collision at Routes 158 and 161 five miles east of Belleville. She died shortly before midnight Friday at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Belleville.

Mrs. Schaefer and her husband were riding in a car driven by her nephew, Walter E. Ackermann, 1412 Prairie avenue, Belleville, when it collided with one driven by Mrs. Helen B. Gorline, 616 Royal Heights road, Belleville. Mrs. Schaefer, who was 73 years old, was thrown from the automobile by the impact. Others in the two cars suffered minor injuries.

Independent Voters Hold Key to Next Year's Presidential Race

Public Opinion Samplings Show Important Role of Voters Not Attached to Either Political Party.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.

INDEPENDENT voters and those loosely attached to the Republican or Democratic party will decide next year's presidential election and whether both houses of Congress will remain Democratic. This is an inescapable deduction from the current Gallup and other polls and samplings comparing how individual Republican presidential prospects would run against Democratic possibilities.

Although these unofficial polls are often derided by politicians and political writers they are among the imponderable psychological factors that influence some party leaders in their convention votes and some voters in making their election choices.

In these columns, before President Eisenhower's heart attack, it was written that the Republicans planned to base their presidential and congressional campaigns on the President, prosperity and peace, with the greatest emphasis on the President.

Mr. Eisenhower's illness and the almost universal assumption—except by Administration officials when talking for publication—that the President will not seek or accept renomination have thrown Republican leaders into confusion, not to say despair, and have given Democratic leaders real and substantial hope of victory in the election next year.

LEADERS of both parties are looking for a presidential candidate with a vote-getting personality. That is where the current polls come in for serious consideration by politicians and political writers. These polls, as shown in the past, are subject to considerable change as they near the nominating conventions and the election but even now some of the lowly aspirants are happy merely to be included as having received 2 or 3 per cent of the samplings. Mention of their names makes them "dark horses," even though they are only "favorite sons" of their respective states. It brings them to the attention of national political leaders and writers.

Recent Gallup polls showed Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois leading the Democrats interviewed at 51 per cent, with Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee next with 16 per cent, Gov. Averell Harriman third with 8 per cent, and Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas fourth with 5 per cent.

A similar sampling of Republicans had Vice President Nixon leading in his party with 28 per cent; Chief Justice Earl Warren second with 24 per cent, former Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York and Presidential Assistant Harold E. Stassen tied for third place with 10 per cent.

Few political leaders and writers believe Chief Justice Warren can be persuaded to change his "irrevocable" decision to remain on the Supreme Court. With him out of serious consideration, the Gallup people calculated that Republicans, as of today, would divide 33 per cent for Nixon, 15 per cent for Stassen, 13 per cent for Dewey, 12 per cent for Secretary of State Dulles and the remaining choices scattered.

The Gallup polls also attempted to show how the independent voters would be divided today on Republican candidates. This listing show Chief Justice Warren far ahead with 34 per cent of the choices; Nixon second with 15 per cent; Dulles, third, 8 per cent; Dewey, fourth, 8 per cent, and Stassen and U.N. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge tied at 7 per cent.

A similar poll of independents on a Democratic list gave these percentages: Stevenson, 38; Kefauver, 17; Harriman, Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, and Rayburn, 7, and others ranging between 2 and 4 per cent.

The polls the politicians are watching are the theoretical races between Republican and Democratic prospects. Before the President's illness such polls indicated that Mr. Eisenhower would overwhelmingly defeat any Democratic candidate next year and was one reason many Democratic leaders were willing to let Stevenson have the field almost to himself.

A poll taken in early September indicated that in re-run of the 1952 contest, the President would receive 59 per cent of the vote, Stevenson 37 percent and 4 per cent undecided.

The President's heart attack changed Democratic expectations, and party leaders are scanning the public and their own private polls. Dewey, after his two unsuccessful tries for the White House, is not considered a Republican contender although he may try to be a king-maker or at least a killer of candidates lukewarm on international co-operation. For that reason there were no trial runs with him as a nominee.

A Gallup poll showed what many Republican leaders believe — that Chief Justice Warren would beat Stevenson. That's why some Administration officials are persisting that the Chief Justice can be persuaded to change his mind.

The interesting point of this paper race is that while all voters interviewed divided 52 per cent for Warren, 45 per cent for Stevenson and 3 per cent undecided, the so-called independents divided 54 per cent for Warren, 39 per cent for Stevenson and 7 per cent undecided.

ADLAI STEVENSON
Gallup polls . . .

EARL WARREN
. . . And angry farmers.

There are no definite figures on the size of the independent vote in the country because the percentages vary with localities and issues. There are relatively fewer independents voting against Republican candidates in Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire and Kansas, Nebraska and North Dakota and fewer independents voting against Democratic candidates in the solid South except when exceptional candidates are on the ticket. The usually quoted percentages vary from 20 to 40 per cent. The national average is believed below 25 per cent, which would be about 15,000,000 votes of the 60,000,000 in the 1952 presidential election.

In the Gallup trial run between Vice President Nixon and Stevenson, the 1952 Democratic candidate won 51 per cent to Nixon's 45, with 4 per cent undecided. In this theoretical race, Stevenson got 48 per cent of the independent vote, Nixon 47 per cent and 7 per cent was listed as undecided. This indicated that many of the independents had switched from Republican Warren to Democrat Stevenson.

With the principal prospects disposed of, the pollers next ran Harriman against Stassen and got a tie at 46-46 per cent, with 8 per cent undecided. The sampling of independents was also close, with Stassen getting 44 per cent, Harriman 41 per cent and 14 per cent undecided.

A PSYCHOLOGICAL FACTOR, which political leaders have to consider, appears involved in these polls. The record vote in 1952 is explained by some competent observers as the result of the personalities of the two candidates. There were 13,000,000 more voters that year than in 1948. The candidates were outstanding men for whom no apologies or explanations were needed. Both projected a "leader" or "father" image that seems required for the presidency. Perhaps that accounts for the high vote the Chief Justice has received in recent polls. He looks and acts like many people think a President should look and act.

On the other hand, even some prominent Republicans say privately that the locks and manners of Nixon, Stassen and Lodge lessen their vote-getting attractions. The 1952 results clearly indicate that Dewey's candidacy caused many Republican and some independents to stay away from the polls on election day. He gave the appearance of being too young, too slick, and too glib on television and radio. The same criticisms are heard about Nixon. Lodge suffers from an appearance of arrogance and Stassen, especially with political reporters, from over-ambition and a lack of candor.

On the Democratic side, Harriman is under the handicap of his age—64 years—his Eastern, almost British accent and his great inherited fortune. Since his election as Governor he has greatly improved his public speaking. From a practical political standpoint, his biggest assets are his position as Governor of New York, his record in the Roosevelt and Truman Administrations and his political manager, Carmine De Sapio, head of Tammany Hall, who speaks the language of the professional politicians.

Kefauver is an example of what a television image can do for an office seeker. His reputation as a presidential candidate was built on his television crime investigations during which he presented the picture of the calm, thorough, judicious and fearless public servant. This reputation plus his indefatigable personal campaigning in the preference primaries of 1952 enabled him to lead on the first two roll calls at the Chicago Convention. Another televised investigation of crime or some other important national subject would greatly enhance Kefauver's chances for the nomination. He, better than Stevenson or Harriman, knows how to project his personality on the popular mind.

THERE IS AN EARLIER Gallup sampling which heartens the Democrats and distresses the Republicans. Taken last March when most people thought the President could be persuaded to try for a second term, it indicated that if the 88,000,000 persons of voting age had to register, 54,300,000 would choose the Democratic party, 34,300,000 the Republican and 9,400,000 would remain undecided. These figures represented all potential voters, when, as shown by the 1952 election, only about 60,000,000 actually go to the polls. The President carried a bare majority of Republican Senators and Representatives with him in 1952 and his party lost both houses in the 1954 election. The Republican worry is whether their party with a candidate other than Mr. Eisenhower can come close to the narrow 1952 congressional victory.

The unofficial polls, public and private, are only one factor in a national campaign. Next year, unless all signs fail, the major issue will be falling farm prices. The farmers, who are perhaps the largest and most sensitive block of independent or switch voters, were mainly responsible for Truman's unexpected victory over Dewey in 1948 and they contributed mightily to the President's victory in 1952.

Republican leaders are not expected to make definite plans on the 1956 presidential campaign until President Eisenhower announces his own plans. In the meanwhile, the highest officers in the Administration are participating in off-the-record sessions with Washington political reporters, first, to spread the word that whomever the Republicans nominate will carry on the Eisenhower program of international co-operation and domestic "dynamic conservatism" and, second, to try to find out what the reporters know and think about presidential aspirants and prospects.

Not much solid information is obtained by either side at the meetings because the Republican leaders can make no definite campaign plans until Mr. Eisenhower is sufficiently recovered to reveal his own plans. In the meantime, several of these officials are insisting there is a possibility that the President may seek re-election and others are saying that Chief Justice Warren is their choice. It would be bad form and bad politics for them to do otherwise at this time but after Mr. Eisenhower has spoken, the polls will be studied even more closely than at present. The figures which will get the most consideration are those which indicate which way the independent voters are likely to go.

A New War: Short, Brutish and Atomic

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Retired)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.

THE Defense Department has taken the first steps to implement the revolutionary decision made earlier this year by the National Security Council that United States war plans should be based on a mobilization period of six months instead of 18 months previously used.

This decision is a compromise between the viewpoint, held mostly in the Air Force but also agreed with by Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther's staff at Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe, that a nuclear war cannot last more than a few weeks, and the more conservative opinions in the Army and Navy that even a nuclear war may last years.

The acceptance of the short war theory by the National Security Council will have an incalculable effect on the armed forces. It will cause more emphasis to be placed on forces in existence and instantly ready and less on reserve forces, stockpiles of armaments, standby military industrial facilities and stockpiles of critical raw materials.

The first public indication of the decision was made when the Army commenced to reorganize the organized reserves. The reorganization was based on retaining only those reserve units that would be needed and could be mobilized within six months after D-day. As a consequence only 10 of the current 25 reserve divisions are being retained as combat units. Of the 15 divisions down-graded, 12 will become replacement training center units and three maneuver area commands. Three hundred and fifty-eight company-size reserve units that may not be needed in the first six months are also being eliminated.

Additional instructions to change the mobilization and stockpiling machinery were given by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson Oct. 14 to the secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force and to the assistant secretaries of Defense in a seven-page memorandum entitled: "General Guidelines for 1956 and 1957."

In the Guidelines the Secretary emphasized:

The "maintenance of a high level of effective strength,"

The increased capability that new weapons give our forces;

The maintenance and modernization of combat forces that are required for the "initial phases of hostilities;"

The maintenance of a "minimum" level of mobilization reserves of equipment; and,

A directive to limit overhaul and modification programs to equipment needed only for peacetime use plus those mobilization reserves planned for use by D-day plus six months.

In addition, all existing procurement, production and overhaul contracts and project orders are to be reviewed and canceled where material is called for in excess of the new criteria.

Although the Guidelines are intended primarily as basic instructions on procedure to reduce expenses, and there is much of the usual talk in the memorandum about reducing civilian employment, overhead and supporting units, it is apparent that the major savings that will result will come from reduction in the levels of mobilization stocks of all kinds.

The memorandum contains several injunctions about obsolescence and "items which may be phased out because of recognized obsolescence in the near future." As to new procurement, the service secretaries are directed in computing requirements for conventional weapons "to reflect in full the effect of the availability of more modern weapons on these requirements."

By using a six-months' mobilization base, the National Security Council has avoided placing complete dependence upon one weapon and upon the untried capacity of massive nuclear air attack to put a nation out of business. With reserve forces and stockpiles of arms to last for six months there will be time to evaluate the course of any conflict and, if necessary, to put into motion the machinery for new production and the organization and training of additional forces. The six-months' mobilization base also provides adequate conventional forces and equipment for minor wars.

In an all-out nuclear war, there is little question but that ports will be destroyed, and subject to continuing attack if used, and that it will be impossible to transport great numbers of men in uniform overseas as was done in the last two wars. It is very doubtful, Pentagon thinkers believe, that even all of the National Guard and reserve forces now planned for the Army could ever be transported out of the United States.

Although the new Wilson directive is only a first step toward reorganizing the armed forces for the reality of nuclear war, additional steps must follow inevitably. For example, the Navy overhaul and modification programs will now be limited to ships required in the first six months of mobilization. If the Navy does not change its mobilization schedule (and probably it will), the ships in mothballs cannot be maintained in serviceable state.

Many of the Army reserves of equipment will go by the board for the same reason. With atomic weapons replacing much of the Army's conventional artillery, it is not difficult to foresee thousands of World War II conventional cannon being sold for scrap and millions of artillery shells going the same way.

The Navy will be hit hardest by the shift toward preparing for nuclear war. It has practically no mission for control of the seas in a short war. This would leave the Navy to support minor wars where the threat of nuclear destruction of ports and ships is secondary.

The Army will be affected to a lesser degree. Troops will be needed for mopping up, pacification and occupation in any kind of war. And they are needed before the war to guard the national frontiers and prevent revolution and subversion. However, the Army is faced with total reorganization to meet the requirements of ground forces subject to nuclear attack.

The decision by the National Security Council and Wilson's directive indicate that the United States is not planning on atomic disarmament. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles gives lip service to it, while the President's Assistant for Disarmament, Harold E. Stassen, hardly even pretends that we are interested in anything except a warning system. Chairman Lewis E. Strauss of the Atomic Energy Commission has called the idea of atomic disarmament "an act of naivette, indeed of the gravest folly," for us. Gruenther has warned against giving up atomic armaments and all the Chiefs of Staff in the Pentagon are against it.

The National Security Council decision and Wilson's directive are the first steps toward making the United States dependent upon nuclear weapons in case of war. If war should come, that is, we shall see, if we live through it, the great mushroom clouds of atomic explosions over our cities.

Western Alliance Weakened By Paralysis of France on Eve of Geneva Conference

Faure Government Has Neither Power Nor Capacity to Carry Out Reforms in North Africa, Make a Real Effort to Revitalize the Economy, or to Bring About Needed Changes in Election Laws.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1955, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

PARIS, Oct. 22.

WHEN the foreign ministers of the Big Four powers meet in Geneva at the end of the week France will be represented by a full delegation headed by Foreign Minister Antoine Pinay. This is thanks to the fact that Premier Edgar Faure saved himself at the last minute as his Government was about to go over the dam.

But that is all that can be said for the rescue operation carried out in the Assembly by reluctant deputies of the center and right. The Faure Government cannot solve the major problems that have for so long produced something close to paralysis in France. The Government has neither the power nor the capacity to carry out essential reforms in North Africa, to revitalize the economy and to bring about changes in the election laws contributing to the paralysis.

THIS PARALYZING WEAKNESS is a grave defect in the Western alliance. France is at the geographical heart of Western Europe and as such it is the strategic center of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization with billions of dollars spent on installations from the German border to the Atlantic ports. Yet France has withdrawn at least three divisions and parts of others from her NATO force to try to suppress the terror in Algeria and Morocco.

In the decade since the liberation of France in 1945, as 21 ineffectual governments have risen and fallen, the public has developed a cynical indifference. But today, in the view of observers who know France well, there is a growing realization of what the present paralysis means and with it a deep resentment and distrust of what appears to be the fumbling incapacity of representative government as it functions, or fails to function, here.

Perhaps, some Frenchmen are beginning to say, we need a strong man, a leader, who can resolve all our troubles. So far this is a muttering beneath the surface, but nevertheless it is an ominous sign.

In North Africa the army has refused to carry out the orders of the civil government in Paris. The top officers of the army do not believe in the reforms that Faure wants to carry through. In making Gen. Pierre Boyer de la Tour Resident General of French Morocco, Faure defeated his own professed objective of setting up a council that would satisfy the aspirations of the Moroccan nationalists. The General has frequently ignored orders from Paris, and when he has carried them out it has been late and reluctantly.

The conflict of authority was seen most dramatically when Faure sent Gilbert Grandval to be Resident General last summer. Grandval, who sincerely wanted to initiate reforms that might win the support of the nationalists and who had some knowledge and capacity, was almost literally driven out by the stubborn French planters. Since returning to Paris he has told friends that at a critical moment when he was being physically attacked by angry French reactionaries his French military guard abandoned him and he would probably have been killed if it had not been for the loyalty of his Moslem bodyguards.

This has had little treatment in the French press. The extremist rightwing newspapers have stressed Grandval's Jewish origin, exploiting the undercurrent of anti-Semitism that is a concealed factor in French politics today as it was when the case of Capt. Dreyfuss stirred not only France but the world.

As the top military ignores orders from Paris, reservists have in several instances conducted something resembling the sit-down technique in protest against being sent to North Africa. The war there is just as unpopular as was the seven-year conflict in the jungles of Indochina.

These are ugly facts that seldom get into the press reports from this beautiful and orderly capital. But they cannot be ignored, and particularly when they are related to other symptoms of the sickness of France.

THERE HAVE BEEN ugly manifestations at recent strikes, conspicuously at Nantes, with the Communists fomenting violence by playing on the fierce resentment against certain economic injustices inherent in the French economy which is frozen by cartel and government restrictions. This resentment is expressed in the spreading tax strike led by Emil Poujade. Dismissed as a crackpot when he first started campaigning to persuade Frenchmen to stop paying taxes, his movement has grown into an angry cry of protest heard in various parts of France that adds up to, "Down with the government."

The antiquated French tax system puts most of the burden on the bottom two-thirds of the population, with the top one-fourth or one-tenth managing to escape anything like their share of the total tax bill. The greatest inequities fall on shopkeepers and professional people in the towns, and they are the embattled followers of the spellbinding Poujade.

Just before the vote of confidence on the Faure Government in the Assembly some sober voices were raised to warn the politicians and the country of the consequences of a government crisis coming on the eve of the Geneva conference. Responsible newspapers such as Le Figaro, and statesmen of the rank of Andre Francois-Poncet, said that the fall of the Faure regime would advertise the sickness of France to the world.

Faure may have decided it is to his advantage to have a new trial of strength before his chief rival, former Premier Pierre Mendes-France, can rally his forces. The Faure Cabinet Friday voted to introduce a bill in the Assembly to dissolve Parliament and to hold elections in the first half of December. The decision will be up to Parliament.

Mendes-France, who succeeded in his brief term as Premier in ending the Indochina war and bringing relative calm through a semi-independent government to Tunisia, one of the French African colonies, is already hard at work. He is trying to unite the center and the left of center, short of the Communists, behind a government that would have majority support.

Even his friends, however, doubt that he will be able to bring it off. Mendes-France lacks the political touch. He is inclined to be too arbitrary and uncompromising. Moreover, in trying to get something done in his brief tenure of office he stepped on a great many important toes.

But the deeper doubt is on the score of whether an election will produce a majority under the present electoral law providing for proportional representation. This makes for splinter parties. Mendes-France told a recent American visitor he was fearful that because of proportional representation and the present distribution of Assembly seats the Communists might gain 25 to 30 seats even though their total vote was considerably reduced.

The Communists have 95 seats out of 627 in the present Assembly. They vote solidly as a bloc in accord with the Moscow line. That is a hurdle which every government must get over. It is the point at which all of France's troubles come to a focus. If the economy could be unfrozen so there would be more job opportunities, more housing, a more hopeful atmosphere, fewer Frenchmen would vote Communist. Many in the past have voted for Communist candidates not because they were themselves Communists or because they believed in Communist objectives, but out of frustration and something close to despair.

AT THE OTHER EXTREME as the head and the front of those determined to preserve the structure of the past unchanged is Marshal Alphonse Pierre Juin. When the wistful hope of a strong man, a leader, is raised, the name of Juin is likely to come into the talk. Born in Algeria, he attended St. Cyr, the French West Point, and had a distinguished career in both World Wars.

Marshal Juin was Resident General in Morocco from 1947 to 1951. He followed a policy of stern repression, convinced that only in this way could France hold a protectorate from which so many of her citizens benefit so handsomely. His successor, Gen. Augustin Guillaume, was in the same tradition.

Juin is now commander of the land forces in Central Europe under NATO. But he did not hesitate last year to speak out publicly against the European Defense Community at a critical moment although the NATO powers were bending every effort to get EDC ratified by the French Assembly. Prior to his public declaration he had been rumbling his opposition in the political salons of the right where he is the ideal of the nationalist hero and patriot. Despite this breach of discipline, he retained his NATO command.

Between the extremes of right and left representative government is jeopardized in this proud nation that writes up liberty, equality, fraternity for all the world to see.

Another strike situation such as that at Nantes would be exploited by the Communists and in the present mood of frustration and tension the consequences of violence could be far-reaching. Confusion, which is now the order, would become chaos, and this in the strategic center of the alliance that is the chief resource of the West in countering the aggressive aims of Moscow.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Holding a Juggernaut

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In a recent report on Soviet and United States hopes for atom control, Harold Stassen, presidential aid for disarmament, is quoted as saying:

"If world development of atomic energy occurs before men in different nations, working together, have been able to set up a system to provide against the use of nuclear weapons in a great surprise attack, the dangers of the thermonuclear age may become intolerable."

This is a statement of cold fact with which there can be no disagreement. Yet suppose such a system of advance warning were set up and made truly effective. What would be the guarantee against some spark from a limited war setting off the ultimate explosion?

Such a system, beyond being a gigantic and increasing burden upon the economic life of each nation, entailing as it would have to constant development and improvement in radar networks, electronic detection devices, fleets of planes constantly on the alert, inspection by air and land and sea, the eternal tension stemming from the possibility of failure, would still not prevent the smaller limited wars which could spread and perhaps ignite the planet.

As a first step, the implementation of President Eisenhower's plan is all to the good, but let no citizen kid himself into thinking it is the way to stop the atomic juggernaut.

There is only one way, and that is through universal enforceable disarmament. This in turn will require a supranational agency, instrument, authority. Personally, having respect for honest words, I prefer to call it by its rightful name—government.

Harold Macmillan, Foreign Minister of Great Britain, said just that when he told the members of Parliament last March 2 that if the necessary requirement meant some form of world government they should face it, for said he, "There is no other way for mankind."

Boone's Lick Trail

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I noted your recent item reporting that the granite monument marking the site where Pierre Laclede first landed in St. Louis had been toppled from its base at the foot of Market street.

And that suggests that it might be a good question at this time to learn what became of the "Boone's Lick Marker," which was on the southeast corner of Fourth and Market streets. CABELL GRAY.

A Kiss from the Duchess

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Touching on your Oct. 5 editorial dealing with the sad conclusion of the brief professional friendship between the Lady of Windsor and her erstwhile "memoirs" writer, Cleveland Amory, there is another famous quotation that might be placed alongside your Browning quotation, "That's my last Duchess."

When Britain's first Labor Prime Minister, Ramsay MacDonald, decided to turn over power to the deplorable Stanley Baldwin's Conservatives but to remain, for figurehead purposes, a self-proclaimed Laborite heading merely a "coalition" government, he exclaimed exultantly, "Tomorrow every Duchess in England will want to kiss me." Respectability, he thought, at last had touched him with her magic wand.

One surmises that the Duchess of Windsor had no desire whatever to kiss Mr. Amory and that Mr. Amory, a born American aristocrat who writes brilliantly about his peers, was in turn far less interested than the late Mr. MacDonald in being bussed by the betitled.

For Better Dental Health

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Now that the fluoridation of our city water supply has become an accomplished reality, the dental profession of St. Louis is grateful to a host of individuals and institutions who have supported its efforts for better dental health in the community.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, in its reports, editorials and wide coverage of the subject, has been singularly courageous, enlightened and forthright.

In the name of the St. Louis Dental Society and its over 900 members I want to express our sincere appreciation for the stand you have taken in the public interest.

President, St. Louis Dental Society.

Help for Korea

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The American Women's Unit for War Relief, Inc., wrote last April asking for dolls and toys to be sent to the homeless children in South Korea and Viet Nam for Christmas.

The response of your readers was magnificent. People rich and poor of varying religious beliefs gave so promptly and so generously that many children out there will have their first happy Christmas.

We now have urgent appeals for used clothing of all kinds—especially for children—as the people of South Korea and Viet Nam are suffering destitution and want. We will send our most grateful thanks for all donations sent to:

Advice, Good and Bad

It is now four weeks since the President suffered his heart attack. Fortunately for the entire world, Mr. Eisenhower's recovery "continues to progress satisfactorily without complications."

Dr. Paul Dudley White, the Boston specialist, reporting on his third detailed checkup, says it will be two or three months before the recovery can be called complete. The present goal is for Mr. Eisenhower to fly east between Nov. 5 and 12 for a combination rest and work convalescence in his farm home at Gettysburg, Pa.. The physician wisely avoided answers to second-term questions.

No one need worry that Mr. Eisenhower will not receive the best of medical advice. This patient is too important for any unnecessary risks that might come with more tasks than are safe for him to undertake. And the President is good enough soldier to do what his physicians tell him he must do to conserve his strength.

Unhappily the country cannot be sure—nor can Mr. Eisenhower—that the political advice he will receive in the weeks ahead will be as good as the medical advice. Here is where a real danger lies. For if the President was largely dependent on his political advisers before his illness, he is obviously more dependent now.

The D'Ewart appointment, which Mr. Eisenhower has been prevailed on to make from his hospital bed, is all the evidence anyone should need that some of this political advice does the President a sad disservice. It amounts almost to taking advantage of him in his illness.

When Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams obtained Mr. Eisenhower's approval of a recess appointment for Wesley A. D'Ewart of Montana to be Assistant Secretary of the Interior for public land management, he could hardly have presented the President with the arguments both for and against the lame duck Republican Congressman.

The arguments against Mr. D'Ewart would have included Secretary of the Interior McKay's denunciation of the D'Ewart stockmen's grazing bill of 1953 as "lousy" and one that would "give cattlemen vested rights to their grazing permits." It would have included other items in Mr. D'Ewart's record as a would-be despoiler of the national domain, a people's heritage for which the country owes a large debt of gratitude to such conservation pioneers as Republicans Theodore Roosevelt and Gifford Pinchot.

Setting Mr. D'Ewart to preside over the public lands is about as logical, as The Milwaukee Journal says, as picking a cat to protect a canary.

When Congress convenes Mr. Eisenhower will find himself in trouble because of this patently unsound recess appointment. He will have to decide whether to battle it out with the Senate in a potentially foredoomed effort to get Mr. D'Ewart confirmed, or to forget it, in which case Mr. D'Ewart would be subjected to the embarrassment of quitting a post he had held for only a short while.

Dwight D. Eisenhower is entitled to better political advice than he often gets. He was so horribly misadvised on the Dixon-Yates public utility contract that he put the full prestige of his office in support of a bad contract only to find in the end that he had to get out of it as best he could.

At this late date it becomes increasingly apparent that the real reason that the Administration canceled the Dixon-Yates contract was not that Memphis announced it would build its own public power plant, but that the dual role of a New York investment banker, Adolphe H. Wenzell, might well have violated the federal "conflict of interest" law. The chairman of the AEC, Adm. Strauss, now suggests this in effect in his decision to hold up any Dixon-Yates settlement until the question has been determined.

The D'Ewart appointment is cut from the same shoddy cloth. It is certain to be a serious embarrassment to Mr. Eisenhower in a matter of only three months. The President's advisers owe him the same consideration they would want if they were in his plight. Surely there must be someone in his official family who can be counted on to help him avoid the booby-traps that seem almost to be set for him.

The need at Denver is for political advice as trustworthy as the medical advice.

They Still Have That Hour

St. Louisans who have been missing that extra hour of daylight after work may reflect with envy that Chicago, Peoria, Decatur and more than 40 other communities in Illinois, as well as New York City, New Jersey, most of Pennsylvania and all the New England states, are still getting it, and will continue to do so till next Sunday.

The loss of that hour is particularly missed now, because the sun sets a few minutes after 5 o'clock at this time of year. Wouldn't it be nice to have a bright hour still ahead after the end of the day's work this late in the year, as St. Louis can easily do by extending D.S.T. in 1956?

Traffic Control in the Sky

The present air traffic control system for planes is so outmoded that practically all aviation leaders, both civil and military, are pressing for immediate short-range remedies. Many are even urging continuous all-weather control for practically all fights. It is imperative that these dangers be removed.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration, of course, must take the final responsibility for all air traffic control. The CAA is often accused of not appreciating the urgency of the need for modernization. It is difficult to see why it is not more alert, particularly in the light of a New York Times dispatch telling of a recent survey that is believed to show an average of four incidents every day in which airliners miss collisions aloft by uncomfortably close margins. These narrowly avoided collisions are reported to be more frequent in good weather, when plane spacing is left largely up to the pilot's eyesight, than in bad weather when ground stations rigidly control spacing.

It would not be surprising if investigation revealed that these clear weather incidents are largely due to the notoriously poor visibility that is built into all airliner cockpits. In an article entitled "Collision-itis" in the "Air Line Pilot" a United Air Lines senior co-pilot writes:

> It is a simple fact that, from the cockpit, you cannot see directly above, directly below, nor directly behind your million dollar airplane any more than your eyeballs can see the top, base or back of your head. Your visibility factor in today's cockpit is about 5 per cent. (If you spend the whole trip looking out the window) at any one instant you can only see 5 per cent of the sky through which you go "barrelling along" at 300 m.p.h. up to your armpits in gauges, levers, switches and rule books.

Such testimony indicates clearly that the big plane manufacturers and the air lines that accept the planes bear some of the responsibility for the collision dangers aloft. And while the CAA is most heavily concerned, Congress, which has a parsimonious tendency toward CAA budget requests, is also heavily concerned.

Very clearly, more visibility should be provided in cockpits, much new radar, direction-finding and traffic-display equipment should be added by the CAA, and Congress must see that the CAA is not impoverished. Otherwise, some unhappy persons are likely to be asked on some tragic day if a few million dollars could not have prevented the collision of two super airliners carrying more than 100 passengers.

Who Does Not Remember?

A news report that the Missouri State Treasury has picked up more than $600,000 of a fire insurance refund is a quiet ending to a dramatic and important piece of Missouri history. It is a history of the fall of a political machine, of the most blatant bribery ever exposed in the state, and of a happy ending protecting the public purse and public honor.

In 1930, stock fire insurance companies increased their rates by more than 16 per cent in defiance of Missouri law, which required approval by the State Superintendent of Insurance. The result was long litigation, and the excess payments from policyholders were impounded.

By 1935, the impounded funds totaled $10,000,000. Then came the infamous "Missouri compromise." R. Emmet O'Malley, then Superintendent of Insurance, ordered $8,000,000 of the impounded funds given to the rate-gouging companies, and just $2,000,000 was to be returned to the policyholders from whom the money came.

The Post-Dispatch denounced the compromise as "crooked." Within a month the newspaper obtained an admission from the late Kansas City political boss, Tom Pendergast, that he had "passed the word along" to approve the compromise. Next a federal inquiry got under way. Lloyd C. Stark, then Governor, had to appeal to President Roosevelt to prevent political interference with that investigation. And meantime the Post-Dispatch was tracking down a $400,000 slush fund raised by the insurance firms.

In 1939 the clues all fell into place. Pendergast had been paid $315,000 from the slush fund to "help out" the insurance firms. O'Malley had received $62,500, and a St. Louis insurance man who acted as go-between in the bribery received $82,500. Pendergast and O'Malley were sent to prison for federal income tax evasion. That was the coup de grace for the notorious Pendergast machine.

What happened thereafter was, perhaps, anticlimax, but it was justice. The Missouri Supreme Court fined 122 fire insurance firms a total of $2,090,000 for their leading role in the disgraceful affair. The courts also ordered all the impounded rate increase returned to the policyholders. And since, after all these years, some of the policyholders cannot be located, Circuit Judge Sam C. Blair in Jefferson City has now awarded the residue to the State Treasury.

The shares of honor and dishonor in this infamous case were awarded long ago.

The Princess Margaret Crisis

Should Princess Margaret marry Peter Townsend? Our answer is: Not Princess Margaret.

To be precise, the question ought perhaps to be rephrased, like this: Should Princess Margaret marry Peter Townsend and still remain Princess Margaret? She can, of course, marry Peter Townsend any time she wants to, provided she is willing to quit the royalty. But marry a divorced commoner while seeking to remain a princess in good standing? That is a different matter.

Sentimentalists, as always, are all for wiping out the legal and religious obstacles and letting the love-struck pair live happily ever after. What they forget is that one who enjoys the perquisites of royalty must be willing to meet its obligations. A princess cannot have it both ways—cannot accept the social rank of royalty and yet defy the rules of the game. If she wants to reign over society at the public expense she must bear the fardels that go with it.

The great overriding reason against the marriage is precisely the fact that Margaret occupies a unique rank, entailing duties and restrictions not applicable to others. She cannot do what a commoner can do—because she is no commoner. And were she permitted the privileges of commonalty she could no longer claim those of royalty.

Sadly but truly Margaret must marry royally or give up being a princess. As the loving maid in the case, she is entitled to an opportunity to make up her own mind.

Where a Stand Is Needed

American diplomacy can weather the storm in the Middle East if it continues to carry on an "honest policy" there. So says Assistant Secretary of State George V. Allen, back from a last trip to Cairo on which he studied the effects of Czechoslovakia's offer to trade arms for cotton.

The arms will be shipped in "very substantial amount," says Mr. Allen, thus dampening hopes that there might be only a token shipment. Yet Mr. Allen warns against alarmism and holds out hope that the extremely serious Middle Eastern problem can still be peacefully solved.

How? Surely not by muddling through. Surely not by hoping that something will turn up. Surely not by repeating our warnings to the Russians that they are playing with fire in a distinctly un-Geneva-like spirit—for, true as those warnings are, they have gone unheeded so far and can be expected to remain so.

What is needed, it seems to us, is a strong and unequivocal stand by the West, under American leadership, which will make perfectly clear to the Arabs as well as to Israel that forcible changes of the present frontiers between Israel and the Arab world are not to be tolerated.

Secretary Dulles not long ago offered a formal American guarantee of Israel's frontiers after an agreement is reached on what the borders are, and after other problems of the region, including that of Arab refugees, have been solved.

But there is no present disposition on anyone's part to agree on borders or anything else. An agreement is unlikely so long as either side thinks it can build up its position and perhaps settle some of these problems by force. They as well as the Israeli must be put on definite notice that forcible settlements are out, and that all the power of the Western world will be used to repel aggression from whatever source.

Such a security guarantee would probably be most effective if coupled with an offer to step up economic aid and technical assistance throughout the region. The Soviet bloc is now talking big about offering such aid itself. The Russians, as India has found out, talk a bigger program of economic aid than they perform. The Western world can outperform them with ease if it wishes to. It ought to stand ready to do so in exchange for assurances that no frontiers are going to be forcibly violated in the Middle East.

The Increase of Life

Jose Ortega y Gasset in 'The Revolt of the Masses,' First Printed in Spain in 1930, Copyright 1932, by W. W. Norton & Co.

Jose Ortega y Gasset, distinguished Spanish philosopher, died last week in Madrid at the age of 72. Ortega was considered the philosophical father of the Spanish Republic and fled Spain after the Franco conquest, but returned after 12 years abroad. The Revolt of the Masses (now reprinted in a paper-back edition by Mentor Books), from which the following excerpt was taken, is one of his best known works.

To start with, life has become, in actual fact, world-wide in character; I mean that the content of existence for the average man of today includes the whole planet; that each individual habitually lives the life of the whole world.

Each portion of the earth is no longer shut up in its own geometrical position, but for many of the purposes of human life acts upon other portions of the planet. This nearness of the far-off, this presence of the absent, has extended in fabulous proportions the horizons of each individual existence.

Jose Ortega y Gasset

And the world has also increased from the viewpoint of time. Prehistory and archaeology have discovered historical periods of fantastic duration. Whole civilizations and empires of which till recently not even the name was suspected, have been annexed to our knowledge like new continents. The illustrated paper and the film have brought these far-off portions of the universe before the immediate vision of the crowd.

Speed and Its Stupidity

But this spatio-temporal increase of the world would itself signify nothing. Physical space and time are the absolutely stupid aspects of the universe. Hence, there is more reason than is generally allowed in that worship of mere speed which is at present being indulged in by our contemporaries. Speed, which is made up of space and time, is no less stupid than its constituents, but it serves to nullify them. One stupidity can only be overcome by another.

It was a question of honor for man to triumph over cosmic space and time, which are entirely devoid of meaning, and there is no reason for surprise at the fact that we get a childish pleasure out of the indulgence in mere speed, by means of which we kill space and strangle time. By annulling them, we give them life, we make them serve vital purposes, we can be in more places than we could before, enjoy more comings and goings, consume more cosmic time in less vital time.

Man's Increased Potentiality

The world of our possible existence is always greater than our destiny or actual existence. But what I wanted to make clear just now was the extent to which the life of man has increased in the dimension of potentiality. It can now count on a range of possibilities fabulously greater than ever before. In the intellectual order it now finds more "paths of ideation," more problems, more data, more sciences, more points of view.

Whereas the number of occupations in primitive life can almost be counted on the fingers of the one hand—shepherd, hunter, warrior, seer—the list of possible avocations today is immeasurably long. Something similar occurs in the matter of pleasures, although—and this is a phenomenon of more importance than it seems—the catalogue of pleasures is not so overflowing as in other aspects of life. Nevertheless, for the man of the middle classes who lives in towns—and towns are representative of modern existence—the possibilities of enjoyment have increased, in the present century, in fantastic proportion. But the increase of vital potentiality is not limited to what we have said up to this. It has also grown in a more immediate and mysterious direction. It is a constant and well-known fact that in physical effort connected with sport, performances are "put up" today which excel to an extraordinary degree those known in the past.

It is not enough to wonder at each one in particular and to note that it beats the record, we must note the impression that their frequency leaves on the mind, convincing us that the human organism possesses in our days capacities superior to any it has previously had. For something similar happens in the case of science. In no more than a decade science has extended the cosmic horizon to an incredible degree. The physics of Einstein moves through spaces so vast, that the old physics of Newton seems by comparison lodged in an attic.

'From Newton to Einstein

(The world of Newton was infinite; but this infinity was not a matter of size, but an empty generalization, an abstract inane Utopia. The world of Einstein is finite, but full and concrete in all its parts, consequently a world richer in things and of greater extent.)

We live at a time when man believes himself fabulously capable of creation, but he does not know what to create. Lord of all things, he is not lord of himself. He feels lost amid his own abundance. With more means at its disposal, more knowledge, more technique than ever, it turns out that the world today goes the same way as the worst of worlds that have been; it simply drifts.

Every man who adopts a serious attitude before his own existence and makes himself fully responsible for it will feel a certain kind of insecurity which urges him to keep ever on the alert. The gesture which the Roman Army Orders imposed on the sentinel of the Legion was that he should keep his finger on his lips to avoid drowsiness and to maintain alertness.

The security of periods of "plenitude" —such as the last century—is an optical illusion which leads to neglect of the future, all direction of which is handed over to the mechanism of the universe.

'The Rudder of History'

Both progressive Liberalism and Marxist Socialism presume that what is desired by them as the best of possible futures will be necessarily realized, with necessity similar to that of astronomy. With consciences lulled by this idea, they have cast away the rudder of history, have ceased to keep their watch, have lost their agility and their efficiency. And so, life has escaped from their grasp, has become completely unsubmissive and today is floating around without any fixed course.

Under his mask of generous futurism, the progressive no longer concerns himself with the future; convinced that it holds in store for him neither surprises nor secrets, nothing adventurous, nothing essentially new; assured that the world will now proceed on a straight course, neither turning aside nor dropping back, he puts away from him all anxiety about the future and takes his stand in the definite present.

Can we be surprised that the world today seems empty of purposes, anticipations, ideals? Nobody has concerned himself with supplying them. Such has been the desertion of the directing minorities, which is always found on the reverse side of the rebellion of the masses.

But it is time for us to return to the consideration of this last. After having stressed the favourable aspect presented by the triumph of the masses, it will be well to descend now by the other slope, a much more dangerous one.

Ginger in the Air

Cigar-smoking Amy Lowell (1874-1925) was the poet sister of a famous astronomer and a president of Harvard. Here are selections from her Complete Poetical Works (Houghton Mifflin, 607 pgs., $6), whose introduction by Louis Untermeyer says Miss Lowell "helped establish the fresh and free searching poetry of our day."

Texas

I went a-riding, a-riding,
Over a great long plain.
And the plain went a-sliding, a-sliding
Away from my bridle-rein.
Fields of cotton, and fields of wheat,
Thunder-blue gentians by a wire fence,
Standing cypress, red and tense,
Holding its flower rigid like a gun.
Dressed for parade by the running wheat,
By the little bouncing cotton. Terribly sweet
The cardinals sing in the live-oak trees,
And the long plain breeze,
The prairie breeze,
Blows across from swell to swell
With a ginger smell.
But over to the right is a glare—glare—glare—
Of sharp glass windows.
A narrow square of brick jerks thickly up above the cotton plants,
A raucous mercantile thing flaring the sun from thirty-six windows,
Brazenly declaring itself to the lovely fields.
Tram-like cars run like worms about the feet of this thing,
The coffins of cotton-bales feed it.
The threshed wheat is its golden blood.
Once they went a-riding, a-riding,
Over the great long plain.
Cowboys singing to their dogey steers,
Cowboys perched on forty-dollar saddles,
Riding to the North, six months to get there,
Six months to reach Wyoming.
"Hold up, paint horse, herd the little dogies,
Over the lone prairie."
Bones of dead steers,
Bones of cowboys,
Under the wheat, maybe.
The sky-scraper sings another way,
A tune of steel, of wheels, of gold.
And the ginger breeze blows, blows all day
Tangled with flowers and mold.
And the Texas sky whirls down, whirls down,
Taking long looks at the fussy town.
An old sky and a long plain
Beyond, beyond, my bridle rein.

To Winky

Cat,
Cat,
What are you?
I am afraid of your poisonous beauty,
I have seen you torturing a mouse.
Yet when you lie purring in my lap
I forget everything but how soft you are,
And it is only when I feel your claws open upon my hand
That I remember—
Remember a puma lying out on a branch above my head
Years ago.
Shall I choke you, Cat,
Or kiss you?
Really I do not know.

The Pleiades

By day you cannot see the sky
For it is up so very high.
You look and look, but it's so blue
That you can never see right through.
But when night comes it is quite plain,
And all the stars are there again.
They seem just like old friends to me,
I've known them all my life you see.
There is the dipper first, and there
Is Cassiopeia in her chair,
Orion's belt, the Milky Way,
And lots I know but cannot say.
One group looks like a swarm of bees,
Papa says they're the Pleiades;
But I think they must be the toy
Of some nice little angel boy.
Perhaps his jackstones which today
He has forgot to put away,
And left them lying on the sky
Where he will find them bye and bye.
I wish he'd come and play with me.
We'd have such fun, for it would be
A most unusual thing for boys
To feel that they had stars for toys!

HOW ATOM BOMB FORCED JAPANESE SURRENDER

The TRUMAN MEMOIRS

President Faced With Decision On Use of Nuclear Weapon—Targets Are Picked—Soviet Reaction—Emperor Keeps Job.

By HARRY S. TRUMAN
Thirty-third President of the United States.
TWENTY-FIFTH ARTICLE

© 1955 by Time, Inc. (Publisher of "LIFE")

THE historic message of the first explosion of an atomic bomb was flashed to me in a message just before lunch on July 16th at Potsdam. The most secret and the most daring enterprise of the war had succeeded. We were now in possession of a weapon that would not only revolutionize war but could alter the course of history and civilization. This news reached me at Potsdam the day after I had arrived for the conference of the Big Three.

Stimson flew from Frankfort to Potsdam the next day to see me and brought with him the full details of the test. I received him at once and called in Secretary of State Byrnes, Admiral Leahy, General Marshall, General Arnold and Admiral King to join us at my office at the Little White House. We reviewed our military strategy in the light of this revolutionary development. We were now ready to make use of this weapon against the Japanese, although we did not know as yet what effect the new weapon might have, physically or psychologically, when used against the enemy. For that reason the military advised that we go ahead with the existing military plans for the invasion of the Japanese home islands.

At Potsdam, as elsewhere, the secret of the atomic bomb was kept closely guarded. We did not extend the very small circle of Americans who knew about it. Churchill naturally knew about the atomic bomb project from its very beginning, because it had involved the pooling of British and American technical skill.

Stalin Showed Little Interest.

On July 24th I casually mentioned to Stalin that we had a new weapon of unusual destructive force. The Russian premier showed no special interest. All he said was that he was glad to hear it and hoped we would make "good use of it against the Japanese."

A month before the test explosion of the atomic bomb the service Secretaries and the Joint Chiefs of Staff had laid their detailed plans for the defeat of Japan before me for approval. There had apparently been some difference of opinion as to the best route to be followed, but these had evidently been reconciled.

The army plan envisaged an amphibious landing in the fall of 1945 on the island of Kyushu, the southernmost of the Japanese home islands. This would be accomplished by our Sixth Army, under the command of General Walter Krueger. The first landing would then be followed, approximately four months later, by a second great invasion which would be carried out by our Eighth and Tenth Armies, followed by the First Army transferred from Europe, all of which would go ashore in the Kanto plains area near Tokyo. In all, it had been estimated that it would require until the late fall of 1946 to bring Japan to her knees.

There was, of course, always the possibility that the Japanese might choose to surrender sooner. Our air and fleet units had begun to inflict heavy damage on industrial and urban sites in Japan proper. Except in China, the armies of the Mikado had been pushed back everywhere in relentless successions of defeats.

Acting Secretary of State Grew had spoken to me in late May about issuing a proclamation that would urge the Japanese to surrender, but would assure them that we would permit the emperor to remain as head of the state. Grew backed this with arguments taken from his ten years' experience as our ambassador in Japan, and I told him that I had already given thought to this matter myself and that it seemed to me a sound idea. Grew had a draft of a proclamation with him, and I instructed him to send it by the customary channels to the Joint Chiefs and the State-War-Navy Co-ordinating Committee in order that we might get the opinions of all concerned before I made my decision.

On June 18th Grew reported that the proposal had met with the approval of his Cabinet colleagues and of the Joint Chiefs.

It was my decision then that the proclamation to Japan should be issued from the forthcoming conference at Potsdam. This, I believed, would clearly demonstrate to Japan and to the world that the Allies were united in their purpose. By that time, also, we might know more about two matters of significance for our future effort: The participation of the Soviet Union, and the atomic bomb. We knew that the bomb would receive its first test in mid-July. If the test of the bomb was successful, I wanted to afford Japan a clear chance to end the fighting before we made use of this newly gained power. If the test should fail, then it would be even more important to us to bring about a surrender before we had to make a physical conquest of Japan. General Marshall told me that it might cost half a million American lives to force the enemy's surrender on his home grounds.

Atom Bomb Suggested by Einstein.

But the test was now successful. The entire development of the atomic bomb had been dictated by military considerations. The idea of the atomic bomb had been suggested to President Roosevelt by the famous and brilliant Dr. Albert Einstein, and its development turned out to be a vast undertaking. It was the achievement of the combined efforts of science, industry, labor and the military, and it had no parallel in history. The men in charge and their staffs worked under extremely high pressure, and the whole enormous task required the services of more than 100,000 men and immense quantities of material. It required over two and one half years and necessitated the expenditure of two and one half billions of dollars.

Only a handful of the thousands of men who worked in these plants knew what they were producing. So strict was the secrecy imposed that even some of the highest ranking officials in Washington had not the slightest idea of what was going on. I did not. Before 1939 it had been generally agreed among scientists that it was theoretically possible to release energy from the atom. In 1940 we had begun to pool with Great Britain all scientific knowledge useful to war, although Britain was at war at that time and we were not.

It was under the general policy of pooling knowledge between our nation and Great Britain that research on the atomic bomb started in sich feverish secrecy. American and British scientists joined in the race against the Germans. We in America had available a great number of distinguished scientists in many related fields of knowledge, and we also had another great advantage. We could provide the tremendous industrial and economic resources required for the project—a vastly expensive project—without injury to our war production program. Furthermore, our plants were far removed from the reach of enemy bombing. Britain, whose scientists had initiated the project and were contributing much of the original atomic data, was constantly exposed to enemy bombing and, when she started the atomic research also faced the possibility of invasion.

The task of creating the atomic bomb had been entrusted to a special unit of the Army Corps of Engineers, the so-called Manhattan District, headed by Major General Leslie R. Groves. The primary effort, however, had come from British and American scientists, working in laboratories and offices scattered throughout the nation.

Dr. Oppenheimer Credited With Achievement.

Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, the distinguished physicist from the University of California, had set up the key establishment in the whole process at Los Alamos, New Mexico. More than any other one man, Oppenheimer is to be credited with the achievement of the completed bomb.

The final decision of where and when to use the atomic bomb was up to me. Let there be no mistake about it. I regarded the bomb as a military weapon and never had any doubt that it should be used. The top military advisers to the President recommended its use, and when I talked to Churchill, he unhesitatingly told me that he favored the use of the atomic bomb if it might aid to end the war.

In deciding to use this bomb, I wanted to make sure that it would be used as a weapon of war in the manner prescribed by the laws of war. That meant that I wanted it dropped on a military target.

Stimson's staff had prepared a list of cities in Japan that might serve as targets. Kyoto, though favored by General Arnold as a center of military activity, was eliminated when Secretary Stimson pointed out that it was a cultural and religious shrine of the Japanese.

Four cities were finally recommended as targets: Hiroshima, Kokura, Nagasaki, and Niigata. They were listed in that order as targets for the first attack. The order of selection was in accordance with the military importance of these cities. Before the selected targets were approved as proper for military purposes, I personally went over them in detail with Stimson, Marshall and Arnold, and we discussed the matter of timing and the final choice of the first target.

HIROSHIMA AFTER THE BOMB: A wasteland of twisted steel and rubble was all that was left.

General Spaatz, who commanded the Strategic Air Forces, which would deliver the bomb on the target, was given some latitude as to when and on which of the four targets the bomb would be dropped. That was necessary because of weather and other operational considerations. In order to get preparations under way, the War Department was given orders to instruct General Spaatz that the first bomb would be dropped as soon after August 3rd as weather would permit.

With these orders, the wheels were set in motion for the first use of an atomic weapon against a military target. I had made the decision. I also instructed Stimson that the order would stand unless I notified him that the Japanese reply to our ultimatum was acceptable.

On July 28th Radio Tokyo announced that the Japanese government would continue to fight. There was no formal reply to the joint ultimatum of the United States, the United Kingdom and China. There was no alternative now. The bomb was scheduled to be dropped after August 3rd, unless Japan surrendered before that day.

How Hiroshima News Reached President.

On August 6th, the fourth day of the journey home from Potsdam, came the historic news that shook the world. I was eating lunch with members of the Augusta's crew when Captain Frank Graham, White House Map Room Watch Officer, handed me the following message:

"Hiroshima bombed visually with only one tenth cover at 052315A. There was no fighter opposition and no flak. Persons reports 15 minutes after drop as follows: 'Results clear cut successful in all respects. Visible effects greater than in any test. Conditions normal in airplane following delivery.'"

I was greatly moved. I telephoned Byrnes aboard ship to give him the news, and then said to the group of sailors around me, "This is the greatest thing in history. It's time for us to get home."

A few minutes later a second message was handed to me. It read as follows:

"Big bomb dropped on Hiroshima August 5 at 7:15 p.m. Washington time. First reports indicate complete success which was even more conspicuous than earlier test."

When I had read this, I signaled to the crew in the mess hall that I wished to say something. I then told them of the dropping of a powerful new bomb, which used an explosive 20,000 times as powerful as a ton of T.N.T. I went to the ward room where I told the officers, who were at lunch, what had happened. I could not keep back my expectation that the Pacific War might now be brought to a speedy end.

A few minutes later, the ship's radio receivers began to carry news bulletins from Washington about the atomic bomb, as well as a broadcast of the statement I had authorized just before leaving Germany. Shortly afterward, I called a press conference of the correspondents on board and told them something of the long program of research and development which lay behind this successful assault.

On August 7th the U.S.S. Augusta completed a record run from Europe. As soon as the ship was moored at Newport News, I entered a special train which left immediately for Washington.

Without warning, Molotov sent for Ambassador Harriman on August 8th and announced to him that the Soviet Union would consider itself at war with Japan as of August 9th. This move did not surprise us. Our dropping of the atomic bomb on Japan had forced Russia to reconsider her position in the Far East.

I promptly called a special press conference. Admiral Leahy and Secretary Byrnes were present when I met the correspondents. There were only four sentences to my announcement:

"I have only a simple announcement to make. I can't hold a regular press conference today, but this announcement is so important I thought I would call you in. Russia has declared war on Japan. That is all."

Report From Harriman in Moscow.

The following day Harriman reported further on the Russian decision:

"When Molotov informed the British ambassador and me last evening that the Soviet Union would consider itself in a state of war with Japan as of August 9 he emphasized that although at one time it was thought that this action could not take place until mid-August the Soviet Government had now strictly lived up to its promise to enter Pacific War 3 months after the defeat of Germany. In reply to an inquiry made by the British ambassador as to how the Japanese ambassador had reacted to the statement handed him at 5 o'clock, Molotov first explained that Saito was a 'kind hearted man' and that he had always had good relations with him. Molotov continued that Saito inquired as to what the Soviet statement meant with respect to the words 'to free the people from further sacrifices and suffering and to give the Japanese people the opportunity of avoiding the danger of destruction suffered by Germany.' Molotov replied that the Soviet Government wished to shorten the duration of the war and decrease sacrifices. Saito then remarked that the Pacific war would not be of long duration."

In another message Harriman reported:

"I saw Stalin and Molotov this evening. Stalin said that his advance troops had already crossed the frontiers of Manchuria both from the west and the east not meeting heavy resistance on any front and had advanced 10 or 12 kilometers in some sections. The main forces were starting across the frontier as we spoke.... He said further that they had not yet attacked in Sakhalin but were prepared to do so later. In discussing the Japanese situation he said that he thought the Japanese were looking for a pretext to set up a government that would surrender and he thought that the atomic bomb might give this pretext.

"He showed great interest in the atomic bomb and said that it could mean the end of war and aggression but that the secret would have to be well kept. He said that they had found in Berlin laboratories in which the Germans were working on the breaking of the atom but that he did not find that they had come to any results. Soviet scientists had also been working on the problem but had not been able to solve it."

Second Atom Bomb Is Dropped.

On August 9 the second atom bomb was dropped, this time on Nagasaki. This second demonstration of the power of the atomic bomb apparently threw Tokyo into a panic, for the next morning brought the first indication that the Japanese Empire was ready to surrender.

On August 10th, at 7:33 in the morning, our radio monitors heard this news item being given out over Radio Tokyo:

"The Japanese Government is ready to accept the terms enumerated in the joint declaration which was issued at Potsdam, July 26, 1945, by the Heads of Government of the United States, Great Britain, and China, and later subscribed to by the Soviet Government, with the understanding that said declaration does not comprise any demand which prejudices the prerogatives of His Majesty as a sovereign ruler."

This was not an official communication, but it was enough notice of Japanese intention to permit us to discuss what our reply should be. I asked Admiral Leahy to have Secretaries Byrnes, Stimson and Forrestal come to my office at nine o'clock to confer on the next step to be taken.

When the four had arrived, I turned to each in turn and asked his opinion on these questions: Were we to treat this message from Tokyo as an acceptance of the Potsdam Declaration? There had been many in this country who felt that the Emperor was an integral part of that Japanese system which we were pledged to destroy. Could we continue the Emperor and yet expect to eliminate the warlike spirit in Japan? Could we even consider a message with so large a "but" as the kind of unconditional surrender we had fought for?

Secretary Stimson had always expressed the opinion that it would be to our advantage to retain the emperor. He urged the same point now. We needed, as he saw it, to keep the only symbol of authority which all Japanese acknowledged. Admiral Leahy also recommended that we accept the Japanese proposal if for no other reason than that we would be able to use the emperor in effecting the surrender. Secretary Byrnes was less certain that we should accept anything short of an unequivocal declaration of surrender. He argued that in the present position it should be the United States and not Japan that should state conditions. Secretary of the Navy Forrestal offered the suggestion that we might in our reply indicate willingness to accept, yet define the terms of surrender in such a manner that the intents and purposes of the Potsdam declaration would be clearly accomplished.

I asked Byrnes to draft a reply that might convey such an understanding. Shortly before noon, he came back to the White House bringing with him the official communication from the Japanese government which had just been received from the Swiss legation. It was identical with the earlier radio transmission.

Reply to Japanese Surrender Message.

Byrnes also submitted for my approval a draft of a proposed reply to be sent to Japan. I asked the Secretary of State to stay for lunch, while I summoned a Cabinet meeting for two o'clock. During lunch we worked out an urgent communication to go to the British, Russian and Chinese governments to get their concurrence to the answer we proposed to send to Japan, and were joined by Admiral Leahy, who helped with the drafting.

At two o'clock the Cabinet convened. Byrnes presented the proposed reply and indicated by what procedure we would seek the approval of our allies. We dispatched identical messages to London, Moscow and Chungking, and in each of these we instructed our ambassador to make immediate delivery of the message to impress upon the recipients that speed was of the essence. The message we enclosed read, in part, as follows:

"With regard to the Japanese Government's message accepting the terms of the Potsdam proclamation but containing the statement 'with the understanding that the said declaration does not comprise any demand which prejudices the prerogatives of His Majesty as a sovereign ruler'—our position is as follows:

"'From the moment of surrender the authority of the Emperor and the Japanese Government to rule the state shall be subject to the Supreme Commander of the Allied Powers who will take such steps as he deems proper to effectuate the surrender terms.

"'The Emperor and the Japanese High Command will be required to sign the surrender terms necessary to carry out the provisions of the Potsdam Declaration, to issue orders to all the armed forces of Japan to cease hostilities and to surrender their arms, and to issue such other orders as the Supreme Commander may require to give effect to the surrender terms.'"

The message to London left the White House at 3:45 Eastern War Time; it was received by our embassy in London at 4:58 our time. The British answer was received in Washington at 9:48 that evening.

Attlee and Bevin agreed but expressed doubts that it would be wise to ask the Emperor personally to sign the surrender terms. They therefore suggested this change in the language of the proposed reply, that "the Emperor shall authorize and ensure the signature by the Government of Japan and the Japanese General Headquarters of the surrender terms necessary to carry out the provisions of the Potsdam Declaration."

Chiang Wanted Emperor to Sign.

Our message to Chiang Kai-shek brought us this reply which my naval aide brought to me at 7:35 on the morning of August 11th:

"I concur in all the conditions and join you in your reply to the Japanese Government on the acceptance of the Potsdam proclamation. I especially concur in the condition to require the Emperor and the Japanese High Command to sign the surrender terms."

Ambassador Harriman's report of the reaction in Moscow was handed me when I arose that morning:

"The British Ambassador and I were with Molotov when your * * * message * * * was delivered to me. Molotov was in process of inquiring what the attitude of our respective governments were to the Japanese Government's proposal. He informed us that the Soviet attitude towards it was 'skeptical' since the Soviets did not consider it unconditional surrender, and that the Soviet forces, therefore, were continuing their advance into Manchuria. As this was shortly after midnight, he emphasized that it was the third day of the Soviet campaign which would continue. He gave me the definite impression that he was quite willing to have the war continue.

"Your message then arrived, and it was translated to him. His reaction was noncommittal and suggested that he would give me an answer tomorrow. I told him that this would not be satisfactory and that we wished it tonight. He thereupon agreed to take it up with his Government and attempt to give me an answer tonight."

A second message from Harriman followed shortly.

"Molotov asked the British Ambassador and me to call again. He handed us the following statement, which said (in part):

"'The Soviet Government also considers that, in case of an affirmative reply from the Japanese Government, the Allied Powers should reach an agreement on the candidacy or candidacies for representation of the Allied High Command to which the Japanese Emperor and the Japanese Government are to be subordinated.

"I took a firm exception to this paragraph and said that in my opinion my Government would never agree to it. I pointed out this was a qualification of the Soviet Government's acceptance of our proposal and that it gave the Soviet Government veto power on the selection of the Allied High Command. In answer to my inquiry as to his meaning, he finally suggested that the High Command might consist of two persons, both an American and a Soviet general, specifying Marshal Vasilevsky by name. I stated that it was unthinkable that the supreme commander could be other than America.

"After a most heated discussion he insisted that I send his communication to my government. I maintained, however, that in my opinion it would be unacceptable.

"When I reached my office, I found Pavlov, Molotov's secretary, on the telephone, advising me that Molotov had consulted Stalin. He said that there had been a misunderstanding and that only consultation had been intended and not the necessity of reaching an agreement. I pointed out to the secretary that I believed the words 'or candidacies' would also be unacceptable and asked him to convey this message to Molotov. Within a very few minutes he called back stating that Stalin had agreed to the deletion of these words. He agreed to confirm this in writing."

'Never Had Any Doubt' That Atom Bomb Should Be Used

Insisted on American Commander.

Harriman was, of course, expressing our set policy. The State, War and Navy Coordinating Committee had some time ago formulated our position on the postwar control of Japan, and I had approved it. We wanted Japan controlled by an American commander, acting on behalf of the Allies who might coordinate their desires through a conference or council which we proposed to call the Far Eastern Advisory Commission.

I was determined that the Japanese occupation should not follow in the footsteps of our German experience. I did not want divided control or separate zones. I did not want to give the Russians any opportunity to behave as they had in Germany and Austria. Thus Harriman was able to speak up at once when Molotov tried to change the basic Policy for Japan.

Meanwhile in Washington a message was prepared to inform our allies of the selection of General Douglas MacArthur to be the Supreme Commander in Japan. In the same message I proposed that the new Supreme Commander should instruct the Japanese to surrender their forces in Southeast Asia to Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, the Supreme Commander in that area; those forces facing the Russians to the Soviet High Commander in the Far East; and all other forces in China to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

The next day—August 12th—was a Sunday, but I spent nearly the entire day in my office, frequently joined by the Secretary of State and the heads of the armed forces. The place was beleaguered by press and radio people, and large crowds gathered outside the White House and in Lafayette Park. A report that the Japanese had accepted was circulated early in the evening, but it turned out to be false.

Letter to His Sister, Mary.

In the midst of this I wrote my sister Mary.

"Dear Mary:" the letter read. "This is your birthday, and I had intended to have a letter there this morning. But conditions here have been such that it was impossible to get it done. I surely hope you have a happy one. Margaret should be out with some presents, and I mailed you one from Germany.

"I have a beautiful Belgian luncheon set for Mama and some handkerchiefs for Luella and a Swiss watch for Martha Ann. I also have a present for Gilbert.

"Since I landed last Tuesday there hasn't been a minute. The speech, the Russian entry into the war, the Jap surrender offer and the usual business of the President's office have kept me busy night and day.

"It seems that things are going all right. Nearly every crisis seems to be the worst one, but after it's over, it isn't so bad . . .

"Happy birthday and lots of love,

"Harry."

In the meantime, I received word from Stalin, Chiang Kai-shek and Attlee that the selection of Douglas MacArthur to be the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers met with their approval. Despite these agreements, however, there were also ominous notes. Ambassador Pauley, who was in Moscow on another—futile—attempt to find agreement on reparations matters with the Russians, urged quick action on the Far East to prevent Russian excesses:

"Conclusions I have reached," a message from him read, "through discussion on reparations and otherwise (I repeat otherwise) lead me to the belief that our forces should occupy quickly as much of the industrial areas of Korea and Manchuria as we can, starting at the southerly tip and progressing northward. I am assuming all of this will be done at no risk of American lives after organized hostilities have ceased, and occupancy to continue until satisfactory agreements have been reached between the nations concerned with respect to reparations and territorial rights or other concessions."

Complications were also beginning to arise in China. Hurley reported that the Communists were seeking to take the greatest possible advantage of the impending Japanese collapse.

"If the United States," Ambassador Hurley cabled, "and the United Nations permit an armed belligerent political party in China to accept surrender of the Japanese and to acquire Japanese arms, a fratricidal war in China will thereby be made certain. I have already suggested that in the terms of surrender Japan be required to surrender all Japanese arms in China including Japanese arms that are in the hands of Japanese soldiers, Chinese puppet troops supporting Japan, and Chinese partisan organizations operating with Japan, to the National Government of China. We have also recommended that the terms of surrender should penalize Japan for any attempt to arm any belligerent forces within China against the National Government * * * *

"General Wedemeyer has shown me his report to the Chief of Staff setting out his opinion of the situation that will prevail if the Japanese are allowed to surrender their arms to the Communist armed party. I concur in General Wedemeyer's report and recommend that the State Department urge that the surrender terms provide that none of the Japanese arms will be surrendered to the Chinese Communist armed party."

China Issue Not a New One.

These messages from Moscow and Chungking did not, of course, raise new issues. The preceding months had shown us that Stalin and his colleagues did not view matters in the same light we did. The delicate balance in China between the forces of Chiang Kai-shek and those of the Chinese Communists had been the subject of many discussions among our policy experts. But the opportunity of the moment was to put an end to the years of war. A dictator can use his soldiers as soulless pawns, but in a government like ours the voice of the people must be heeded; and the American people wanted nothing more in that summer of 1945 than to end the fighting and bring the boys back.

August 13th passed without word from the Japanese. On the morning of August 14th, however, Commander Vardaman brought word that a coded cable from Tokyo had been received in Berne. It turned out that it was not an answer to our message at all, and the wait continued.

At three o'clock Byrnes informed me that he had just learned that a code message was then being received in Berne from Tokyo. At 4:05 he put through a call to Harrison, who gave him the answer we wanted: Japan had surrendered!

At 7:00 P.M. the White House correspondents gathered in my office. Mrs. Truman was with me, and most of the members of the Cabinet were present. I had also asked a former Cabinet member to join me on this momentous occasion. Cordell Hull, now seriously ill, and for many years a most distinguished Secretary of State, did not arrive until the conference was nearly over, but I was glad that we could include him in the official picture that was taken of the event. He had done much to make this day possible.

When everybody was in, I stood behind my desk and read a statement which said in part:

"I have received this afternoon a message from the Japanese Government in reply to the message forwarded to that Government by the Secretary of State on August eleventh. I deem this reply a full acceptance of the Potsdam Declaration which specifies the unconditional surrender of Japan. In the reply there is no qualification."

The correspondents shouted congratulations as they rushed out the doors to flash the word to their papers. Mrs. Truman and I went out to the fountain on the north lawn. A vast crowd had assembled outside the gates, and when I made a "V" sign in the manner of Churchill, a great cheer went up. I remained outside only a few minutes, and then went back into the White House and called my mother at her home in Grandview, Missouri.

Around eight o'clock the crowds outside were still growing, and I went out on the north portico and spoke a few words through a loudspeaker that had been set up there. This was a most significant and dramatic moment, and I felt deeply moved by the excitement.

We had won the war. It was my hope now that the people of Germany and Japan could be rehabilitated under the occupation. The United States, as I had stated at Berlin, wanted no territory, no reparations. Peace and happiness for all countries were the goals toward which we would work and for which we had fought. No nation in the history of the world had taken such a position in complete victory. No nation with the military power of the United States of America had been so generous to its enemies and so helpful to its friends. Maybe the teachings of the Sermon on the Mount could be put into effect.

Tomorrow: Arrangements are made to accept the Japanese surrender aboard the U.S.S. Missouri; directives for occupation of Japan are prepared.

The Illusion of Reality Created With Few Words

By
THOMAS B. SHERMAN
Book Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

JESSAMYN WEST

LOVE, DEATH AND THE LADIES' DRILL TEAM, by Jessamyn West. (Harcourt, Brace and Co., 248 pgs., $3.50.)

IN a short story the author has little opportunity to build up his characters with the result that he is tempted to place his emphasis on events rather than persons. The hero foils the villain and gets the girl; but who and what is the hero? In the mine run of short fiction he is a stereotype or—at best—a silhouette. What distinguishes the short stories of Jessamyn West is that her characters reveal their essential traits almost immediately and consequently have identities and histories that determine, in part, their subsequent actions.

The ability to create the illusion of reality with a few words is obviously a rare one. This unusual economy of means is apparent in all the elements of the stories selected for "Love, Death and the Ladies' Drill Team"—in the quality of her concentrated thought and the aptness of her language as well as the realization of character.

That being true no ingenious plot mechanism and no superhuman happenings are necessary to the awakening of interest or the release of emotions. The first disillusionment of a small boy can seem as significant as a lost battle.

SO it is, at least, in "Learn to Say Goodby" when Johnny sees his baby beef win the first prize at the county cattle fair. It was the long awaited moment of pride and triumph for Johnny because he himself had raised "Curly" from infancy.

But a moment later Johnny's own life seemed at an end when he heard the auctioneer shouting that "Curly" would soon provide the best beefsteak ever eaten in Riverbank county. Such is the outcome of an investment in love.

The title story, "Love, Death and the Ladies' Drill Team," is much slighter; and the two main characters who are virtually off-stage pass so quickly that one scarcely learns their names before they are gone. Yet it is time enough for a striking contrast to be shown between the dry satisfactions of institutional respectability and the unreflective joys of freedom, independence and love.

"Public Address System" is a brief excursion into what seems to be abnormal psychology. A small town nobody with a reputation for never raising his voice above a whisper accidentally gets a job as the announcer at the softball games. As he hears his voice, amplified 10 times over, soaring through the ether he is seized by a feeling of grandeur.

To be brief—and not to spoil the story—the experience proves his undoing. The case of Leonard appears to be unique; yet there may be a lesson in his fate for all of us. Only a strongly anchored character can resist the unsettling effects of sudden fame and power.

MANY of the stories in this collection were first published in the New Yorker and other periodicals. Each has its special thrust and flavor but taken together they enhance one another's value if only because the satisfaction given by each one should lead the reader avidly to the next.

Miss West must practice a patient selection from the material dredged up from her mind, for one rarely catches her in an awkward figure of speech, a redundant sentence or—for that matter—in an uncivilized thought.

A fragment of the ancient Dead Sea Scrolls and two of the unbroken clay jars in which they were found.

YESTERDAY'S WORLD

The Find of the Century

THE SCROLLS FROM THE DEAD SEA, by Edmund Wilson. (Oxford University Press, 121 pgs., $3.25.)

Reviewed by
A. MERVYN DAVIES

IT ALL BEGAN in 1917 when Bedouin shepherds searching for a lost goat near a cliff on the western shore of the Dead Sea found not the goat but a cave and inside the cave jars containing ancient scrolls—"it" being the excitement attending the greatest archeological find of this century.

How ancient are these scrolls? Well, scholars seem to agree in dating them between 200 B.C. and A.D. 70. That puts us back to Biblical times.

This discovery of 1947 was just the first of many, and there may well be more to come as the process of combing the Dead Sea area for caves continues. To date nine caves in the Qumran region have yielded significant results, and Cave Four, discovered in 1952, has produced the most of all. There Bedouin digging operations—undertaken before the archeologists could arrive and take over—"brought in" a veritable gusher yielding no fewer than 300 or more manuscripts, which are still in process of being deciphered.

The contents of Cave One—which are principally what Edmund Wilson describes in this account—have now in large part been published. And they are sensational indeed, for they include a complete copy of the book of Isaiah — antedating by centuries the traditional text underlying our English Bible—a Commentary on Habbakuk, and the Manual of Discipline of the Essenes. (The Essenes were a sect within Judaism, like the Pharisees and Sadducees, who maintained a community on the shore of the Dead Sea. Our knowledge of them hitherto has come from Pliny, Philo and Josephus.)

These discoveries obviously have a two-fold importance: for the textual study of the Old Testament and for the light they throw on the origins of Christianity.

Mr. Frank M. Cross Jr., Associate Professor of Old Testament at McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago and one of two American scholars engaged on the restoration and translation of the remaining Qumran scrolls, has evaluated the Wilson account, which first appeared in an abbreviated form in the New Yorker, May 14. He describes it as "superb journalism."

"IT is," he says, "surprisingly accurate in its factual data and its judgments in cases of scholarly disagreement are marked by an acumen wholly unexpected in a layman. Wilson is no ordinary reporter. His writings—fiction, essays, criticism—are widely known and have created a coterie of admirers. He went to his task armed with the necessary foreign languages, including a smattering of Hebrew. His article is the distillate of a tour about the world spent interviewing most of the scholars at work on the scrolls or engaged in interpretation of their contents. He is to be congratulated on his work."

One need add nothing to that, except to underscore what a remarkable feat of reporting this is and how fascinating the whole story is. Not the least interesting part is to see these great archeological explorations going forward against the background of hostility of Jew and Arab and the lesser rivalry of Jew and Christian, which greatly complicated matters besides adding to the hazards. The scrolls had a fearfully precarious journey from the original hands of the Bedouins to the Syrian metropolitan Samuel at the monastery of St. Mark in Old Jerusalem.

Proust Saved, Remembered In New Study

MARCEL PROUST AND DELIVERANCE FROM TIME, by Germaine Bree—translated by C. J. Richards and A. D. Truitt. (Rutgers University Press, 248 pgs., $4.50.)

Reviewed by
WILLIAM BLEIFUSS

THE numerous books recently published about Marcel Proust have indeed delivered him from time, that great unyielding force which is one of the main subjects of his monumental novel Remembrance of Things Past.

In the last half dozen years, several biographies have appeared, many new letters have been published, and five critical studies dealing either in part or in their entirety with his 3000-page many-volumed novel have been published in English.

One of the best is by Germaine Bree of New York University. Her philosophical study which has just been translated into English does not question that Proust is one of the major novelists of this century.

Without retreading old paths others have repeatedly examined, Miss Bree not only substantiates with new material what others have said, but offers new interpretations. In fact since the appearance of her book in French in 1950, subsequent writers on Proust have not always given Miss Bree as much credit as they might.

THE book provides a lucid and scholarly discussion of the Proustian world, where the central figure, the narrator, at the start of the first volume, dips a bit of cake in a cup of tea. This experience reminds him of his childhood, his family, his friends, etc. One event recalls another, and the series of associations fills one of the longest novels ever written.

Miss Bree traces the intellectual and esthetic development of the novel, which through the medium of the narrator's memory presents a panorama of French society from the 1870s into the 1920s, a world recreated as it comes through his synthesizing mind. He describes the disintegration of the dream world he thought was real. He sheds his illusions about the aristocracy, love, friendship, good and evil. Only art manages to resist change, time, and death.

Despite the fact that the narrator achieves almost everything that he dreamed of as a child, he sees all that he valued degenerate, even his own faith in himself is seemingly gone; then comes the knowledge that he has an inner world. This discovery makes it possible for him to fulfill his desire to become a writer. The "inner self" is an absolute which the artist must transform into shape and meaning for his fellow man.

THE novel the narrator intends to write is to create this "inner self" for the world. To remember and to recreate the past is one of the functions of the artist. Proust's novel achieves what the narrator-hero of the book plans to do.

Miss Bree's important contribution to our understanding of Proust is her thorough discussions of his esthetics and his achievement with his novel, for he has had a tremendous effect on contemporary writing and has broadened the scope of the novel. James Joyce's novels seem like pyrotechnical displays when compared with Remembrance of Things Past.

Light on the Dark Continent

INSIDE AFRICA, by John Gunther. (Harper & Bros., 952 pgs., $6.)

THE DARK EYE IN AFRICA, by Laurens van der Post. (William Morrow & Co., 224 pgs., $3.)

DONALD GRANT

AFRICA is a continent shaped like a crushed skull. It is big, very big; its area of 11,262,000 square miles is the size of the United States, Western Europe, India and China combined.

On all of this land are only 198,000,000 people. Fewer than 3 per cent of the people are of European descent. The other 97 per cent are of African—or Asian—descent. Yet the small minority of European descent hold most of the wealth and the power of Africa.

This may be the most explosive fact in the world today. Africa is a time bomb; all who will listen can hear it ticking.

Pressures of the potential explosion are increasing, as extremists among the white rulers of Africa — especially in the Union of South Africa —descend deeper and deeper into the old, discredited, unscientific and immoral superstition of "white supremacy."

It would seem unnecessary to add that the explosion, when it comes, will deeply involve the United States.

Illumination of the African scene, therefore, is of the utmost importance to Americans, and this is the task which the three books reviewed here set out to accomplish.

GUNTHER'S contribution is a great mass of facts and observations, 400,000 words written after a 40,000 mile journey through Africa, during which he interviewed some 1503 people. "Inside Africa" is a worthy addition to the famous Gunther library of "inside" books, starting 20 years ago with "Inside Europe" and continuing with "Inside Asia," "Inside Latin America" and "Inside U.S.A."

He makes few apologies for colonialism and has scant respect for the United States policy which postures as a friend of the victims of colonialism, while supporting the colonial powers. "Africans," says Gunther, "laugh at us for being so cautious and ambiguous."

"What the United States ought to do," concludes Gunther, "is to take a much bolder position, announce its unshakable faith in freedom for all peoples, and enormously multiply our assistance to Africa in fields of technical aid, education, and the like. That is the only effective way to beat Communism. We shall be stupid beyond belief if we allow Africa to go by default, and let the Soviet Union usurp our historical role as the protector of young nations."

"Inside Africa," however, is not a well-reasoned essay. It suffers from its virtues. It had to be written fast, and it does contain errors; and this kind of mass-production reporting gives little opportunity for penetrating interpretation.

Still, for breezy writing, Gunther is hard to beat. One chapter begins:

"Zanzibar is the only place I have ever visited where birds nest in the chandeliers of the British Residency. . . ."

DESPITE his protestations of not being racially prejudiced, Cloete not only exhibits a great deal of race prejudice, but devotes most of his book to an endless series of observations about the supposed "inferiority" of the African people.

"The scientific investigations into racial differences," he concludes, "have shown that the white races on the whole are superior to the black, but that this is probably due to better environment. But till this is rectified, white superiority must continue."

This is, of course, a statement that no reputable anthropologist would begin to accept.

Cloete builds his case almost wholly on that most doubtful device, the unsupported generality: Africans "understand only force," and have "no knowledge of cause and effect." Cloete, furthermore, doubts the value of education for Africans, and is especially scornful of "the pretentious young intellectuals."

He writes vividly; Cloete is a successful South African novelist. Presumably he knows what he is talking about when he describes the plant and animal life of Africa. He certainly is more sympathetic in such passages than when he is describing African human beings.

COL. VAN DER POST finds the deepening tragedy of Africa only a reflection of the sickness in the soul of modern man; the cure, as he sees it, must be worked out within the individual, and then in relations between individuals. "I want to suggest," he says, "that the unrest in Africa, in all its facets . . . is plainly an extension of our own individual unrest. . . . Modern man with his grievous and crippling realization of having lost the sense of his own beginnings, with his agonizing feeling of great and growing estrangement from nature, finds that life holds up Africa like a magic mirror . . . and he can, could he but realize it, rediscover there his despised and rejected natural self."

For modern man to achieve a new and healthy integration, Col. van der Post believes Africans of all colors must work together. "I do not think of the European as being superior to the black man. I think of both as being different and of the differences as honorable differences equal before God. The more I know of 'primitive' man in Africa the more I respect him and the more I realize how profoundly we must learn from him. I believe our need of him is as great as his is of us."

THE white man has, of course, all but destroyed the original cultures of the black man in Africa, and in its place offered a Western religious faith; but "the African today is growing less and less impressed by what we preach in church and profess in parliament. He is influenced by what we do. . . . It does not take him long to see that there is a dark gulf between what we profess in church on Sundays and practice in the week."

Christianity, without the brotherhood of man, does not meet the need. "Just think, for one moment," says Col. van der Post, "of the light that is in the eye of a human being when he looks at another human being he loves and respects as an equal. Then remember the look in the eye of the average European when he is in contact with 'a lesser breed without the law,' and you will understand what I mean. The difference between the two, I believe, is the explosive that has blown the Europeans out of one country after another during our time."

It is not all as hopeless as it looks, Col. van der Post believes, however, because "hatred is akin to love" and "secretly, the black natural man in Africa attracts the European no matter how much he consciously rejects him. I say this with confidence because, after all, I was born in Africa and have not only lived with the prejudices of which I am speaking but have also shared them."

COL. VAN DER POST, perhaps regrettably, does not detail how he overcame his own prejudices, though he drops a few clues. He was a British Commando officer, in the desert and in Java, among other places, and the book is dedicated to another Commando officer, Col. David Sterling, who has dedicated himself to the brotherhood of man in Africa; obviously Col. Sterling, a remarkable man and one of Britain's most illustrious war heroes, has a strong influence on Col. van der Post.

And Col. van der Post tells of his imprisonment by the Japanese, in Java, where he saw in the eyes of his fellow white prisoners, when being mistreated by the Japanese, a look he had seen before: "I realized, ashamed, that I had been familiar with that expression all my life and had seen it countless times on the faces of black Africans. . . . I realized then with a bitter emotion that the black man is a prisoner in our world and we a kind of Japanese jailer."

The Spirit of Overlord

THE SIXTH OF JUNE, by Lionel Shapiro. (Doubleday & Company, 351 pgs., $3.95.)

Reviewed by
WILLIAM K. WYANT JR.

THE stupendous military operation called Overlord, which set the beaches of Normandy aflame in the early hours of June 6, 1944, is a theme that would challenge any novelist. Lionel Shapiro, who as a Canadian war correspondent observed its preparations and took part in the landing, should receive congratulations for his effort. His "The Sixth of June" is a sensitive, beautifully plotted story that breathes the high-hearted spirit of the time.

At one level, Mr. Shapiro's novel is an account of the great Allied planning effort that culminated finally in D-day and the assault on Festung Europa. At another, it is a picture of the British people at war. At still another, it details the star-crossed romance of a young American officer and an English girl, both deeply in love, both with heavy obligations elsewhere. These three elements and others are interwoven skilfully, with Overlord providing the dramatic climax.

The book begins with two farewells, geographically far separated but related in that each is occasioned by the war. One is the leavetaking of Army Lt. Bradford Parker from Malton, Conn., where he is heir-apparent to a newspaper dynasty by virtue of the fact that his wife, Jane, is the publisher's daughter. The other parting takes place in Lincolnshire and is that of Valerie Russell from Capt. John Wynter, British commando who is off to the conflict in Africa.

WHEN Lt. Parker, a fine-looking figure of a man, arrives by B-24 bomber for staff duty with ETO operations sections in London, he has every reason to think it will be a wonderful war. He is clear of home ties, keen on getting the job done, anxious to see a little fighting, and assured that nobody will blame him for kicking up his heels a bit in the process. He meets Valerie. From then on the role of gay young blade is his no longer. He faces a decision regarding his wife, a woman of whom he is very fond, and Valerie has her obligation to Capt. Wynter, who adores her.

Mr. Shapiro, while shepherding his romantic leads through their tender but frustrating idyll, gets in some shrewd narration concerning the Dieppe raid, the Hotel Aletti in Algiers, the plight of the small English village overwhelmed by the American Air Force, the atmosphere of wartime London and the beehive activity of the major headquarters. Lt. Parker becomes woodenish at times, taking himself a little too seriously, but the book has a goodly cast of minor characters who appear to have been drawn from life.

It may be that readers accustomed to the neurotic in war fiction will find Mr. Shapiro's people a shade too normal and decent, but this is a matter of taste. "The Sixth of June" is a highly satisfactory novel, and one that can be handed to grandmother, or sold to Hollywood, without the blue-penciling of a line.

SEA STORIES

The Battle of Leyte Gulf

SEA FIGHTS AND SHIPWRECKS, by Hanson W. Baldwin. (Hanover House, 315 pgs., $3.95.)

Reviewed by
ROBERT A. RANDOLPH

THE greatest sea fight of all time and no doubt the world's last great fleet-action, the Battle for Leyte Gulf, is concisely and vividly told by Hanson Baldwin in only 28 action-packed pages in this superb book dealing with naval warfare and disaster at sea. Eight pages of "special notes" by Admiral Kinkaid and eight more by Admiral Halsey, the two American victors who have been at odds ever since they defeated the Japanese at Leyte, give the conflicting opinions of these two old seadogs.

Although it is impossible to point to any one of the 18 tales in this book and say, "This one is the best," there is little doubt but the chapter dealing with Leyte Gulf will be the most widely read because of the two interpretations, particularly that of Kinkaid who proceeds under a full head of steam into the controversy with Halsey.

Kinkaid, commanding the Seventh Fleet, was to supply and protect the landing forces on Leyte. Halsey, commanding the Third Fleet, was to cover the landing forces and destroy any naval or air forces that might attack. A small Japanese decoy force pulled Halsey's entire fleet away to the north while another Japanese fleet attacked the inferior Kinkaid fleet. But with victory in its grasp, the Japanese fleet became scared and fled before Halsey could return to intervene. The Japanese had been only three hours away from the helpless transports at the landing and had they pressed on they should have been able to destroy them all.

Such is the setting that Baldwin gives for the Halsey-Kinkaid controversy which apparently is to take its place in naval history with the Sampson-Schley dispute over Santiago in the Spanish-American War and the Jellicoe-Beatty differences over Jutland—the great sea fight of World War I which with all its complicated details is also clearly and colorfully described by the author in another chapter.

The sinking of the Titanic, the 46,000 ton liner which struck an iceberg in 1912 with loss of 1513 of the 2224 persons aboard, is starkly told by Baldwin. It first appeared years ago in Harper's and if there is a more measuredly dramatic account this reviewer would like to see it.

"THE BIRKENHEAD DRILL," in which the heroic sacrifices by British troops saved the lives of women and children in 1852, is in sharp contrast with "The Horrible Wreck of the Frigate Medusa" in 1816 which probably holds the record for sheer horror.

Mr. Baldwin's tales of men and ships in stress on the seven seas cover the period between 1816 and 1945, from the days of sail to the age of the atom. They are all true stories, more fantastic than fiction, and well told by a writer who knows the sea. There is not a dull page in the whole book.

This amazing scientific truth is startling evidence that the heart and other vital organs NEED to relax. This book teaches you to relax YOUR WHOLE BODY and REST the heart by reducing the strain from circulating the BLOOD required within the body to give it energy and remove waste products. Wake up in the morning feeling refreshed and thoroughly relaxed, perhaps for the first time in years! Get this book today and learn to RELAX FOR YOUR HEALTH'S SAKE!

Why suffer from... LOSS OF APPETITE • ULCERS • MIGRAINE • CHEST PAINS • MUSCULAR SPASMS • VIOLENT TEMPER • SPASTIC CONSTIPATION • DYSMENORRHEA • PSORIASIS • NAUSEA which may all be due to nervous hypertension? Only a doctor can make a diagnosis of your ills . . . but this book CAN help you relieve nervous tension if that is the basis of your suffering. Dr. Gutwirth's method of PROGRESSIVE RELAXATION is based on the work of the famed physiologist Dr. Edmund Jacobson . . . adopted officially by some of America's largest corporations to keep personnel fit. She was the donor of an organ to Mary Institute and of $50,000 for a non-medical library to Washington University school of medicine.

POLICE HAPPILY RECOVER STOLEN 'AUTO—IT'S THEIRS

For 10 hours yesterday police kept an unusually sharp lookout for a certain stolen automobile. The missing machine was a police department vehicle, which had been stolen from a gambling squad detective early yesterday.

Detective Harry Lee reported he had parked the car at 12:45 a.m. in the 2800 block of Accomac street, and that it was gone when he returned at 2 a.m. After learning of the theft, the police radio reminded all units with unusual regularity to watch for the automobile—a green, two-door sedan with no special markings.

Embarrassed officers were able to call off the search at 1:30 p.m. A sharp-eyed patrolman spotted the missing machine parked undamaged at Devolsey and Cushing streets.

KROGER, UNION TO RESUME TALKS; 'PROGRESS MADE'

Negotiations between representatives of the Kroger Co. and Local 6, AFL Firemen, Oilers and Maintenance Men are to be resumed tomorrow at 9 a.m. in the offices of the United States Conciliation Service in the Old Federal Building.

"Progress was made" in a meeting between the two groups which lasted from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. yesterday, R. A. Hughes, St. Louis branch manager, said last night. He said a new type of proposal was discussed by both the union and Kroger Co., but he declined to go into the details.

The strike of maintenance men, which began Sept. 14, resulted in the closing of the 52 stores of the company in St. Louis and St. Louis county. Negotiations for higher wages for union members began last June and broke down in September.

MRS. H. A. SCHOKNECHT SR. FUNERAL TO BE TOMORROW

Private funeral services for Mrs. Henry A. Schoknecht Sr., widow of one of the founders of Renard Rug Co., will be tomorrow at Webster Groves Presbyterian Church, 55 West Lockwood avenue. Entombment will be in Valhalla Mausoleum.

Mrs. Schoknecht, 91 years old, died of infirmities yesterday at Deaconess Hospital. Her husband died in 1927. She lived with a granddaughter, Mrs. Amos O. Hueseman, 2547 Town and Country lane, Kirkwood.

Surviving, besides Mrs. Hueseman, are another granddaughter, Miss June L. Schoknecht, and a grandson, Henry A. Schoknecht III of Walnut Creek, Calif.

Don't Forget
THE MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY ASSOCIATION

We have a particular problem, which in our opinion can be met in only one way. That is by raising our own Funds in our own particular way — because ours is a specific affliction which can not be budgeted in advance. We must remain fluid enough to pursue any program that gives promise of improving the lot of those who suffer from Muscular Dystrophy no matter what the expense may be.

Because Muscular Dystrophy is 100% fatal, time is of the essence. The need for immediate and continued research is so urgent that 75% of our funds are channeled into research projects throughout the country (Washington University is now working on its third $20,000 grant). The remaining 25% is used for patient care, occupational therapy and orthopedic equipment.

Five years ago the only people familiar with Dystrophy were the parents and friends of victims who watched them die a little each day. However, today the public is becoming increasingly aware of this tragic disease whose victims are chiefly children who will never live to grow up.

We must continue to raise more and more money each year in our desperate race against time to find the cause and cure for a disease that has baffled medical science for centuries. We cannot put Muscular Dystrophy on a "budget" that would leave the greater part of the funds in St. Louis because Muscular Dystrophy is a national problem, not just a community problem.

Children with Muscular Dystrophy participating in therapy program at St. Louis University

If you feel as we do . . . that the giver should have the freedom of choosing the charity he wishes to help . . . by all means contribute to the United Fund but give again Thanksgiving week to those who march for those who cannot help themselves.

Give to Defeat Muscular Dystrophy NEXT!

STOCK MARKET RECOVERY DRIVE ROLLS VIGOROUSLY

Gain of 13.79 in Dow-Jones Industrial Stock Index Best Since Post-Election Week

By RADER WINGET

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (AP)—The stock market got its recovery drive rolling vigorously this week with the strongest advance in nearly a year. It was four weeks ago that President Eisenhower suffered his heart attack. The stock market tumbled the next Monday in one of the worst falls in its history. The shock of uncertainties surrounding that grave event finally were off, and last week the market touched bottom. Since then it has been advancing with growing vigor until now it has retraced nearly 36 per cent of its fall. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks this week rose $4.20 and closed at $169.90. On Sept. 23 it stood at a record high level of $181.50. At its low last week it was at $163.40.

(Dow-Jones industrial stock index gain for week of 13.79 points was the best for that figure since the post-election boom of 1954—the week ended Nov. 5, 1954. The average closed at 458.47. The rail average closed the week at 151.45, up 2.98 points, best gain since the week ended Sept. 9. Utilities finished at 62.51, up 1.03, their best rise since July 22, 1955. The 65 stock average finishing at 162.59, up 4.05, made the best gain since March 4. On Monday, Sept. 26, industrials fell by 31.89 points, second largest decline in market history. They dropped 10.92 points on Monday, Oct. 3 and 13.27 points on Monday, Oct. 10.)

The week's volume dropped to 8,665,559 shares from 12,212, 825 the previous week. Trade was in 1393 issues of which 929 closed higher, 307 lower and 158 unchanged.

Market's Action Normal.

Brokers aren't throwing their hats into the air with shouts that it's all over now. The general opinion is that the market's original fall and its subsequent recovery have been within normal bounds. They also point out that under normal conditions the market can be expected to retreat again in a test of the old lows. Such a test might not take very long.

All during the time the market was going down, it seemed to ignore all kinds of good news developments. Now, on the other hand, everyone is eager to point to things that boost the market ahead—excellent earnings reports, better dividends, higher prices, rising sales, and expanding industries. One company after another is using the phrase "new record high" in announcements.

Most of these things were present or keenly anticipated while the market was going down. It made no difference then. Now it does. Wall Street says the answer is: a renewed confidence in business is asserting itself.

On the technical side, it was noted that the market currently is entering a price area that in the past has proved to be a barrier to further advance, and the market notably slowed its rise at the end of the week.

Trend During Week.

Monday's market was a quiet affair on the lowest volume in nearly two months. The next day there was a lot of improvement both in prices and in volume. The Defense Department said military spending might be higher than estimated, and the Interstate Commerce Commission made permanent their 1953 gift of higher freight rates.

The advance gained pace Wednesday as the market began to take more and more notice of earnings and dividend reports. The excellent corporate reports continued, and the market also continued its upward course with greater vigor on Thursday.

On Friday there was a pause. Some profit-taking put in an appearance, and there also was a tendency to even-up holdings for the weekend. Nevertheless, there was a modest advance.

The five most active issues this week on the New York Stock Exchange were U.S. Steel up 2⅛ at 56¼ on 131,300 shares; Curtiss-Wright up 1⅝ at 24¼; Westinghouse Electric up 1⅛ at 57¼; General Motors "when issued" up 1¾ at 45¾, and Sperry Rand up ⅝ at 22¼.

Week's Review Of Business And Finance

MOSTLY ONE STORY

By WALTER BREEDE JR.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (AP)—Business, spurred by record consumer spending, headed for new high levels this week. Things were on the upbeat almost everywhere you looked. Department store sales showed a thumping 8 per cent gain over year-ago levels, steel production (scheduled at 96.1 per cent of capacity) was up 31 per cent, the auto industry rolled out 1956 models in increasingly heavy volume, rail freight traffic was the highest in nearly three years.

Corporate earnings reported for the first nine months pointed to lush rewards for shareholders. Chalking up record profits were such blue chip firms as American Gas & Electric, Continental Can, Eastman Kodak, St. Regis Paper, and Union Carbide. The stock market regained a substantial portion of the ground it had lost in the stunned aftermath of President Eisenhower's heart attack.

What Executives See.

In most lines, the outlook was for continued good business for almost as far ahead as you could see. Top executives attending the annual Hot Springs, Va., meeting of the Government's Business Advisory Council (BAC)—known as the "elite corps" of United States industry—were polled by the Associated Press. The consensus: Business activity will continue on a high plateau well into 1956 or longer. Questioned about the recent "blue Mondays" on Wall Street, one delegate said: "That's just speculation."

United States Government experts said the sum total of all business activity — the "gross national product"—might thrust to an unprecedented high this year of nearly 400 billion dollars, if the rate of gain in the current quarter measures up to that of July-August-September.

GNP hit an estimated record annual pace of 392 billions in the third quarter, with private spending by Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public providing most of the drive.

Other Boom Signals.

Other boom signals: Average take-home pay of United States factory workers in September reached its highest level in history ($71.55 after taxes for a married worked with two children). Personal income of Americans during the third quarter rose to a record annual rate of 306 billions. Department stores, their profits running 50 per cent higher than a year ago, were told by the National Retail Drygoods Association to expect another record Christmas season.

Labor Secretary Mitchell, looking ahead to 1956, predicted more jobs, fewer unemployed and possible manpower shortages. Wendell Barnes, chief of the Government's Small Business Administration (SBA) declared: "Our economy is poised for a new surge forward of such magnitude that it is truly breathtaking."

Mingled with the jubilant shouts of the optimists, you could hear occasional complaints. Most of them concerned the tightening squeeze on credit. For some months now, the money managers of the Federal Reserve Board have been clamping down on the nation's money supply. Interest rates have moved up. Banks have become more finicky about making loans. Business firms and individual consumers have found it more difficult — and more expensive — to borrow money. The objective: to hold the boom in check, and curb inflation.

Home Building Hit.

Hardest hit so far is the nation's 15-billion-dollar-a-year home building industry. Housing starts last month slumped to 113,000, down 8 per cent from August and the lowest in seven months. This week Thomas P. Coogan, head of a big New York mortgage clearing house and former president of the National Association of Home Builders, said it's time curbs on mortgage credit were relaxed. If they stay "as is," he said, and home buyers can't get the easy terms they want,

CORN AT LOWEST LEVEL SINCE 1949

Big Midwest Crop Comes on Top of Huge Carry-Over.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22 (AP) — A drop in prices of cash corn to the lowest level since 1949 provided the main feature on the Board of Trade this week. Corn futures also weakened, but they held up a lot better than the cash grain. As a result the cash article was selling at a severe discount under the December future as the week ended. Other cereals declined with corn, although rye provided an exception by scoring modest gains. Trading was slow all week, picking up a little in Friday's weak market.

Wheat closed the week 1⅞ to 4 cents lower, corn 1⅞@2½ lower, oats ¼@⅜ lower, rye unchanged to 1¾ higher, soybeans ¾@2½ lower and lard 30 to 40 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Cash Corn Demand Poor.

Demand for cash corn was very poor. As the week ended No. 2 yellow corn was quoted in the cash market at 7½ to 10 cents under the December future, the widest discount yet during the harvest season. A year ago the cash price was higher than the December future price.

Late in the day on Friday some No. 2 yellow corn sold at $1.15¼. That was the lowest price since October, 1949, when the price got down to $1.11. With that one exception, the price Friday was the lowest since 1945, when it hit $1.10¼.

A year ago at this time No. 2 yellow corn was bringing $1.54¼. And there once was a time, back in September of 1947, when it sold as high as $2.97.

One trouble with corn was that the midwest is harvesting a very big crop, which comes on top of a huge carryover from previous years. Moreover, a lot of this corn isn't eligible for price supporting Government loans because many producers exceeded their acreage allotments.

More Hogs, Cattle.

Both the hog population and cattle on feed are up from a year ago, which should provide a larger consumption of corn. Such an increase in consumption is expected, although at the moment hogs are being marketed at light weights—and at the lowest prices in nearly 10 years.

While the amount of corn exported each year is only a small proportion of the crop, it does have some influence on setting the price. Here, too, the news appeared quite bearish to traders.

Grain sorghums compete with corn as a feed in foreign countries. There's a huge grain sorghum crop in the Southwest. And the Government has started selling some red wheat to exporters at competitive prices. The exporters got the wheat for $1.26 at Gulf of Mexico ports. Wheat, of course, can be used as a feed grain.

About the only bullish argument grain analysts could think of existed in the price of corn. Hadn't the price discounted all known bearish factors? Wasn't it possible the market had been oversold?

Corn Support Price $1.58.

This year's corn crop is being supported at $1.58, national farm average. Grainmen estimate that's equivalent to $1.75 at Chicago. As the week closed the December future was a shocking 50 cents under the support price.

As for the rest of the grain list, the chief feature was just plain dullness.

In wheat the 1956 crop contracts sank the most, reflecting the excellent seed bed in which winter wheat has been planted. Reports processors had ample supplies of soybeans on hand stymied demand for beans. Oats eased with corn but rye attracted small speculative buying.

Lard futures eased in line with a sharp drop in loose card, down 2¼ cents for the week at 9⅞ cents a pound.

HOG PRICE LOWEST IN NEARLY 11 YEARS

Drop of $1.25 in Week Brings Top Swine to $14.50.

NATIONAL STOCK YARDS, Ill., Oct. 22—Continued pressure in the hog market dropped values to the lowest level since Jan. 2, 1945, according to the Producers Live Stock Marketing Association. Results in cattle were mixed, while lambs closed the week on a stronger basis.

The precipitous decline in hogs, resulting in a net loss of $1 to $1.25 in five days, stems from easonally large marketings and a further loss in fresh pork prices at wholesale centers. An additional bearish factor was a decline in the lard market.

Bulk of 180 to 240-lb. butcher hogs Friday cashed at $14 to $14.25 cwt., with a few select kinds going at $14.35, $14.40 and $14.50. The top price a year ago was $19.60. From the June peak hog prices have declined 35 per cent, thus putting producers in a tight squeeze.

Veal calves closed steady to $1 higher. Good and choice steers bulked at $19 to $23.25, top $24. Veal calves sold downward from $28, which was paid sparingly for a few prime.

Bulk of choice to prime lambs for the week was $20.25 to $21; good and choice $18.50 to $20.

WEEK'S REVIEW OF BUSINESS AND FINANCE

you'll see a drop of "at least 10 per cent" next year in the number of new homes started.

A guessing game of sorts was stirred by Vice President's Nixon's statement that "credit terms which for a time were out of line now seem to be under control." Some interpreted the Nixon remark as indicating that controls on mortgage credit might soon be eased. James K. Vardaman Jr., a member of the Federal Reserve Board, said expansion of housing and consumer credit should be encouraged.

Interest Rates Climb.

Meanwhile the interest paid on short-term United States Treasury bills climbed to its highest level in more than two years, dealers in "commercial paper" (unsecured business loans) jacked up their interest rates, and there was talk in banking circles of hiking rates on consumer installment loans.

The American dollar, fortified by firming interest rates in this country, climbed back to parity with the Canadian dollar for the first time in three and one-half years.

Price trends were mostly on the upside this week. Increases were announced for carbon steel plates, zinc, newsprint, and Chrysler, DeSoto and Pontiac automobiles. Department stores said they were paying higher wholesale prices for leather jackets, men's and boys' underwear, work clothes, dolls, dacron pillows, lingerie, bric-a-brac, and bathroom hampers. Living costs, as measured by the United States Department of Labor, advanced in September to their highest point since August 1954.

Hog Prices Skid.

Big exception was the price of hogs on the hoof, which skidded to its lowest level since the OPA era of 1946. There were reports that the Federal Government might start buying pork, to bolster prices.

Briefly over the business scene: the international commerce commission decided to "indefinitely continue" the billion-dollar-a-year freight rate increase it granted to the railroads on a temporary basis in 1952. . . . Automobile production zoomed this week to 131,952 units, with Chevrolet setting the pace. . . . Industry sources predicted that sales of American wines this year will soar to an all-time high of 144,500,000 gallons.

MIXED ZINC PRICE RETURNS TO 13C BASE

Consumer Demand for Lead Shows Increase in Week.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (AP)—Zinc joined copper for a short time this week in the split price parade. Customers protested. And at the end of the week the price advance was rescinded and all hands were selling at the old price of 13 cents a pound East St. Louis.

The week of confusion in zinc prices came about this way:

Three producers boosted their base asking price for prime western grade zinc a half cent a pound the first of the week to 13½ cents. Other producers and custom firms sold metal at the unchanged base price of 13 cents.

The confusion increased when three prices were set for special high grade zinc, by week's end this had been cut down to two prices.

Special high grade zinc has been in short supply for months. The automobile industry is the greatest user.

For almost five years the price tag for special high grade zinc has been on the basis of 1½ cents a pound above the quotation for prime western. This price of 14½ cents for special high grade was maintained by those still selling prime western at 13 cents. The three producers boosting prime western to 13½ asked 15 cents for special high grade.

Then American Smelting & Refining Co. lifted its premium for special high grade by a quarter cent to 13¾ cents a pound. Since it is one of those retaining the 13-cent base price, its special high grade was thereby priced at 14¾ cents a pound.

Consumer thus found two prices set on prime western and three on special high grade.

Gen. Steel Castings Dividends.

General Steel Castings Corp. declared two dividends on the common stock, one of 30 cents a share and a special dividend of 60 cents a share, both payable Dec. 31, to common stockholders of record Dec. 20. The corporation reported nine months' income of $1,554,892.

HOW $20 SPENT FOR THE WALL STREET JOURNAL HELPED ME EARN $14,000

By a Subscriber

Since I started reading The Wall Street Journal, my income has increased from $9,000 to $14,000 a year.

But that is only part of the story. The Journal not only helps me earn more money—it also tells me how to get more value for the money I spend.

For example, an automotive article in The Journal helped me trade in my old car at the right time. An article on building supplies gave me ideas on remodeling my home and showed me how to save $700.

Articles on food and clothing point out the things to stock up on in order to save money. Articles on taxes guide me on what to do to keep my taxes down.

The Journal also gives me a better understanding of what is going on in the world. In conversation with other men I find that I know how to interpret business and government trends a little better than they do. They wonder where I get my "inside dope."

This story is typical. Because the reports in The Wall Street Journal come to you daily, you get quick warning of any new trend that may affect your income. You get the facts in time to protect your interests or seize a profit. The Journal is a wonderful aid to salaried men making $7,000 to $20,000 a year. It is valuable to owners of small business concerns. It can be of priceless benefit to ambitious young men.

The Wall Street Journal is the complete business DAILY. Has largest staff of writers on business and finance. The only business paper served by all four big press associations. It costs $20 a year, but you can get a Trial Subscription for three months for $6. Just tear out this ad and attach check for $6 and mail. Or tell us to bill you. SLP 10-23

Published daily right in the Midwest to bring you vital business and Washington news immediately.

Church, Civic, Welfare Groups Praised in Desegregation Here

Created 'Climate' for Public Acceptance Through Race Relations Work, Magazine Article Says.

Rapid desegration in St. Louis public schools was made possible because church, welfare and civic groups had created a "climate" for public acceptance through many years work in race relations, it was stated in an article in the November issue of Adult Leadership.

The article, "School Desegregation—The St. Louis Way," declared that when the United States Supreme Court ruled in 1954 that segregation in schools was unconstitutional, St. Louis was ready to go forward with an integration plan because of the groundwork of these organizations.

Author of the article was Ryerson Johnson, associate editor of the magazine, published by the Adult Education Association of the United States. The association will hold its annual national conference here Nov. 11 to 13.

Many Groups Helped.

Johnson reported many St. Louis individuals and organizations contributed to creating the public attitude which permitted integration to be achieved in St. Louis public schools more quickly and smoothly than in other places in the nation.

He pointed out that the St. Louis Board of Education approved a three-step desegregation plan a month after the Supreme Court's decision, and that the plan was carried out in three semesters with virtually no friction.

In citing a reason for the success of the St. Louis integration plan, the article quotes Virgil L. Border, Missouri director of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, as saying: "St. Louis was ready. Long before the Supreme Court's decision was announced, we had started building an emotional climate for its acceptance."

Organizations Mentioned.

Numerous organizations were credited with aiding in the betterment of race relations in St. Louis, including the Social Planning Council, the Y.M.C.A. and the Y.W.C.A., the Urban League, the League of Women Voters, the Mayor's Council on Human Relations, and AFL, CIO and school organizations.

An important role was played by church groups and leaders, including the Metropolitan Church Federation. Individuals named included Archbishop Joseph E. Ritter, Bishop William Scarlett, Mrs. George Gellhorn, Mrs. Roscoe Anderson and Henry V. Putzel.

During the "getting-ready" period, it was stated, many community organizations were themselves placed on an integrated basis. Forward steps were made when the staffs and the student bodies of St. Louis and Washington universities were opened to members of all races. Progress also was made, Johnson reported, through interracial activities in the public schools.

PROGRESS REPORT ON BOND ISSUE PROGRAM TO BE ON TV

A progress report on the city's $110,639,000 bond issue program will be presented by the League of Women Voters at 1:30 p.m. today in a panel discussion on Television Station KWK-TV.

Voters authorized issuance of bonds for 23 categories of public improvements last May 26. The report will outline the projects already under way and the meanings of the program to the future of St. Louis.

Speakers will be Sidney Maestre, board chairman of Mercantile Trust Co., who heads the citizens' committee supervising expenditure of bond funds; Mrs. C. E. Brungard, director of public welfare; William H. Coibion, planning director of the City Plan Commission, and Robert Smith, secretary to Mayor Raymond R. Tucker.

THE LEADER!

Life is a breeze for the average guy.
He never causes a hue and cry.
For the average man, life is just a song,
He can live in peace his whole life long.
But the one who rises above the crowd,
May find his critics many and loud.
On many a shoulder he'll find a chip,
For that's the penalty of leadership.
That ONE shall lead and others follow,
Is the Bitter pill—MOST must swallow.
The path of the LEADER is rocky and hard,
But the price of achievement is his reward.

ILLINOIS DEFEATED BY MICHIGAN STATE, 21 TO 7

Morrall Is Big Hero in 3d Period

Illinois	0	7	0	0	7
Mich. State	7	0	14	0	21

By Robert Morrison
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

EAST LANSING, Mich., Oct. 22—A sieve-like secondary on pass defense started Illinois toward its downfall and Michigan State made a business-like finish to its homecoming football affair today, 21 to 7.

The hard-charging, hard-tackling Spartans, with Quarterback Earl Morrall serving as head man in the fire control department, made 51,851 fans happy with two pass-borne touchdowns in the third quarter to break a 7-7 tie.

It was the second Big Ten triumph for the Spartans, who have lost only to Michigan in a total of five games, and the second conference setback for the outmanned Illini.

As a result, the Spartans of Duffy Daugherty moved into the league's first division as expected, and Illinois had a true measure of its relative strength in title play this season. The Illini now have a league mark of 1-2 in a 3-2 season overall.

Good First Half.

Ray Eliot's men played hard and well in the first half, but when their backfield defenders let Michigan State receivers get wide open for long touchdown pass plays in the third period, the Illini were broken.

Morrall, the 184-pound field general in the Spartans' multiple offense, made one pass that was good for 60 yards and a TD on the first State play from scrimmage in the third period. Sophomore Dave Kaiser was the receiver.

The other score capped a 56-yard drive, with Morrall throwing for 23 yards to Robert Jewett, who was all by himself in the end zone less than three minutes later.

So it was that Illinois was beaten by the same score by which Michigan State trimmed Notre Dame last week. Illinois was not overwhelmed on the ground as the Spartans made only 130 yards to 176 for the Illini. But the Orange and Blue definitely was whipped. The Spartans were only a foot short of scoring a fourth touchdown early in the last quarter.

In total offense Illinois had a scant edge, 280 to 270 yards, but in the second half, when they needed it, the Illini failed to push past midfield until late in the game. Time ran out on them when they reached the Spartan 19.

Completes 5 Out of 8.

Muskegon's Morrall, an 184-pound operator who made the Spartans click on this brilliant, sun-lit afternoon at Macklin Stadium, tossed the ball eight times, completed five passes and accounted for 136 yards gained as well as two touchdowns.

Moreover, he set up the first touchdown with a 30-yard pass to John Lewis, who reached the Illini 20 on the second Spartan play in the opening period.

Abe Woodson had punted to Walt Kowalczyk, soph Spartan back, who returned to the Michigan State 45. Gerry Planutis, State's big hero of last week, went over right end for five yards, Morrall's pass to Lewis got 30, and then Kowalczyk scored off left end, shaking loose from Illinois's Hiles Stout to complete the 20-yard touchdown jaunt.

That swift-striking, three-

Missouri's Jerry Curtright Skirts Nebraska End

—By Lloyd Spainhower, a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

Irish Come Back to Crush Purdue, 22-7

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Oct. 22 (AP)—Alert Notre Dame, raging after a defeat by Michigan State, turned Purdue's passing attack into a suicide weapon and avenged its only 1954 defeat today, 22-7, before a Ross-Ade Stadium crowd of 55,500.

Notre Dame	7	0	13	2	22
Purdue	0	7	0	0	7

Out-weighed 25 pounds per man up front, Notre Dame came up with its first unbalanced line in modern times and pushed the hulking Boilermakers all over the ground.

Notre Dame turned a Purdue fumble and an intercepted pass into third quarter touchdowns that broke a 7-7 tie. Irish Quarterback Paul Hornung also started the first drive by recovering a fumble. He pulled down another Purdue pass on his 20 to stop a promising Purdue drive in the same period.

Fullback Don Schaeffer and Halfbacks Dean Studer and Aubrey Lewis scored Notre Dame's touchdowns on short runs. Schaeffer kicked two extra points.

Quarterback Len Dawson passed 13 yards to end Leonard Zyzda for Purdue's single touchdown in the second quarter after Schaeffer plunged over for the Irish in the first.

Dawson also converted the extra point.

Notre Dame's ferocious rushing of Dawson set up a safety late in the period. Dawson was smeared repeatedly and the Boilermakers found themselves with a fourth down 50 yards to go on their 11. The pass from center sailed over Dawson's head into the end zone.

Notre Dame dominated the first half, although the Dawson-Zyzda scoring pass nullified the statistical difference up to the intermission. The Irish picked up 12 first downs to Purdue's 6 in the half, outgained Purdue 214 yards to 100 and yet stood 7-7 on the scoreboard.

Notre Dame marched to its first quarter touchdown after Hornung grabbed Bill Murakowski's fumble on the Notre Dame 40. Fullback Jim Morse ripped off 22 yards and Studer sprinted 19 to set up Schaffer's 2-yard plunge.

Halfback Erich Barnes of Purdue, who pestered the Irish all afternoon, picked off Morse's fumbled pitchout in the second quarter and started the Boilermakers' scoring drive from the Notre Dame 42.

Ends Bob Scannell and Dick Prendergast changed the picture in the third quarter by ganging up on Dawson when he dropped back to pass.

Scannell hit the Boilermaker quarterback so hard he dropped the ball and Prendergast fell on it at the Purdue 26. Studer plunged over four plays later.

Dawson hit End Lamar Lundy with 35 and 9-yard passes in the third quarter but Purdue reached only the Irish 32 and Morse intercepted another Dawson toss and ran it back to the Purdue 42. Lewis skirted right end on a nine-yard touchdown run nine plays later.

Notre Dame, gaining only eight yards on Hornung's one completed pass, surged 325 yards on the ground to Purdue's 75 during the game. Dawson completed 11 of 21 passes for 104 yards. Hornung threw only five passes an afternoon.

3 TDs by Siegel as Bears Win

Wash. U.	7	6	7	6	26
West.Mich.	7	7	0	0	14

By Jack Rice
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Oct. 22—Mel Siegel, a Bear in a china closet, busted up the little pieces of yards for three touchdowns and passed for a fourth one today as Washington University's football team discovered the right way to do many things. It developed into a 26-to-14 victory over Western Michigan.

Victory did not come as a complete surprise to the Bears. They had been telling themselves, after two successive defeats and a 1-and-3 record before today, that this was a likely time to recover. Western Michigan now has not won a game in six tries. That did not establish it as a patsy, however, for its schedule has been rather difficult.

The Bears had some faith in Bob Ladd, switched from blocking back to wingback. He did give them a boost midway to their first touchdown with a good 21-yard run. They also showed faith in Siegel's ability to cram himself through a mass of uniforms on goal-line plunges for touchdowns.

Mel the Pay Off Man.

The summary of the game was practically all Siegel. It wasn't as simple on the field as it was in the fine print, however. Siegel was the pay-off man on the scoring, but the contributions made by others, most notably Don Pilkinghorne in the 93-yard march for the final touchdown, were impressive.

Washington was somewhat impressive over-all. The Bears were behind 7-0 early in the first quarter, and were behind 14-13, at the end of the half. They rallied in the second half to win it, and there was authority in the way they did it.

Washington Coach Carl Snavely is not a breather of fire-and-brimstone at halftime lectures. "One-for-the-Gipper" speeches, in Snavely's judgment, do not accomplish the good of a quiet talk before a blackboard and drawing pictures of what's been wrong.

On the third play of the second half, Washington end Don Sauer did not need a picture drawn. He found himself within reach of a pass by Dick Barnhill, and intercepted it at Washington's 45. Polkinghorne ran three of the next four plays, gained 18 yards, and then Siegel passed to Sauer. The end

Clark Griffith Critically Ill

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (UP)—Clark Griffith, 85, president of the Washington Senators baseball club, suffered a stomach hemorrhage today and is in "critical" condition.

His physician, Dr. George Resta, said in a statement tonight that Griffith is receiving blood transfusions and his "chances of recovery are fair."

Griffith is baseball's oldest executive. He will be 86 on Nov. 20. He entered the Georgetown University Hospital on Wednesday to convalesce from an attack of neuritis from which he has been suffering for the past month.

Conflicting Bowling Edicts Make Lefty Out of Welu

After a series of conflicting decisions as to whether or not he would have to compete in the qualifying rounds despite an injured right arm in order to defend his city match game title, Billy Welu compromised by bowling three games of the opening round lefthanded last night at Arway Recreation.

Welu suffered a ruptured blood vessel in the upper part of his throwing arm last summer and reinjured it recently. Because the defending champion is automatically seeded into the finals of the city tournament, Welu asked permission to skip the qualifying round of 24 games. Cardinal trainer Bob Baumann had treated the arm and estimated that with the rest, Welu's injured member would be mended by the time the finals begin two weeks from now.

Last Wednesday Welu, 24-year-old member of the Budweiser team, was told by Ray Haefner, head of the tournament committee, that he would have to bowl in the qualifying round or forfeit his championship. On Thursday, after the committee was told of the medical report on Welu's arm, Billy was told that it would be sufficient if he appeared at last night's opening session and bowled perhaps one game, then withdrew.

Welu feared that any bowling at this time might permanently injure his arm, yet did not want to endanger his chance of retaining the city title.

"It was a difficult decision for me to make," Welu said, when asked about his lefthanded performance. "First the tournament committee said I'd have to bowl or forfeit, then they reversed their decision. I was afraid that if I just made an appearance, I might later be ruled out of the tournament.

"Finally, Mr. Haefner and

BILLY WELU

Mr. Pat Burke, president of the Bowling Proprietors' Association, convinced me that it would be all right to withdraw," Welu said. "So after rolling three games tonight, 84-82-89, I quit. I hope that I will be in shape to defend my city championship in the finals." J.J.A.

57-YARD INTERCEPTION AND TIGER FUMBLE ARE DECISIVE; HUSKER BOBBLES, TALLIES

By Bob Broeg
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 22—A fine-looking collection of potential department-store Santa Clauses, the University of Missouri football players who've vowed not to shave until they win a game, lost another one today. And it's beginning to look now—horrible thought—that they'll be tripping over their beards by Christmas.

Suffering their seventh straight defeat since last Thanksgiving—and sixth in a row this season of close shaves on the field and none off it—the bewhiskered Bengals repeated previous mechanical backfield mistakes and bowed to Nebraska at Memorial Stadium, 18 to 12.

An unhappy homecoming crowd of 25,300 watched in bluebird weather as the red-helmeted Huskers, scoring their first victory at Columbia in nine tries since 1937, seized on a fumble and pass interception to turn back the Tigers, who now have lost four times by one touchdown as well as once by a single point in a season as lean as thin man Don Faurot, the noble Mizzou headmaster of the gridiron.

The game figured to be a toss-up and that's just about what it was, Nebraska having the better backfield and Missouri the superior line, the Cornhuskers a crisper running game and the Tigers a sharper passing attack.

74 Plays by Tigers.

Missouri actually had greater control of the ball and gained more over-all yardage, 288 to 204, but, though in possession for 74 offensive plays to Nebraska's 61, the Black and Gold underlined just how futile a turn things can—and have—taken. For instance, at one stretch late in the third quarter and early in the fourth period the Tigers hogged the ball for 17 consecutive downs—with one sad exception.

That came on a dangerous across-field pass, thrown recklessly without flanking protection, into the flat zone, where Rex Fischer, rapid-running Nebraska halfback, picked off the ball and returned it 57 yards down the sideline for a touchdown. The play was regarded in both dressing rooms as decisive.

In addition, however, rivaling the aerial boomerang as a key play of the Big Seven Conference contest, a Tiger fumble immediately after the opening of the second half, at which time Missouri owned a 6-0 lead, required Nebraska to go only 38 yards for a tying touchdown.

Thereafter, exploiting a tenderness in Mizzou's defensive end play, the Huskers used T-formation wide plays in which guards pulled out to lead interference almost as deep and as strong as in single wing sweeps. Quarterback Don Erway, who was one of four Cornhuskers to play more than 50 minutes, cleverly tucked or faked tucking the ball into Nebraska backs. The belly series, as it's called, was troublesome especially during a 53-yard drive for the only Nebraska TD completely untainted.

55 Yards by Roll.

Missouri, for whom Fullback Gene Roll pick up 55 yards in 12 tries and star pass-catcher Hank Burnine snatched four more aerials for 42 yards, moved a bit better on the ground than before with B-team graduate Bill Griep quarterbacking for the first time. But it was the passing arm of unpredictable Dave Doane that struck for one Missouri score and set up the other.

Huskers Recover Wild Pitchout.

One series of downs after the third quarter opened, Griep's pitchout to Stringer went wild and was recovered by Nebraska's Laverne Torczon, a tackle, on the Tiger 38. A 17-yard split-T halfback running pass, lefthanded Willie Greenlaw to end Don Hewitt, featured the short surge. And it was climaxed with quite a stroke of good fortune for Nebraska, Greenlaw, plunging over from the two-yard line, fumbled—and recovered—in the end zone. When big Gene Campbell of East St. Louis roared in to block Erway's placekick, the score was 6-6, but not for long.

Curtright, hurried, got off a solid punt between two hulking white-shirted Nebraska linemen, a kick whose distance dwindled considerably as Harris sprinted back 18 yards with the ball to the visitors' 47. From there, nine plays were needed, including a 12-yard Erway pass to end Jon McWilliams. Damaging the Missouri cause was a 15-yard penalty for a personal foul. However, the Huskers, turning the Tiger flanks, shrugged off the potential trouble of an offsides violation. And Erway finally sneaked over the crest of a goal-line pile-up.

Three seconds remained in the third quarter as Nebraska went ahead, 12-6. Within three minutes the Cornhuskers had their final touchdown, though. As mentioned, the Tigers were on the move at the time, ranging in a balanced rushing and passing sortie from their own 14 to the Nebraska 44.

Fischer Snares Aerial.

There, fading back near the east hashmark, Doane lofted a pass diagonally to the west sidelines. Fischer, amply alerted, moved around a potential receiver, snared the pass and was off unmolested and unchallenged past his own bench until about the Missouri 20. Cutting back toward the middle, the Nebraska halfback eluded Doane and pursuer Schulz, scoring easily.

Later, Greenlaw halted another Mizzou march, collaring a Doane pass and returning 15 yards to the Tigers' 45. That time, though, Nebraska fumbled

Navy Sinks Pennsylvania, 33-0; Army Routs Columbia, 45-0

Quakers Drop 14th Straight

NAVY	7	19	0	7	—33

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22 (AP)—Unbeaten Navy, with star quarterback George Welsh on the bench, its bag of tricks in the locker room and an erstwhile junior varsity quarterback directing the attack, sailed to its fifth straight victory today, smashing downtrodden Penn 33-0 before 34,543 fans at Franklin Field.

Coach Eddie Erdelatz, confident his deep squad could handle anything the peaceful Quakers could muster, used second and third string players most of the way and apparently ordered his quarterback to use nothing but simple run and pass plays. Navy, the nation's fourth-ranking team, has a date with Notre Dame next week and seemed determined to keep Irish scouts in the dark.

The inept Penn team did little to upset the Navy's plans, dropping its fourteenth game in a row and extending the longest major college record without victory to 18 games. Penn hasn't won since it beat Navy 9-6 in Oct. 1953.

Penn lost little time helping Navy along the victory path. On the third play from scrimmage after the opening kickoff, Neil Hyland fumbled and Vernon Dander, Middie guard, recovered on the Penn 39.

Thomas Patrick Forrestal, no relation to the former Secretary of the Navy, a junior varsity quarterback until last Tuesday when he was promoted to the varsity, directed a 13-play drive climaxed by Chet Burchett's one-yard touchdown plunge. Before the half was over, the 18-year-old Forrestal, of Cleveland, plunged two yards for another score and passed 10 to All-America Ron Beagle for another.

One second before the half ended, Vince Monto, a second-string fullback, gathered in an 11-yard pass and skipped five more into the end zone. In the fourth Ed Malynn, a back not even listed in the three-deep lineup sheets, smashed six yards for a score. Ed Oldham booted two conversions and Jim Royer a third.

Navy, in adding Penn to its list of victims, which includes South Carolina, William and Mary, Pitt and Penn State, used 33 men as it marched up and down Franklin Field almost at will.

The Penn defense simply was unable to contain the tremendous surge of the Middie line and hard-running backs such as Oldham, Burchett and Dick Guest. On the few occasions when the Navy ball-carriers were unable to move, Forrestal took to the air with success.

The Middies broke the game wide open in the second quarter when they scored 19 points. The first maneuver, a 10-play, 39-yard drive was set in motion after Jim Hower, a 202-pound guard, intercepted a Penn pass on the Quakers' 39. Forrestal stepped across on a quarterback sneak from the 2.

A poor Penn punt set Navy up in business again on the Quaker 34 midway through the period and once again the Middies used 10 plays to score. Forrestal arched a 10-yard aerial to Beagle which the great end caught and then dropped as he was hit by a Penn defender. Despite vehement protests by Penn players the officials ruled that Beagle had had momentary possession of the ball and it was a touchdown.

As the clock ran out the final 30 seconds in the first half, Penn quarterback Rich Ross fumbled and Navy's Bill Mohn recovered on the Quaker 16. One second showed on the clock as third string quarterback Gus Prahalis passed to Monto, who caught the ball on the 5 and raced into the end zone.

Navy scoring: Touchdowns — Burchett (1, plunge); Forrestal (2, sneak); Beagle (10, pass from Forrestal); Monto (16, pass-run from Prahalis); Malynn (6, run). Conversions —Oldham 2, Royer.

Hey, That's Pass Interference!

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

Kirkwood High was guilty of pass interference in the second quarter of its game with University City yesterday. On this play JACK HOLDSBERG was prevented from a good try at catching the ball by Kirkwood's BOB CANNON (No. 50). BOB SILVER (No. 56) Kirkwood end, also moved in on the play. Kirkwood won, however, 13 to 6, to remain undefeated.

Sooners Spot Buffs 14, Rout Them, 56 to 21

COLORADO	0	14	0	7	—21
OKLAHOMA	0	21	14	21	—56

NORMAN, Okla., Oct. 22 (AP)—For three minutes in the second quarter Colorado lived in football heaven with a 14-0 lead over third-ranked Oklahoma today. Then the Sooners exploded the dream with 21 points in the same period and wound up with a 56-21 victory to roll on undefeated in 24 straight games.

The game which kept Oklahoma at the top of the Big Seven conference was a crowd-raising thriller in the second quarter. Five touchdowns were scored in the some of the fastest, most exciting action ever seen by a partisan, overflow crowd of 59,000.

Oklahoma had figured on trouble from Colorado—a big obstacle in the path of its eighth straight conference title—but nothing compared with what the Buffs stafted dishing out at the beginning of the contest with their single-wing formation.

Colorado turned two Oklahoma fumbles into touchdowns within five minutes of the second quarter in what appeared to be the making of the day's biggest football upset.

But the Sooners who had played listlessly in the first 20 minutes and didn't get past the 50, suddenly awakened like a sleeping giant annoyed by ants. The Sooners brushed Colorado aside for three touchdowns in quick succession to take the 21-14 lead at the intermission. Colorado couldn't catch its breath in the second half, and Oklahoma went about its business whenever it pleased.

John Bayuk and Emerson Wilson made the Buff's first two "glory" touchdowns and the final one came in the fourth quarter when Dick Hyson tossed 54 yards to Frank Clark.

Three Touchdowns by Siegel as Bears Win

caught it at the 10, and ran across for the touchdown, and kicked the extra point for a 20-14 lead.

Western Michigan tried to maintain the first-half game of one for you, one for me, on scoring. The Bears stopped the notion at their own seven, took over on downs, and in 16 plays marched on to their final touchdown. Polkinghorne accounted for 70 yards of the 93. He gained 61 in seven carries, and caught a Siegel pass for a nine-yard gain.

Siegel carried the ball the final two yards, as long a run as he had to make in his scoring efforts. Some 11 minutes remained, and the Bears spent them well, thwarting Western Michigan. Not even Washington's first fumble in three games, a butterfinger within their own five, dismayed the Bears.

They recovered from that as adequately as they had recovered from the initial shock of Western Michigan's large line, and a fast first quarter touchdown. Charley Nidiffer, Western Michigan's counterpart of Polkinghorne, did most of the carrying, and plunged over for a touchdown midway in the opening period. Tom Czyz kicked the extra point for a 7-0 lead.

Western Michigan's kickoffs were botched, and the Bears took over at midfield, and in eight plays tied the score. Siegel went the final two yards, and Sauer kicked the extra point.

The Bears took the lead early in the second quarter, as a 55-yard drive was completed on a Siegel plunge. The line of scrimmage was at the goal line, Sauer, a 60-minute man, missed that extra point. It seemed a big one when Nidiffer scored from a yard away, and Czyz made the extra point for a 14-18 lead in the final 30 seconds of the first half.

But there was a local homecoming tradition, floats by Western Michigan and touchdowns by Washington, to consider. The Bears now have won three Western Michigan homecoming and today's second-half program failed to offer the some 8000 persons anything they hadn't seen before, in that line.

Cadet Sub In 72-Yard TD Dash

Army	7	20	6	12	—45

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 22 (AP)—A churning 72-yard run by substitute Peter Lash highlighted a cascade of Army touchdowns which smothered fangless Columbia, 45-0, today to break a two-game losing streak for the men of West Point.

After his first line troops had rolled to four touchdowns in the opening half, Coach Earl Blaik called off the dogs and sought to show the Lions some mercy.

Army's varsity, stung by successive losses to Michigan and Syracuse, played less than half the game. But reserves such as Lash, Frank Burd and Bob Munger proved even more damaging.

Lash's high-stepping sprint came with 15 seconds left in the opening half on the first play from scrimmage after Army had taken a punt. He reversed his field twice, wormed out of at least two traps and galloped across the goal.

Dick Murtland, a jarring straightaway runner, scored two of the three last half touchdowns, plunging over from the one in the third period and sprinting nine yards in the second to end a 61-yard march.

The other came in the fading seconds when Army's alert third team recovered a fumble in Columbia territory and sent young Al Martina dashing over from 13 yards out.

The Cadets tallied in the first seven minutes after a bad kick by Jim Mooney had given them the ball on Columbia's 31. Mike Zeigler scored from the 10.

Two other touchdowns in the opening half came on marches of 66 and 69 yards. Pat Uebel plunged over from the two and Munger ran from the nine to climax the drives.

Army scoring—Touchdowns: Zeigler (10, run); Uebel (2, plunge); Munger (6, run); Lash (72, run; Mutland 2 (1, plunge; 9, run; Martina (12, run). Conversions: Chesnauskas 3.

Missouri Loses Sixth Straight, to Nebraska at the Missouri 17, where East Sider Paul Browning recovered.

Using Wynn on handoffs and Roll on fullback draw plays, Doane also passed complete to Burnine, once for five yards, before the offense appeared to run out of gas. Then, given more time than usual by a tiring Nebraska line, Doane dropped back and pegged a tremendous pass to fleet Johnny Powell. The Kansas City kid, completely in the clear, romped the last 13 yards of a 49-yard scoring play.

More than three and one-half minutes were left, but Nebraska, pounding out a precious first down, gave Missouri no more chances and retained possession until the final gun.

Roosevelt, Sumner and Vashon Win City Games

By Harold Tuthill

Art Smith, a 5-10, 163-pound halfback from Vashon High, tore through McKinley High's line at will last night as the Wolverines of Carl Granberry smashed the Goldbugs, 18-6, in a Public High League game.

It was the last of a triple-header program at the stadium on North Kingshighway, Sumner tripping Cleveland, 13-0, in one game and Roosevelt walloping Soldan, 26-0, in the other of a matinee twin bill.

Smith did a powerful lot of leather-lugging all evening, but his three touchdown runs were exceptionally long. He scored twice in the opening quarter, the first on a 30-yard dash and the second on a 72-yard burst of speed, which put Vashon in front after the first period, 12-0.

65-Yard Dazzler.

Smith went 65 yards for the fourth-quarter touchdown which just fattened Vashon's margin of victory.

McKinley struck early in the second quarter for its six-pointer, Jim Harrod going over from about 15 yards out.

Sumner's Earl Thomas hit the scoring column early in the first quarter when he galloped 53 yards off left tackle to give the Bulldogs their first tally. Palmer Hubbard passed to Melvin Smotherson for the extra point. Hubbard threw a "long one"—4 inches—to Thomas Rooks for the other TD.

The Rough Riders scored twice in the third quarter, once on a 53-yard run by Charles Matthews, and the other on a pass from Harry Hixson to Larry Lee.

Hixson scored again in the fourth, plunging over from the five yard line. Matthews also again tallied in the fourth, dashing 32 yards. Bob Lee ran one extra point, and Larry Kammien passed to Lawron DePriest for the other.

The victors posted their first league decisions, the results leaving Central and Washington Tech tied for first place, each with a 2-0 record.

C.B.C. Streak Stopped at 15 By De La Salle

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 22—St. Louis C.B.C. scored first but after that De La Salle High was ahead after every quarter as the Kansas City school won the inter-city rivalry, 28-27, here tonight.

The defeat was the first suffered by Babe Murphy's Cadets in 16 games, including six this season.

C.B.C. rolled up 110 yards in passing to nothing for De La Salle and used the airways to connect on TDs in the second and fourth quarters, Glen Merz getting one and Harry Ladd the other. Tom McDonnel scored in the first quarter and Charles Bollmeier in the third period. Bob Guion converted three times.

Manuel Perice, who ran 79 yards in the second quarter, accounted for two of De La Salle's tallies. Joe Constanza got one and Phil Vergin the other. Vergin also converted four times, the last point giving the Kansas Citians a 28-20 lead in the fourth quarter.

BETWEEN ROUNDS

By W. J. McGoogan

Can't Tell Boxers By Their Names.

ISAAC LOGART would be about the last name you would select if you had your choice and you were going to be a boxer. It doesn't sound like a fighting name and in the old days he probably would have been known as something like "Terrible Terry McGovern."

That would have been before commissions, formal contracts and what have you when the average boxer frequently started out by changing his name, generally to one which sounded Irish.

Logart, a native of Camaguey, Cuba, the home of Gerardo Gonzalez, known to the ring as "Kid Gavilan," didn't have to change his name to prove that he is a fighting man, however.

He gave Gil Turner, of Philadelphia, ringside fans and televiewers a good sample of his wares the other night when he defeated Turner in a close match at Madison Square Garden.

Gil, tenth-ranking middleweight, was favored to defeat the Cuban who, like Gavilan, is fond of dancing. But Isaac took everything Turner threw his way and showed an excellent left hand in stopping Turner's rushes.

Stories from ringside indicate that it was the fine finish that earned the decision for Logart. And on TV you could easily see that Isaac finished the stronger, although he was never able to bring down Turner or even come close to it.

He has proved himself as deserving top ranking in the middleweight division, a weight class (160 pounds) which remains the most active and the best, probably, among the eight groups in boxing today.

Ray Robinson will attempt to win back the title in the division from Carl (Bobo) Olson at Chicago on Nov 4.

But, speaking of the old days and boxers changing their names, it has long been a custom of the ring to do so. Sometimes it was for the purpose of fooling parents who forbade their boys to box.

Again, it was to avoid the use of a name which managers or publicity men thought were not suited to the ring.

That is probably the case with Rocky Marciano whose real name is Rocco Marchegiano. Also with Joe Maxim whose name actually is Guiseppi Antonio Berardinelli.

Jack Dempsey and Nonpareil.

SOMETIMES a name leads to confusion. Jack Dempsey likes to tell the story of the time he met the daughter of the original Jack Dempsey, who was known as the Nonpareil. That Dempsey's correct name was John Kelly while the current Jack Dempsey actually is William Harrison Dempsey.

The Nonpareil's daughter argued with Jack about the use of the name which was her father's and let Jack know in no uncertain terms that she didn't appreciate it. She thought, naturally, that Jack's name was something other than Dempsey.

Jack explained to her that after all he did have the right to the name of Dempsey because it was actually his family name.

"Something which was not true of your father," Jack told the lady, gently.

And an Irish fight fan at the time who idolized Dempsey until Jack was defeated the first time by Gene Tunney, asked anxiously:

"Is Dempsey really his name?"

Well it was, and is.

The International Boxing Club has obtained a license to operate in Missouri. Emory Jones, director of The Arena presented the application and check to Commissioner Charley Pian the other day and told Charley that there would be no bouts at the Oakland avenue building before December.

Due to a change in plans of the I. B. C. the bout scheduled to be held here in October was changed. The Arena will be occupied by an ice show through the greater part of November, so that the first available date will be in December.

Texas Aggies Clout Baylor, Boom to Lead

TEXAS A. & M.	7	6	6	0	—19
BAYLOR	—	— 7	0	0	— 7

COLLEGE STATION, Tex., Oct. 22 (UP)—Joltin' Jack Pardee jarred Baylor's touted line apart at the seams today as Texas A. & M.'s Aggies carved out a 19-7 victory that boomed them to the top of the Southwest Conference.

Behind a supercharged line that smothered Baylor's heralded running attack to 34 net yards, Pardee and 10 other Aggie backs roamed for 265 yards and touchdowns in the first three periods.

Pardee, a six-man football graduate from tiny Christoval, Tex., scored on line plunges of one and two yards in the second and third periods after Quarterback Donald Grant had shot the Aggies out in front in the opening period with a one-yard scoring sneak.

Sixth in Row for Pioneers

U. CITY	—	—0	0	0	6— 6
KIRKWOOD	—	6	7	0	0—13

By John J. Archibald

Kirkwood's marvelous linemen, their white uniforms smeared with grime and their muscles aching from an afternoon's pounding by experts, reached their proudest moment before an overflow crowd on their home field yesterday. Although the No. 1 unit was scored upon in the final moment for the first time in six games, it was these often-overlooked defensemen that claimed greatest praise as Kirkwood stopped previously unbeaten University City, 13 to 6.

In the second half, after Kirkwood ball carriers had helped provide a 13-0 lead in the first two quarters, it was the line that had to work overtime. University City was determined and its runners were good, but Coach Bill Lenich's Pioneers held them back just enough.

While Kirkwood was able to control the ball in the second half for just 13 plays, U. City passed and smashed forward 42 times. The Indians made 11 first downs in the half to Kirkwood's one (and a game total of 17 to 5), but Kirkwood made their early touchdowns hold up.

In Undisputed Lead.

The victory put Kirkwood in undisputed possession of the Suburban League Big Six lead with two victories and no losses. Ritenour, which like U. City has a 2-1 league record, is the greatest remaining obstacle between Kirkwood and the championship. They'll meet on Nov. 11.

Kirkwood has a perfect record for the season, winning all six of its games. Only four touchdowns have been made by the half-dozen opponents, and the other three were made late in the game against Pioneer reserves. Yesterday's U. City touchdown, made on a one-yard plunge by ailing Bill Comfort with 30 seconds left in the game, was the first score against the starting team.

Comfort was used only in spots by Muhl because of recurrent asthma that had kept the speedy halfback away from practice during the entire week.

Right Guard Dick Rohlf again was a standout in the Kirkwood defense as he busted up play after play with his tackles, but he had lots of help. John Silver, Bob Silver, Bert Brock, Steve Morgan and the fullback who moves up, Terry Mackey, all shone against Coach Stub Muhl's Indians.

Kirkwood's secondary consisted of Al Goggan, Harrison Trask, Bob Cannon, Gene McClanahan and Phil Hoffsten.

U. City, well aware of the Kirkwood defensive strength, immediately took to the air as the game opened. Two successive 20-yard passes by Rich Aberson put the Indians on Kirkwood's 34, but the attack stalled there. Kirkwood took a punt to its 17 and there began a touchdown drive.

Touchdown Made Twice.

The Pioneers had to score the TD twice. After McClanahan broke through and went 53 yards to the goal line, the play was nullified by an offsides penalty. On the next play, a reverse that sent the ball from Quarterback Coggan to McClanahan to Cannon set Cannon loose on a 58-yeard touchdown run. The kick for extra point was wide.

Later in the quarter Kirkwood started a march from its 49 after McClanahan intercepted a pass. A 32-yard sprint by Coogan in the second quarter helped set up the score and Mackey finally plunged over from one foot out. Coggan ran the extra point successfully.

The only University City drive to pay off began on the Kirkwood 48. A 15-yard pass from Jack Holdsberg to Curtis Jones put the Indians on the one-yard line and Comfort drove through. When Kirkwood received the kickoff it just stalled at its 20 until time—and the Kirkwood fans among the 5000 spectators—ran out.

Wesleyan Runs Over Amherst Team, 25-6

AMHERST, Mass., Oct. 22 (AP)—Wesleyan's powerful running attack was too much for Amherst today and the visiting Cardinals registered a 25-6 triumph in the opening game of the Little Three round robin.

Wesleyan registered twice in the second quarter, after threatening throughout a scoreless opening quarter. Those two touchdowns, by Halfback Don Denault on a one-yard smash and Hayes Baker sweeping left end 18 yards, were all the visitors needed.

Spartan Defense Too Stout for Stout

Patterson Gets 1320 to Lead In Pin Tourney

Pat Patterson of the St. Louis All-Star's Budweiser team, creator of three perfect 300 games during the 1954-55 season, moved along at a 220 gait to score 1320 total for six games to take the lead in the men's division of the Greater St. Louis Bowling Proprietors' annual city match game elimination tourney last night at Arway Recreation. Patterson had games of 234, 193, 242, 200, 216 and 235.

Another All-Star bowler, Frank Mataya of the Griesedieck, shot 1248 for second place. Both bowlers were competing on the 4 p.m. squad. Bill Tucker was the pacesetter in the first squad with 1147.

Today's action starts at 2 p.m. with the last men's squad rolling at 9:15 o'clock. Competition continues next two weekends.

Huskies Tied By Stanford; Trojans Romp

WASHINGTON	7	0	0	0	—7
STANFORD	—	7	0	0	—7

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 22 (UP)—Washington and Stanford exchanged first-period touchdowns and then battled tooth and toenail to a 7-7 tie in a Pacific Coast Conference thriller before an estimated 43,500 fans today.

The tie halted a three-game winning streak for the Huskies in conference play and dampened their hopes for Rose Bowl competition. On the other hand, it was the best league effort Stanford has made this season, after two losses.

Goal line stands by both teams were the order of the day and fumbles set up both touchdown plays.

Washington scored three minutes and 53 seconds after the start when Ed Sheron recovered Stanford Quarterback John Brodie's fumble on the Stanford 19. The Huskies crossed the goal line five plays later. Halfback Mike Monroe clutched Steve Roake's pitchout and circled right end to score. Dean Derby kicked the extra point.

Stanford came back six minutes later. Bill Tarr led a drive to Washington's 10-yard line, only to lose the ball on downs, mainly because of the expert tackling of End Corky Lewis. But as soon as Washington took over, Roake tried to pitch out to Monroe and the ball was fumbled. Stanford Center Joe Long recovered on the 10. On the next play, Tarr twisted into the end zone. Mike Raftery kicked the extra point to tie the score.

Tarr was Stanford's workhorse. He packed the ball 27 times—many times more than any other man on the field—for an average of 4.3. He alone accounted for 117 of the Indians' net gain of 245 yards.

Great Show by Arnett.

BERKELEY, Calif., Oct. 22 (UP)—Sparked by the brilliant running and passing of Halfback Jon Arnett, who scored three touchdowns, the University of Southern California Trojans rolled over the hapless California Bears 33-6 to day before 51,000.

Arnett, putting on another of his great bids for All-America recognition, scored the first touchdown in the first quarter on a six-yard end run; he got another early in the fourth when he scored from the four after packing the ball most of the time on a 78-yard march in 13 plays; Jon scored again from the six after the pass interception by Duval in the closing minutes.

Arnett now has scored 71 points this season, 61 in conference play.

Illinois Defeated by Michigan State's Long Aerial Plays, 21 to 7

play move was the only standout drive by the eventual winners in the first half except for a blocked field goal attempt late in the second quarter that was spoiled when Rod Hanson and George Walsh smothered Planutis's placement attempt and recovered the ball at the Illinois 26.

The Illini, however, snapped right back from the Spartans' opening score and the second time the Illini had possession, Em Lindbeck marshalled a 68-yard drive for the touchdown he scored early in the second period.

Gains by Bates, Jefferson.

Mickey Bates made early gains in that drive; Harry Jefferson, who totaled 62 yards to lead Illinois rushing, broke through a big hole in the line for 19 yards to reach the Spartan 32 on a key play.

Lindbeck's fake pitchout and pass to Francis for 11, and Soph Fullback Ray Nitschke's nine-yard smash up the middle carried the Illini to the 12 as the first period ended, and then Lindbeck passed and ran for the rest of the distance in the march that required 15 plays. Lindbeck went over on a rollout that turned into a four-yard right end run and when Dick Miller converted, the score was tied.

But less than a minute after the second half opened the Spartans clicked on the 60-yard pass play and Illinois was heading for its defeat.

An offside penalty on Illinois as it kicked off to start the second half became a most important error. On Dick Miller's first and nullified kickoff, Planutis stumbled and was down on his eight-yard line. On Miller's rekick from the Illinois 35, Gerald Musetti raced back to the Michigan State 40. So it was from there, on the first play, that Morrall passed to Kaiser for the 60-yard scoring play. Nobody was near Kaiser at the Illinois 30 and he raced easily over the goal. It was Bates's assignment.

56-Yard Drive.

The kickoff mistake was the key to the game, Eliot said later, as he lamented his team's errors but gave Morrall credit for calling and playing a perfect game for a very fine ball club.

Clarence Peaks, Michigan State star sidelined by injury, made a token appearance shortly thereafter as the Spartan spirit rose. Then the next time the home team got the ball, it drove 56 yards to score, 23 yards coming on Morrall's pass. His last heave, on fourth and nine to go at the Illini 23, found Jewett in the end zone.

Spartan Coach Daugherty took some of the pain out of the pass defense lapses.

"Illinois did a fine job of defending against our running and in doing so had to gamble on our passes," said Duffy. "Illinois will make trouble for someone in the future."

Purdue is next, in the homecoming game at Champaign.

Colgate Whips Yale, 7-0; Dartmouth Beats Harvard, 14-9

First Loss Of Season For Elis

COLGATE— — 0 0 0 7—7

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 22 (AP) — Colgate's fast-charging line shook Frank Nardulli loose on a 15-yard run in the fourth quarter today and he scored the touchdown that gave the Red Raiders a 7-0 triumph over Yale, the first defeat of the season for the losers.

Until 2:09 of the last quarter, it had been a terrific battle of lines, with Colgate's forward wall dominating and in the end deserving the victory, the first over Yale since 1915. They had played scoreless ties in the only two meetings since then.

The season's largest Yale Bowl crowd of 42,000 saw Colgate barely miss scoring another touchdown late in the last period when Ed Vantine fumbled after crossing the goal line. Dean Loucks recovered the ball, and it was a touchback.

The only tally came after a 73-yard drive in which Nardulli starred with runs of 29 and 15 yards, the latter for the score. The touchdown came on an off-tackle play in which Nardulli raced the final distance standing up. Guy Martin kicked the extra point.

Colgate, not a member of any conference, now has defeated four Ivy League teams this season.

Ohio Rallies To Win No. 2 In Big Ten

OHIO STATE— 0 12 0 14—26
WISCONSIN — 0 14 0 2—16

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 22 (AP) —Ohio State smashed Wisconsin, 26-16, today for the fourth time in a row and snatched a share of the Big Ten football lead with Quarterback Frank Ellwood at the throttle of an express-train ground attack that wouldn't be stopped.

The Buckeyes moved into a first place tie with Michigan in the Big Ten race in handing Wisconsin its first conference loss before a record Camp Randall crowd of 53,529. Michigan, which edged Minnesota, 14-13, today, has won three without a loss while Ohio State is undefeated in two starts.

Ohio State spotted Wisconsin a two-touchdown lead early in the second quarter, then roared back with a relentless running assault for two touchdowns in the second and two more in the fourth.

Ellwood, 5-11, 193-pounder from Dover, O., who runs more than most quarterbacks and isn't afraid to put himself on the spot, led the Buckeyes' goal-line charges with three touchdowns. All-America Howard (Hopalong) Cassady, not so spectacular as he has been but still plenty of ballplayer, accounted for the other marker.

Pat Levenhagen and Charley Thomas scored for the Badgers within four minutes at the start of the second period and it looked as though Wisconsin were off and winging, but Ohio State had other ideas.

The Bucs thus prolonged their mastery over the Badgers. They now have taken the measure of Wisconsin in seven of their last eight meetings. The other game ended in a 6-6 tie. Ivy Williamson, who took over Wisconsin's coaching reins in 1949, still is looking for his first victory over Ohio State.

Ohio State scoring — Touchdowns: Cassady (13, run); Ellwood 3 (1, sneak; 3, run; 1, sneak). Conversions: Kriss, Cannavino.

Wisconsin scoring — Touchdowns: Levenhagen (4, run); Thomas (2, plunge). Safety: Ellwood (downed ball in end zone).

Triple Dead Heat, Million to One Shot, Run at Caliente

AGUA CALIENTE, Mex., Oct. 22 (UP)—Three horses thundered to the wire locked in a triple dead-heat here today, although the odds are said to be more than a million to one against it.

Stormsorno, Beaufair and Chance Speed finished in a photographic tie at the end of the eighth race—the first such occurrence in 26 years of Caliente racing history.

The bid for turfdom's hall of fame began deep in the stretch of the mile event when the trio of gallopers fanned out head and head. They wheeled the last 70 yards locked together and with their noses as one at the wire.

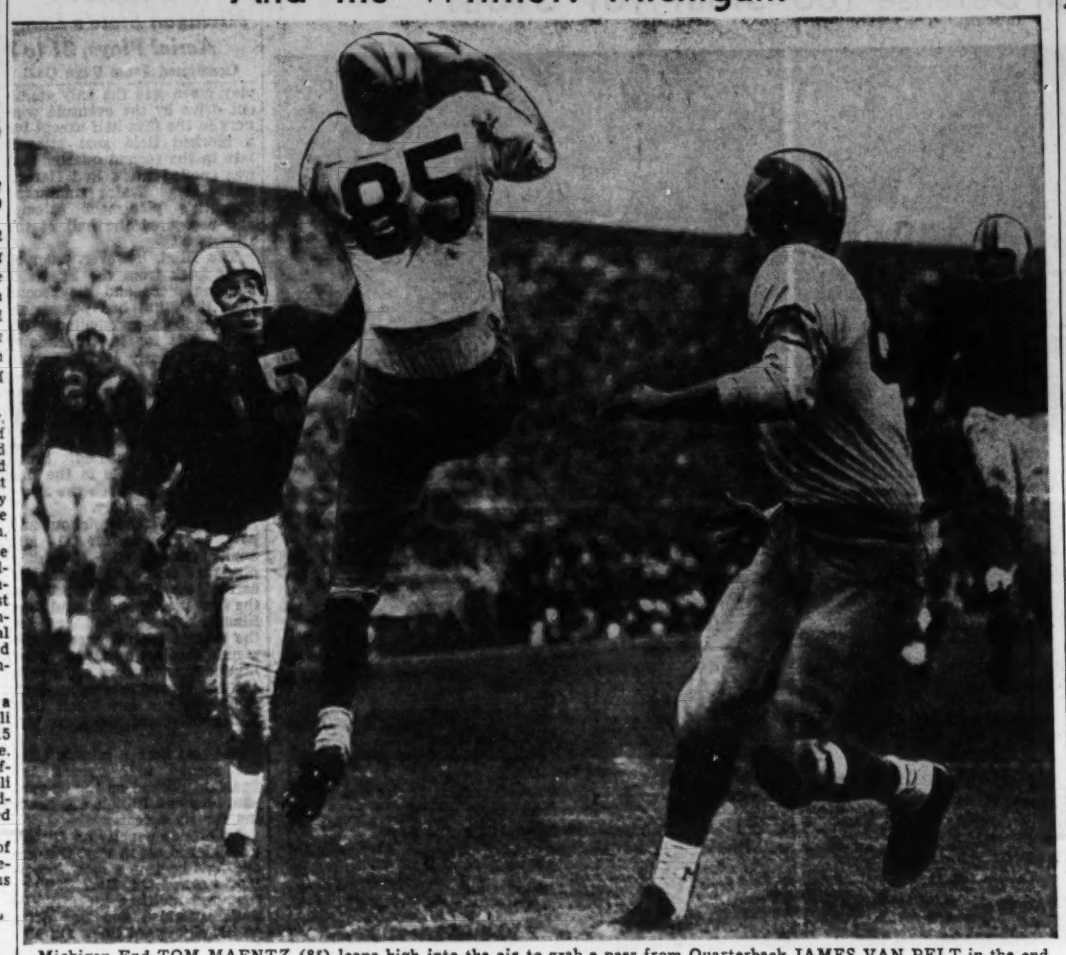
Stormsorno, ridden by Manuel Esparza and owned by John Mitchell, paid $6.60, 5.40 and 5.40. Beaufair, owned by J. Lambert and ridden by Louis M. Leon, paid $6.00, 9.40 and 7.00. Chance Speed, owned by Mr. and Mrs. L. Curtis and ridden by Rene Cruzat, paid $7.00, 6.00 and 7.60. Time for the mile was 1:39 1-5.

So remote is the possibility of a triple dead-heat to win, that there were no lights in the tote board for the straight price of the third winner, so the price was announced over the public address system.

Miners Win, 19-14.

KIRKSVILLE, Mo., Oct. 22 (AP)—Roger Feaster threw two touchdown passes to Jim Murphy in the last quarter to give the Missouri Miners from Rolla a 19-14 MIAA victory over Kirksville today.

And the Winner! Michigan!



Michigan End TOM MAENTZ (85) leaps high into the air to grab a pass from Quarterback JAMES VAN PELT in the end zone for Michigan's winning touchdown in the Little Brown Jug battle with Minnesota. Gopher DICK LARSON (15) couldn't quite reach the ball. The score decided the close contest, 14-13, in favor of Michigan.

Beagle's Passes Decisive

HARVARD — 0 2 7 0— 9
DARTMOUTH 0 7 0 7—14

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 22 (AP)—Passing artist Bill Beagle tossed for one touchdown and scored another as an injury-riddled, but spirited Dartmouth football team gained its first victory after four losses today with a 14-9 upset over Harvard in the fifty-ninth game of an Ivy League rivalry.

Beagle, a 6-foot, 170-pound senior, turned in one of his best performances as he sparked the Indians to touchdowns in the second and fourth quarters.

In the second period, the slick quarterback from Danville, Pa., switched from his normal routine of firing bullet-like passes and lobbed the ball to his favorite target, end Monte Pascoe.

Pascoe took the ball on the goal line and stepped into the end zone to complete a 24-yard scoring play. Beagle place-kicked the Big Green into a 7-0 lead.

Harvard picked up two points on a safety in the second quarter and moved ahead in the third quarter when Matt Botsford circled end for 13 yards and a touchdown and Bill Crosby converted.

Beagle found the range again and the Indians rolled 71 yards in eight plays for the winning touchdown in the fourth period. The slender flinger completed three passes in the march and wound up matters by personally covering the final five yards on three sneaks.

A. L. Trout, Former Centralia (Ill.) Coach, Is Critically Ill

OAKTOWN, Ind. (AP)—Arthur L. Trout, onetime dean of Illinois high school coaches, is critically ill at the farm home of a daughter near Oaktown. Trout coached at Centralia high school for 37 years and was the first to bring three state basketball championships to one school.

A heart stroke in January of 1951 left his right hand paralyzed and forced him to retire.

Now, just two weeks from his 68th birthday, Nov. 5, Trout is suffering the effects of more recent attacks which have kept him confined to bed since June. His wife described his present condition as critical.

Gophers Garner Glory But Michigan Wins, 14-13

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 22 (AP) — Minnesota shook proud Michigan to its very foundation today before the top-ranked football team in the land wiped out a two-touchdown deficit for a harrowing 14-13 victory.

MICHIGAN — 0 7 7 0—14
MINNESOTA - 13 0 0 0—13

The thrice-beaten Gophers startled a crowd of 64,434, a regional television audience, and the unbeaten Wolverines with two lightning touchdowns in the first quarter and appeared destined for the upset of the season.

But Michigan gathered itself for a sudden touchdown late in the second quarter on two brilliantly executed pass plays, then killed the Gophers' upset hopes wih a nine-yard touchdown pitch from sophmore Jim Van Pelt to Tom Maentz in the third period.

The vital play, although it appeared relatively unimportant at the time, was Terry Barr's block of Mike Falls' conversion try after the second Gopher touchdown. Tony Branoff and Van Pelt kicked perfect placements for Michigan.

Famed for its talent for exploiting rival mistakes, Michigan put itself in for trouble twice in the first period and Minnesota cashed in superbly.

Barr fumbled Rhody Tuszka's put midway through the period and the Wolverine halfback was nailed on the Michigan 3 before he could recover.

Pinky McNamara sped back to the Michigan 24 with the ensuing punt. Ken Yackel barreled to the 13, then to the 8 and sophomore Bob Schultz streaked over on the next play.

Minnesota scored again within 3½ minutes following a short Michigan kick, Yackel driving over from the 16.

A 36 yard pass-lateral from Van Pelt to Mike Routunno to Ed Shannon carried to the Minnesota 28, late in the half. Barr found Maentz with another pass on the five and Barr tore over from there.

Michigan paraded 48 yards for its winning score in the third quarter, Van Pelt lobbing to Maentz in the end zone after Minnesota stiffened on the 9.

The victory was Michigan's fifth in a row and gave it continued possession of the famed Little Brown Jug.

Prince Shows Princeton Way In 26-20 Win

PRINCETON 7 7 6 6—26
CORNELL 7 0 0 13—20

ITHACA, N.Y., Oct. 22 (AP)—The smooth power of Princeton's single wing helped overcome the Tigers' own mistakes and the individual brilliance of Billy De Graaf and Bo Roberson today as Princeton scored a 26-20 victory over Cornell.

There wasn't much that was sensational about the Tigers' play except the crispness of their blocking and the consistency of their ground-gaining. Sid Prince was their big gun on attack.

De Graaf, Roberson and Dick Jackson provided the thrills for Cornell's homecoming crowd of 25,000. Roberson, a 185-pound sophomore from Philadelphia, raced 74 yards on a reverse play engineered by De Graaf, for the opening touchdown.

Then the Cornell quarterback, supposedly unable to play because of a spine injury suffered last week, cut loose passes to Jackson and to Stan Intihar for two fourth-quarter scores that kept Cornell very much in the game.

Princeton ground out a touchdown in each quarter with Sid Pinch scoring one, passing to Ben Spinelli for another and helping to set up the other two, both scored by Fullback Dick Martin on short plunges.

The Tigers marched 66, 80, 80 and 73 yards for their four touchdowns. They were stopped only once in Cornell territory and had to punt only once. That was when a pass from center missed the intended ball carrier and rolled back to the Princeton five before Pinch recovered it.

Princeton scoring — Touchdowns: Martin 2 (1, plunge; 1, plunge); Pinch (3, run); Spinelli (4, pass from Pinch). Conversions: Martin 2.

Cornell scoring—Touchdowns: Roberson (74, run); Jackson (10, pass from De Graaf); Intihar (9, pass from De Graaf). Conversions: De Graaf 2.

SMU Defeats Kansas, 33-14

KANSAS — — 0 7 7 0—14
S. METHODIST 0 7 12 14—33

LAWRENCE, Kan., Oct. 22 (UP)—Halfback Don McIlhenny, a hard charging, shifty senior, scored four times to lead Southern Methodist to a 33-14 victory over Kansas here today.

The 189-pound halfback turned three Kansas fumbles—two of them within the three yard line—into tallies.

McIlhenny scored twice from the one-yard line, and once each from the three and 15-yard lines.

Kansas star punter Ted Rohde gave SMU its first two touchdowns when he fumbled two center passes, one on the one-yard line in the second quarter and the other on the three in the third period. McIlhenny dived over both times.

The Jayhawks took a temporary lead in the third period, 14-13, on the strength of two iron-nerved, fourth-down TD passes by quarterback Wally Strauch to end Jim Letcavits. The first came in the second quarter for eight yards and the second one was an 11-yard toss in the third frame.

NOTRE DAME'S football game with Navy here next Saturday was designated the Knute K. Rockne Memorial game today by Edward W. Krause, Irish athletic director.

Mrs. Rockne, who lives here and seldom misses a home game; Jesse Harper of Sitka, Kan., who coached at Notre Dame when Rockne played and most of the coaches who have followed Rockne at Notre Dame will be introduced in halftime ceremonies.

Charles Ill, Bout With Toxie Hall Set Back

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 22 (UP)—A 10-round boxing match between Ezzard Charles, former heavyweight champion, and Toxie Hall, scheduled Oct. 31 has been postponed to Nov. 14, it was announced today.

Tony Tannas, co-manager of the former champ, said Charles had a mild attack of the grippe and Matchmaker Manny Almeida rescheduled the bout.

Hall attracted national attention last spring when he floored Heavyweight Champion Rocky Marciano in a sparring match. He is taking on the veteran 34-year-old slugger from Cincinnati in a bid to move up in the heavyweight standings.

Cards' Boyer and Virdon On First Year All-Stars

Standing of the clubs in the 1955 major league races had little influence in the selection of players that make up the annual Rookie All-Star team announced last night by The Sporting News.

For example, the Cardinals, seventh in the National League, supplied two players and so did Washington, last in the American.

Ken Boyer, third baseman, and Bill Virdon, center fielder, are the Cardinal players selected by a poll of sportswriters. Recently, Virdon and Herb Score, Cleveland southpaw, were named rookies of the year by The Sporting News.

For the first time in four years, American Leaguers dominated the squad of first-year stars. Eight of the 11 players named played on A.L. clubs. Thus, the Cardinals placed two of the National's three players.

Voted to the all-rookie team were:

Olympic Hopes in Action in Intercity Soccer Match Today

Rival Centers

They will be the attack leaders in the soccer match at Oakland Stadium this afternoon.

Penn Team Real Test For Kutis

By Dent McSkimming

Fans who watch the Kutis-Harmarville soccer match at Oakland Stadium this afternoon should pay special attention to several of the visiting players. The next time they hear about Goalie Don Malinowski, Center Halfback Bill Baxter and Center Forward Bob Craddock may well be when the United States Olympic squad is announced.

All three are highly regarded as Olympic team material and all have a background of good performance in international matches, Malinowski as recently as the Iceland tour of last August.

In the Pittsburgh area, this Harmarville team is regarded as the outstanding eleven of the soccer-rich district. It is leading the Keystone League, unbeaten, and has defeated the reigning national amateur champion, Heidelberg.

Three years ago, Harmarville eliminated St. Louis Simpkins from the national Open Cup competition by winning, 2-1, after a scoreless tie at Pittsburgh. Malinowski, the two fullbacks, one halfback and two forwards of today's team were on that club that beat Simpkins at North Side Park. The Simpkins, at that time, were a sound team and Harmarville's victory was accomplished only through hard work and good team coordination. Harmarville then won the United States Open title.

Tryouts Late Next Month.

Of course, there will be a few Kutis players in action who will make strong bids for Olympic squad consideration, too.

Harry Luecke, Missouri Soccer Commission secretary, has announced that a preliminary Olympic tryout will be held here late next month. Kansas City and Texas cities will be invited to send their best men, too. Members of the U.S.S.-F.A.'s Olympic committee plan to be here to observe. Interstate trials will follow. Later, the United States team will meet Mexico in a home-and-home series to determine which shall represent the North American zone at Melbourne a year from now.

With Tom Julius back in action after resting an injured knee, and Bill Eppy improving with each game, the Kutis squad is even better fortified than it was at the same point last season. It remains only for the forwards to develop better understanding and to perfect the fast breaking attack they used last Sunday to insure success.

This test against experienced Harmarville backs should determine whether Manager Nick Jost has a team that can go all the way through the national title competition. Harmarville is certainly a potential U.S. Open Cup winner.

Kutis has scored 16 goals and allowed four in winning two, tying one and losing one game. . . . Jost has invited Milwaukee Serbians to come here soon to give Kutis a chance to avenge that 1-0 defeat suffered at Milwaukee Sept. 4. . . . Women and children will be admitted free to today's games at Oakland Stadium. . . . Municipal League teams, Dogtown Amvets and Hawks. . . . Both have lost two league games. . . .

Manager Joe Numi regards his Simpkins team stronger now than it was last season. . . . Pete Traina is reaching the peak predicted for him; Gino Pariani, getting all the ball practice he needs, is back to his form of several years ago, and veteran fullbacks, John Galimberti and Bob Fitzgerald are down to playing weight earlier than usual. . . . Simpkins' next difficult foe in Khoury League play will be Meramecs on Nov. 13. . . . The all-German Meramecs are 50 per cent stronger than last year. . . . Liberty and Brehenys meet in the top match of the Khoury schedule today. . . . Each lost to Simpkins, 2-0, and each defeated Diamonds, 6-0 and 5-0, respectively.

Culver-Stockton, Principia Tie, 13-13

Culver-Stockton and Principia College football teams fought to a 13-13 deadlock yesterday at Elsah, Ill., field. Both of Principia's touchdowns were made in the opening period and the Missouri eleven registered a TD in the first and third quarters.

Ty Anderson took Ted Munneke's 30-yard pass to score the first Principia TD. Phil Morris of Culver-Stockton took the kickoff and ran 90 yards for a score. Anderson blocked a goal-line punt and fell on the ball for the second Principia tally. Carl Burns made the third period score on a line plunge from the six-yard mark.

Maryland Has Easy Time With Syracuse, 34-13

MARYLAND	14	6	14	0	—34
SYRACUSE	0	7	0	6	—13

SYRACUSE, N.Y., Oct. 22 (AP)—Powerful Maryland, ranked No. 2 in the nation, bolstered its chances of an Orange Bowl trip, today by manhandling Syracuse 34-13 behind a solid line that opened the holes for Ed Vereb, Phil Perlo and Jack Healey.

Smashing over two touchdowns in the first period with Perlo blasting 6 yards for the first and Vereb throwing 17 yards to Russ Dennis for the second, Maryland was threatened seriously only once.

The Syracuse team that upset Army last week clicked for an eye-popping 30-yard touchdown pass from Mark Hoffman to Don Althouse early in the second period but that strong Maryland line quickly closed the gap and helped Vereb score from the 3 for a first-half lead of 20-7.

Fifth-Ranked Duke Beaten by Pitt, 26-7

PITTSBURGH	0	6	7	13	—26
DUKE	—	—	0	7	0— 7

DURHAM, N.C., Oct. 22 (AP)—Pittsburgh's twice-beaten football team rose up to smash previously unbeaten Duke, the nation's fifth ranking team, 26-7, today. The Panthers held fumble-plagued Duke to 92 yards on the ground and ran up 249 themselves as they spoiled homecoming day for a crowd of 31,000.

Pittsburgh's one-two quarterback punch of Pete Neft and Corny Salvaterra added enough aerial threat to round out Pitt's devastating attack.

Duke nursed a 7-6 halftime lead, but thereafter the Panthers were pretty much in control. They moved ahead in the third quarter when halfback Lou Cimarolli plunged over from a yard out, boosted their lead to two touchdowns in the fourth quarter when halfback Corky Cost also plunged over from the one.

Adding insult to injury the Panthers scored again 20 seconds before the finish when third-string quarterback Darrell Lewis threw a 15-yard pass into the end zone to end Joe Walton. It was Walton who scored Pitt's first touchdown in the second period when he took a 36-yard pass from Salvaterra.

A blocked punt late in the first period set up Pitt's first touchdown. Bill Hagie of Duke had his punt blocked by tackle Bob Pollock and Pitt recovered on Duke's 49. Four plays later Salvaterra hit Walton from the 36, the Pitt end catching the ball on the 10 and going over.

Duke then moved 81 yards to score its second quarter touchdown. Quarterback Sonny Jurgensen threw a 35-yard pass to halfback Bunny Blaney who scampered 40 more yards for the touchdown.

Four times Duke lost the ball on fumbles and several other times its progress was impeded by bobbles which the Blue Devils managed to recover.

In the third quarter Pitt moved ahead, sweeping 56 yards in seven plays, Neft racing 43 yards on an option play for a first down on the 11 to set up Cimarolli's one-yard plunge five plays later.

Late in the quarter Duke recovered a Pitt fumble and moved to Pitt's 16 where halfback Bob Pascal fumbled the ball back. However, the Panthers held it for only one play as they in turn fumbled and Pascal recovered for Duke on Pitt's 16.

Duke could manage only five yards on the next five plays, however and Pitt took over on its 11.

Early in the fourth quarter another Pascal fumble after a 16-yard gain gave Pitt the ball on its 24. With time running out halfback Ed Post fumbled but Pitt recovered on the Duke 33. From there the Panthers sped to their third touchdown in six plays, Cost plunging over for the final yard.

Completing the rout, Lewis hit Walton in the end zone for the final touchdown after a 15-yard unnecessary roughness penalty against Duke had put the ball on the 15.

Nashua's Winnings.

Nashua, destined to become the year's 3-year-old champion, averaged $63,609 per race in his first 11 starts this year. He won nine of the races, finished second in the Kentucky Derby and third against older horses in the Sysonby.

Western Reserve Is Winner Second Time

WEST. RES.	—	7	0	12	13—32
BUFFALO	—	0	6	7	0—13

BUFFALO, N.Y., Oct. 22 (AP)—Western Reserve of Cleveland turned bobbles by the University of Buffalo into touchdowns today to take its second football victory of the season, 32-13. The other was over the Washington U. Bears of St. Louis.

From the moment when George Radosevich picked off a Buffalo lateral and went 82 yards to score in the first period, Buffalo could do little right but run up yardage in mid-field.

Three Buffalo fumbles were turned into scores by Western Reserve in the second half. An 18-yard pass from Clair Williams to Candy Carroll was good for one. Carl Herbold fell on a goal line fumble for another. Jack Moskal plunged one yard for a third. Curt Gear finished up for the Cleveland club, capping a 65-yard drive with a two-yard plunge.

Alone in Conference.

Since the Southeastern Conference was formed in 1933, Alabama is the only school to have three unbeaten and untied teams—1934, 1937 and 1945.

Air Force Loses Its First Game in Three

PUEBLO, Colo., Oct. 22 (AP)—The University of Colorado Freshman football team today dealt the U.S. Air Force Academy its first defeat, 32-0. The first year Cadets previously had beaten Colorado A&M and Denver University freshmen.

Undefeated St. Mary's High Smashes DuBourg, 51 to 6

Undefeated St. Mary's won its fifth in a row yesterday defeating Du Bourg, 51-6, on the Mercy High School field. It was a Catholic Athletic Conference game.

Two C.A.C. games will be played this afternoon. McBride, the chief challenger for St. Mary's, will go for its second league victory in a 2 o'clock game with DeAndreis on the DuBourg field. Laboure will be at Mercy at the same time.

St. Mary's scored just one touchdown in the first quarter, but sewed up the result with three more in the second period. Ray Ahillen accounted for the first TD on a 21-yard pass from Stan Kostecki.

Other touchdowns were scored by Andry Rios from the 10, Pat Grimes on a 23-yard pass from Kostecki, Ahillen again from the one, Grimes from the seven, Tony Simokaitis twice on runs of 13 and 17 yards, and Bob Maher on a 55-yard run.

Mosley scored one of the East St. Louis team's touchdowns on a 13-yard pass from Don Smith. Jim Thomas plunged three yards for the second and Harold Wayne went two yards for the other. Leonard Hampton plunged for two extra points.

Evansville's touchdowns were made by Ted Landers from one yard out and by Carey Jones on a pass from Vic Maddox.

Colgate Whips Yale, 7-0; Dartmouth Beats Harvard, 14-9

First Loss Of Season For Elis

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 22 (AP) — Colgate's fast-charging line shook Frank Nardulli loose on a 15-yard run in the fourth quarter today and he scored the touchdown that gave the Red Raiders a 7-0 triumph over Yale, the first defeat of the season for the losers.

Until 2:09 of the last quarter, it had been a terrific battle of lines, with Colgate's forward wall dominating and in the end deserving the victory, the first over Yale since 1915. They had played scoreless ties in the only two meetings since then.

The season's largest Yale Bowl crowd of 42,000 saw Colgate barely miss scoring another touchdown late in the last period when Ed Vantine fumbled after crossing the goal line. Dean Loucks recovered the ball, and it was a touchback.

The only tally came after a 73-yard drive in which Nardulli starred with runs of 29 and 15 yards, the latter for the score. The touchdown came on an off-tackle play in which Nardulli raced the final distance standing up. Guy Martin kicked the extra point.

Colgate, not a member of any conference, now has defeated four Ivy League teams this season.

Ohio Rallies To Win No. 2 In Big Ten

OHIO STATE— 0 12 0 14—26
WISCONSIN — 0 14 0 2—16

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 22 (AP) —Ohio State smashed Wisconsin, 26-16, today for the fourth time in a row and snatched a share of the Big Ten football lead with Quarterback Frank Ellwood at the throttle of an express-train ground attack that wouldn't be stopped.

The Buckeyes moved into a first place tie with Michigan in the Big Ten race in handing Wisconsin its first conference loss before a record Camp Randall crowd of 53,529. Michigan, which edged Minnesota, 14-13, today, has won three without a loss while Ohio State is undefeated in two starts.

Ohio State spotted Wisconsin a two-touchdown lead early in the second quarter, then roared back with a relentless running assault for two touchdowns in the second and two more in the fourth.

Ellwood, 5-11, 193-pounder from Dover, O., who runs more than most quarterbacks and isn't afraid to put himself on the spot, led the Buckeyes' goal-line charges with three touchdowns. All-America Howard (Hopalong) Cassady, not so spectacular as he has been but still plenty of ballplayer, accounted for the other marker.

Pat Levenhagen and Charley Thomas scored for the Badgers within four minutes at the start of the second period and it looked as though Wisconsin were off and winging, but Ohio State had other ideas.

The Bucs thus prolonged their mastery over the Badgers. They now have taken the measure of Wisconsin in seven of their last eight meetings. The other game ended in a 6-6 tie. Ivy Williamson, who took over Wisconsin's coaching reins in 1949, still is looking for his first victory over Ohio State.

Ohio State scoring — Touchdowns: Cassady (13, run); Ellwood 3 (1, sneak; 3, run; 1, sneak). Conversions: Kriss, Cannavino.

Wisconsin scoring — Touchdowns: Levenhagen (4, run); Thomas (2, plunge). Safety: Ellwood (downed ball in end zone).

Triple Dead Heat, Million to One Shot, Run at Caliente

AGUA CALIENTE, Mex., Oct. 22 (UP)—Three horses thundered to the wire locked in a triple dead-heat here today, although the odds are said to be more than a million to one against it.

Stormsorno, Beaufair and Chance Speed finished in a photographic tie at the end of the eighth race—the first such occurrence in 26 years of Caliente racing history.

The bid for turfdom's hall of fame began deep in the stretch of the mile event when the trio of gallopers fanned out head and head. They wheeled the last 70 yards locked together and with their noses as one at the wire.

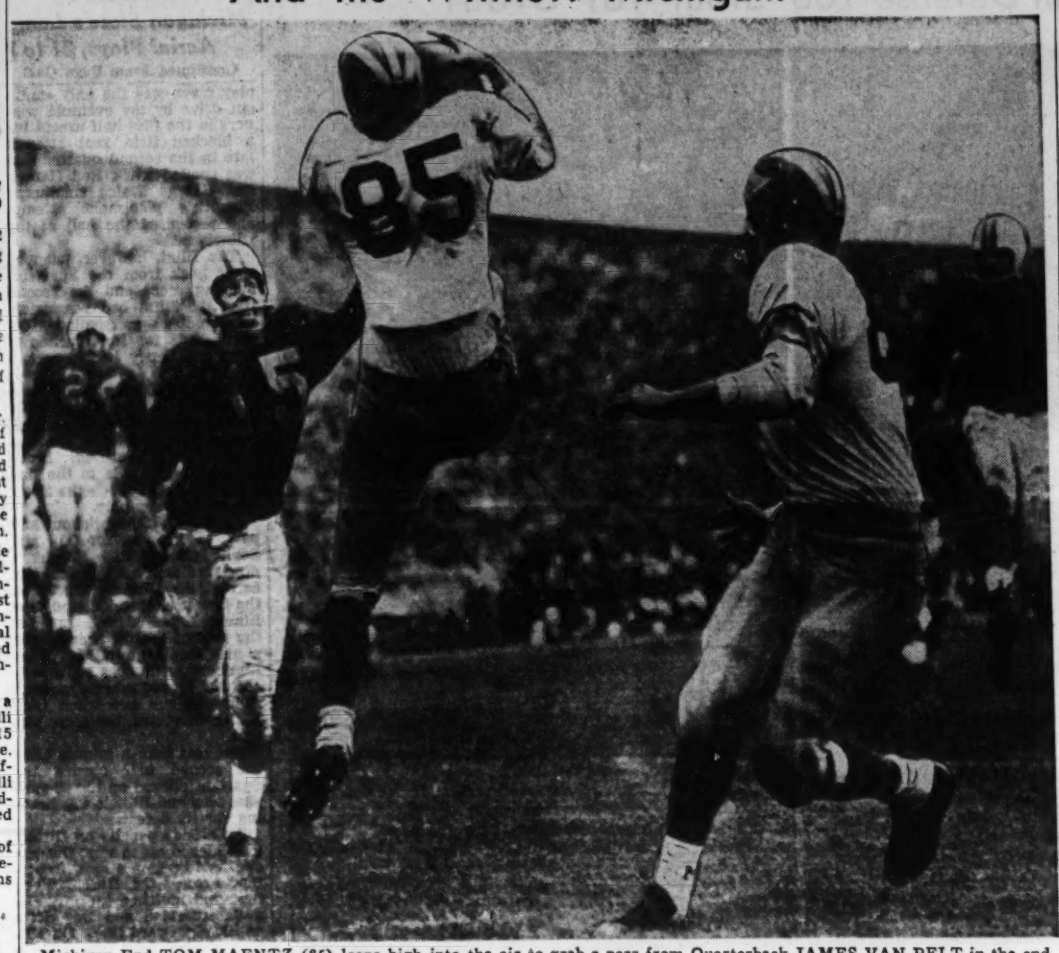
Stormsorno, ridden by Manuel Esparza and owned by John Mitchell, paid $6.60, 5.40 and 5.40. Beaufair, owned by J. Lambert and ridden by Louis M. Leon, paid $6.00, 9.40 and 7.00. Chance Speed, owned by Mr. and Mrs. L. Curtis and ridden by Rene Cruzat, paid $7.00, 6.00 and 7.60. Time for the mile was 1:39 1-5.

So remote is the possibility of a triple dead-heat to win, that there were no lights in the tote board for the straight price of the third winner, so the price was announced over the public address system.

Miners Win, 19-14.

KIRKSVILLE, Mo., Oct. 22 (AP)—Roger Feaster threw two touchdown passes to Jim Murphy in the last quarter to give the Missouri Miners from Rolla a 19-14 MIAA victory over Kirksville today.

And the Winner! Michigan!



Michigan End TOM MAENTZ (85) leaps high into the air to grab a pass from Quarterback JAMES VAN PELT in the end zone for Michigan's winning touchdown in the Little Brown Jug battle with Minnesota. Gopher DICK LARSON (15) couldn't quite reach the ball. The score decided the close contest, 14-13, in favor of Michigan.

Prince Shows Princeton Way In 26-20 Win

PRINCETON 7 7 6 6—26
CORNELL 7 0 0 13—20

ITHACA, N.Y., Oct. 22 (AP)—The smooth power of Princeton's single wing helped overcome the Tigers' own mistakes and the individual brilliance of Billy De Graaf and Bo Roberson today as Princeton scored a 26-20 victory over Cornell.

There wasn't much that was sensational about the Tigers' play except the crispness of their blocking and the consistency of their ground-gaining. Sid Prince was their big gun on attack.

De Graaf, Roberson and Dick Jackson provided the thrills for Cornell's homecoming crowd of 25,000. Roberson, a 185-pound sophomore from Philadelphia, raced 74 yards on a reverse play engineered by De Graaf, for the opening touchdown.

Then the Cornell quarterback, supposedly unable to play because of a spine injury suffered last week, cut loose passes to Jackson and to Stan Intihar for two fourth-quarter scores that kept Cornell very much in the game.

Princeton ground out a touchdown in each quarter with Sid Pinch scoring one, passing to Ben Spinelli for another and helping to set up the other two, both scored by Fullback Dick Martin on short plunges.

The Tigers marched 66, 80, 80 and 73 yards for their four touchdowns. They were stopped only once in Cornell territory and had to punt only once. That was when a pass from center missed the intended ball carrier and rolled back to the Princeton five before Pinch recovered it.

Princeton scoring — Touchdowns: Martin 2 (1, plunge; 1, plunge); Pinch (3, run); Spinelli (4, pass from Pinch). Conversions: Martin 2.

Cornell scoring—Touchdowns: Roberson (74, run); Jackson (10, pass from De Graaf); Intihar (9, pass from De Graaf). Conversions: De Graaf 2.

SMU Defeats Kansas, 33-14

KANSAS — — 0 7 7 0—14
S. METHODIST 0 7 12 14—33

LAWRENCE, Kan., Oct. 22 (UP)—Halfback Don McIlhenny, a hard charging, shifty senior, scored four times to lead Southern Methodist to a 33-14 victory over Kansas here today.

The 189-pound halfback turned three Kansas fumbles—two of them within the three yard line—into tallies.

McIlhenny scored twice from the one-yard line, and once each from the three and 15-yard lines.

Kansas star punter Ted Rohde gave SMU its first two touchdowns when he fumbled two center passes, one on the one-yard line in the second quarter and the other on the three in the third period. McIlhenny dived over both times.

The Jayhawks took a temporary lead in the third period, 14-13, on the strength of two iron-nerved, fourth-down TD passes by quarterback Wally Strauch to end Jim Letcavits. The first came in the second quarter for eight yards and the second one was an 11-yard toss in the third frame.

Notre Dame - Navy Game Saturday 'Rockne Memorial'

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 22 (AP).

NOTRE DAME'S football game with Navy here next Saturday was designated the Knute K. Rockne Memorial game today by Edward W. Krause, Irish athletic director.

The current Notre Dame football team is the twenty-fifth to take the field since Rockne died in a Kansas plane crash. The Navy also furnished the opposition when the Notre Dame Stadium was dedicated on Oct. 11, 1930. Notre Dame won, 26-2.

Mrs. Rockne, who lives here and seldom misses a home game; Jesse Harper of Sitka, Kan., who coached at Notre Dame when Rockne played and most of the coaches who have followed Rockne at Notre Dame will be introduced in halftime ceremonies.

Charles Ill, Bout With Toxie Hall Set Back

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 22 (UP)—A 10-round boxing match between Ezzard Charles, former heavyweight champion, and Toxie Hall, scheduled Oct. 31 has been postponed to Nov. 14, it was announced today.

Tony Tannas, co-manager of the former champ, said Charles had a mild attack of the grippe and Matchmaker Manny Almeida rescheduled the bout.

Hall attracted national attention last spring when he floored Heavyweight Champion Rocky Marciano in a sparring match. He is taking on the veteran 34-year-old slugger from Cincinnati in a bid to move up in the heavyweight standings.

Cards' Boyer and Virdon On First Year All-Stars

Standing of the clubs in the 1955 major league races had little influence in the selection of players that make up the annual Rookie All-Star team announced last night by The Sporting News.

For example, the Cardinals, seventh in the National League, supplied two players and so did Washington, last in the American.

Ken Boyer, third baseman, and Bill Virdon, center fielder, are the Cardinal players selected by a poll of sportswriters. Recently, Virdon and Herb Score, Cleveland southpaw, were named rookies of the year by The Sporting News.

For the first time in four years, American Leaguers dominated the squad of first-year stars. Eight of the 11 players named played on A.L. clubs. Thus, the Cardinals placed two of the National's three players.

Voted to the all-rookie team were:

Beagle's Passes Decisive

DARTMOUTH 0 7 0 7—14

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 22 (AP)—Passing artist Bill Beagle tossed for one touchdown and scored another as an injury-riddled, but spirited Dartmouth football team gained its first victory after four losses today with a 14-9 upset over Harvard in the fifty-ninth game of an Ivy League rivalry.

Beagle, a 6-foot, 170-pound senior, turned in one of his best performances as he sparked the Indians to touchdowns in the second and fourth quarters.

In the second period, the slick quarterback from Danville, Pa., switched from his normal routine of firing bullet-like passes and lobbed the ball to his favorite target, end Monte Pascoe.

Pascoe took the ball on the goal line and stepped into the end zone to complete a 24-yard scoring play. Beagle place-kicked the Big Green into a 7-0 lead.

Harvard picked up two points on a safety in the second quarter and moved ahead in the third quarter when Matt Botsford circled end for 13 yards and a touchdown and Bill Crosby converted.

Beagle found the range again and the Indians rolled 71 yards in eight plays for the winning touchdown in the fourth period. The slender flinger completed three passes in the march and wound up matters by personally covering the final five yards on three sneaks.

A. L. Trout, Former Centralia (Ill.) Coach, Is Critically Ill

OAKTOWN, Ind. (AP)—Arthur L. Trout, onetime dean of Illinois high school coaches, is critically ill at the farm home of a daughter near Oaktown. Trout coached at Centralia high school for 37 years and was the first to bring three state basketball championships to one school.

A heart stroke in January of 1951 left his right hand paralyzed and forced him to retire.

Now, just two weeks from his 68th birthday, Nov. 5, Trout is suffering the effects of more recent attacks which have kept him confined to bed since June. His wife described his present condition as critical.

Gophers Garner Glory But Michigan Wins, 14-13

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 22 (AP) — Minnesota shook proud Michigan to its very foundation today before the top-ranked football team in the land wiped out a two-touchdown deficit for a harrowing 14-13 victory.

MICHIGAN — 0 7 7 0—14
MINNESOTA - 13 0 0 0—13

The thrice-beaten Gophers startled a crowd of 64,434, a regional television audience, and the unbeaten Wolverines with two lightning touchdowns in the first quarter and appeared destined for the upset of the season.

But Michigan gathered itself for a sudden touchdown late in the second quarter on two brilliantly executed pass plays, then killed the Gophers' upset hopes wih a nine-yard touchdown pitch from sophmore Jim Van Pelt to Tom Maentz in the third period.

The vital play, although it appeared relatively unimportant at the time, was Terry Barr's block of Mike Falls' conversion try after the second Gopher touchdown. Tony Branoff and Van Pelt kicked perfect placements for Michigan.

Famed for its talent for exploiting rival mistakes, Michigan put itself in for trouble twice in the first period and Minnesota cashed in superbly.

Barr fumbled Rhody Tuszka's put midway through the period and the Wolverine halfback was nailed on the Michigan 3 before he could recover.

Pinky McNamara sped back to the Michigan 24 with the ensuing punt. Ken Yackel barreled to the 13, then to the 8 and sophomore Bob Schultz streaked over on the next play.

Minnesota scored again within 3½ minutes following a short Michigan kick, Yackel driving over from the 16.

A 36 yard pass-lateral from Van Pelt to Mike Routunno to Ed Shannon carried to the Minnesota 28, late in the half. Barr found Maentz with another pass on the five and Barr tore over from there.

Michigan paraded 48 yards for its winning score in the third quarter, Van Pelt lobbing to Maentz in the end zone after Minnesota stiffened on the 9.

The victory was Michigan's fifth in a row and gave it continued possession of the famed Little Brown Jug.

Olympic Hopes in Action in Intercity Soccer Match Today

Penn Team Real Test For Kutis

By Dent McSkimming

Fans who watch the Kutis-Harmarville soccer match at Oakland Stadium this afternoon should pay special attention to several of the visiting players. The next time they hear about Goalie Don Malinowski, Center Halfback Bill Baxter and Center Forward Bob Craddock may well be when the United States Olympic squad is announced.

All three are highly regarded as Olympic team material and all have a background of good performance in international matches, Malinowski as recently as the Iceland tour of last August.

In the Pittsburgh area, this Harmarville team is regarded as the outstanding eleven of the soccer-rich district. It is leading the Keystone League, unbeaten, and has defeated the reigning national amateur champion, Heidelberg.

Three years ago, Harmarville eliminated St. Louis Simpkins from the national Open Cup competition by winning, 2-1, after a scoreless tie at Pittsburgh. Malinowski, the two fullbacks, one halfback and two forwards of today's team were on that club that beat Simpkins at North Side Park. The Simpkins, at that time, were a sound team and Harmarville's victory was accomplished only through hard work and good team coordination. Harmarville then won the United States Open title.

Tryouts Late Next Month.

Of course, there will be a few Kutis players in action who will make strong bids for Olympic squad consideration, too.

Harry Luecke, Missouri Soccer Commission secretary, has announced that a preliminary Olympic tryout will be held here late next month. Kansas City and Texas cities will be invited to send their best men, too. Members of the U.S.S.F.A.'s Olympic committee plan to be here to observe. Interstate trials will follow. Later, the United States team will meet Mexico in a home-and-home series to determine which shall represent the North American zone at Melbourne a year from now.

With Tom Julius back in action after resting an injured knee, and Bill Eppy improving with each game, the Kutis squad is even better fortified than it was at the same point last season. It remains only for the forwards to develop better understanding and to perfect the fast breaking attack they used last Sunday to insure success.

This test against experienced Harmarville backs should determine whether Manager Nick Jost has a team that can go all the way through the national title competition. Harmarville is certainly a potential U.S. Open Cup winner.

Kutis has scored 16 goals and allowed four in winning two, tying one and losing one game. . . . Jost has invited Milwaukee Serbians to come here soon to give Kutis a chance to avenge that 1-0 defeat suffered at Milwaukee Sept. 4. . . . Women and children will be admitted free to today's games at Oakland Stadium. . . . Municipal League teams, Dogtown Amvets and Hawks. . . . Both have lost two league games. . . .

Manager Joe Numi regards his Simpkins team stronger now than it was last season. . . . Pete Traina is reaching the peak predicted for him; Gino Pariani, getting all the ball practice he needs, is back to his form of several years ago, and veteran fullbacks, John Galimberti and Bob Fitzgerald are down to playing weight earlier than usual. . . . Simpkins' next difficult foe in Khoury League play will be Meramecs on Nov. 13. . . . The all-German Meramecs are 50 per cent stronger than last year. . . . Liberty and Brehenys meet in the top match of the Khoury schedule today. . . . Each lost to Simpkins, 2-0, and each defeated Diamonds, 6-0 and 5-0, respectively.

Maryland Has Easy Time With Syracuse, 34-13

MARYLAND	14	6	14	0	—34
SYRACUSE	0	7	0	6	—13

SYRACUSE, N.Y., Oct. 22 (AP)—Powerful Maryland, ranked No. 2 in the nation, bolstered its chances of an Orange Bowl trip, today by manhandling Syracuse 34-13 behind a solid line that opened the holes for Ed Vereb, Phil Perlo and Jack Healey.

Smashing over two touchdowns in the first period with Perlo blasting 6 yards for the first and Vereb throwing 17 yards to Russ Dennis for the second, Maryland was threatened seriously only once.

The Syracuse team that upset Army last week clicked for an eye-popping 30-yard touchdown pass from Mark Hoffman to Don Althouse early in the second period but that strong Maryland line quickly closed the gap and helped Vereb score from the 3 for a first-half lead of 20-7.

Fifth-Ranked Duke Beaten by Pitt, 26-7

PITTSBURGH	0	6	7	13	—26
DUKE	—	—	—	0	—7

DURHAM, N.C., Oct. 22 (AP)—Pittsburgh's twice-beaten football team rose up to smash previously unbeaten Duke, the nation's fifth ranking team, 26-7, today. The Panthers held fumble-plagued Duke to 92 yards on the ground and ran up 249 themselves as they spoiled homecoming day for a crowd of 31,000.

Pittsburgh's one-two quarterback punch of Pete Neft and Corny Salvaterra added enough aerial threat to round out Pitt's devastating attack.

Duke nursed a 7-6 halftime lead, but thereafter the Panthers were pretty much in control. They moved ahead in the third quarter when halfback Lou Cimarolli plunged over from a yard out, boosted their lead to two touchdowns in the fourth quarter when halfback Corky Cost also plunged over from the one.

Adding insult to injury the Panthers scored again 20 seconds before the finish when third-string quarterback Darrell Lewis threw a 15-yard pass into the end zone to end Joe Walton. It was Walton who scored Pitt's first touchdown in the second period when he took a 36-yard pass from Salvaterra.

A blocked punt late in the first period set up Pitt's first touchdown. Bill Hagie of Duke had his punt blocked by tackle Bob Pollock and Pitt recovered on Duke's 49. Four plays later Salvaterra hit Walton from the 36, the Pitt end catching the ball on the 10 and going over.

Duke then moved 81 yards to score its second quarter touchdown. Quarterback Sonny Jurgensen threw a 35-yard pass to halfback Bunny Blaney who scampered 40 more yards for the touchdown.

Four times Duke lost the ball on fumbles and several other times its progress was impeded by bobbles which the Blue Devils managed to recover.

In the third quarter Pitt moved ahead, sweeping 56 yards in seven plays, Neft racing 43 yards on an option play for a first down on the 11 to set up Cimarolli's one-yard plunge five plays later.

Late in the quarter Duke recovered a Pitt fumble and moved to Pitt's 16 where halfback Bob Pascal fumbled the ball back. However, the Panthers held it for only one play as they in turn fumbled and Pascal recovered for Duke on Pitt's 16.

Duke could manage only five yards on the next five plays, however and Pitt took over on its 11.

Early in the fourth quarter another Pascal fumble after a 16-yard gain gave Pitt the ball on its 24. With time running out halfback Ed Post fumbled but Pitt recovered on the Duke 33. From there the Panthers sped to their third touchdown in six plays, Cost plunging over for the final yard.

Completing the rout, Lewis hit Walton in the end zone for the final touchdown after a 15-yard unnecessary roughness penalty against Duke had put the ball on the 15.

Nashua's Winnings.

Nashua, destined to become the year's 3-year-old champion, averaged $63,609 per race in his first 11 starts this year. He won nine of the races, finished second in the Kentucky Derby and third against older horses in the Sysonby.

Western Reserve Is Winner Second Time

WEST. RES.	7	0	12	13	—32
BUFFALO	—	0	6	7	0—13

BUFFALO, N.Y., Oct. 22 (AP)—Western Reserve of Cleveland turned bobbles by the University of Buffalo into touchdowns today to take its second football victory of the season, 32-13. The other was over the Washington U. Bears of St. Louis.

From the moment when George Radosevich picked off a Buffalo lateral and went 82 yards to score in the first period, Buffalo could do little right but run up yardage in mid-field.

Three Buffalo fumbles were turned into scores by Western Reserve in the second half. An 18-yard pass from Clair Williams to Candy Carroll was good for one. Carl Herbold fell on a goal line fumble for another. Jack Moskal plunged one yard for a third. Curt Gear finished up for the Cleveland club, capping a 65-yard drive with a two-yard plunge.

Alone in Conference.

Since the Southeastern Conference was formed in 1933, Alabama is the only school to have three unbeaten and untied teams—1934, 1937 and 1945.

Blackhawks, a Surprise Team of Hockey League, Here Tuesday

Chicago, Boston Improved By Trades

By Harold Flachsbart

Without a fill-in, St. Louis hockey fans may have difficulty recognizing the Chicago Blackhawks when that team opposes the Boston Bruins in a National Hockey League match at The Arena, Tuesday night.

Last season, the Hawks played six games here before an aggregate of 42,420 fans, an average of 7070. Local enthusiasts got to know their Chicago visitors. Now, thanks to roster changes, the Blackhawks have been one of the surprises of the league.

Boston, too, is stronger as a result of trades, chief of which brought 25-year-old Goalie Terry Sawchuk, a three-time Vezina trophy winner, to Hubtown.

Other transactions provided the Bruins with forwards Marcel Bonin and Vic Stasiuk (both one-time St. Louis Flyers) from the Detroit Red Wings and Orval Tessier from the Montreal Canadiens. Sawchuk, considered the best goaltender in hockey today, of course is the big attraction.

In five seasons he's been in the big top, Sawchuk has won the Vezina trophy (highest and richest award for goalies) three times, the Calder Memorial trophy as the league's outstanding rookie, has been a member of three Stanley Cup champions (with Detroit) and was selected goaltender on the first N.H.L. all-star team three times and second all-star team the two other times. Each honor was worth cash, besides the trophy.

Youngsters on Front Line.

Bonin, left wing, will play on a forward line with Don McKenney, runner-up to Chicago's Ed Litzenberger for 1955 rookie-of-the- year honors, and fiery Leo Labine.

Stasiuk's best goal out-put was three seasons back at Edmonton, where he banged home 37 and added 43 assists for 80 points. He's been a big leaguer since, except for brief trips back to Detroit's Edmonton farm to get in skating condition.

Another newcomer on the Boston front is Ed Panagabko, a right wing.

But on defense, the guards in front of Sawchuk are all veterans, with Capt. Fern Flaman teaming with Bob Armstrong and Bill Quackenbush with Leo Boivin.

Chicago is showing six new players, including two highly-touted rookies, Hank Ciesla and Hector Lalande, a Mutt and Jeff combination. Dick Irvin, who considers the Chicago coaching job a real challenge after enjoying great success at Toronto and Montreal, is high especially on Ciesla, 6-foot-2 sharp-shooter who tallied 57 goals and 106 points in 45 games with St. Catherines last season.

From Red Wings.

Four others, obtained from the champion Red Wings, are Ben Woit, a defenseman, and forwards Glen Skov, Johnny Wilson and Tony Leswick.

Even the Hawk uniforms are new: basically red, with the Blackhawk Indian imprinted in the jersey and black and white stripes on the arms and waist.

Kansas State Victor On 37-Yd. Field Goal

IOWA STATE —	7	0	0	0	—7
KAN. STATE —	0	0	9	0	—9

AMES, Iowa, Oct. 22 (UP)—End Jim Rusher kicked a 37-yard third-period field goal to give Kansas State a 9-7 victory over Iowa State in a rib-cracking homecoming game today.

Tempers flared in the last minute and officials put two players, one from each team, out of the game for fighting.

The Cyclones took the opening kickoff and moved 80 yards in 14 plays, scoring on a 15-yard pass from Quarterback John Breckenridge to End Harold Potts. Tackle Dick Callahan converted. Kansas State's touchdown was set up early in the third period when Fullback Doug Roether intercepted a Breckenridge pass and returned it to the Iowa State 26-yard line. Halfback Tony Addeo did most of the legwork to the 2, and Ralph Pfeifer swept right end to score.

Rusher's conversion attempt was low but a few minutes later the 207-pound senior booted a perfect field goal for the winning margin.

Delaware Wins.

NEWARK, Del., Oct. 22 (UP)—A second-half rally, led by Eastern Intercollegiate ground-gaining leader Jim Zaiser, enabled the University of Delaware to defeat the University of Connecticut today, 26-14.

Jules Faron's Task to Keep Creve Coeur Nine in Action

Jules Faron, Creve Coeur's ace righthander, will be out to avenge his brother Nelson's defeat when he starts against Florissant today at 2:30 in the County Baseball League final playoffs at Florissant.

A powerfully-built athlete, 6 feet 3 inches and 215 pounds, Jules Faron is rated one of the outstanding pitchers in the area. He has plenty of speed, a good motion, and hides the ball well.

Opposing 24-year-old Faron will be a seasoned veteran, Dave Bartosch, 38, a wartime Cardinal player. Big Dave, who wears glasses, can't throw his old hard one as often as he used to, but the Webster team he beat in the first round of the playoffs knows Dave still has plenty of stuff.

Florissant took the opener of the best-of-three title series last Sunday, 3-2, with Harold Burbach's long fence-clearing home run blast proving the difference in a duel of five-hitters between Nelson Faron and Percy Henderson.

Florissant will go with its usual lineup, but Manager Pat O'Reilly has a strong bench in Bill Hubecky catcher; Al Henke, outfielder; Marv Tebeau, infielder, and Leroy Aubuchon, outfielder.

Country Day And Burroughs Win in ABC

Country Day smothered Principia Academy, 40-0, and John Burroughs walloped Western Military Academy, 27-0, in ABC League football games yesterday afternoon. The winners will meet for the league championship Nov. 12, at Burroughs.

Randy Wielandy scored twice for Country Day and Tate Robertson and John McDonnell contributed a touchdown apiece. Curt Wolf converted after four touchdowns.

John Cotsworth, one of the leading scorers in the district, ran for one touchdown, passed for another and ran for two extra points in the Burroughs' victory.

Jim Conzelman climaxed a 55-yard drive by going 10 yards off tackle early in the first quarter. Cotsworth scored Burroughs' second TD of the quarter with a 2-yard plunge which he set up with a 35-yard pass to Barkley Calkins. In the second quarter Cotsworth passed to Dave Harding for another TD. In the fourth period Calkins took a 15-yard pass from Bill Idol and went over for the score.

Missouri Is 1-2-3-4 In Cross-Country Run

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 22—The Missouri Tigers took the first four places to defeat the Kansas State Wildcats, 10-26, in a cross-country run here today.

Keith Bacon of Springfield paced the field, covering the distance in 15:44.5. Others in the order of finish: 2—Lynn Romann, Missouri; 3—Charles Williams, Missouri; 4—Tom Fort, Missouri; 5—Arlan Stackley, Kansas State; 6—Whitney Hicks, Kansas State; 7—Jesse Unruh, Kansas State; 8—Hubert Guest, Kansas State; 9—Glen Taplin, Kansas State; 10—Duane Kelly, Missouri.

Tulane Upsets Georgia, 14-0

TULANE —	7	0	0	7	—14

ATHENS, Ga., Oct. 22 (AP)—Baby-faced Gene Newton, a slick split-T operator and a Fancy-Dan runner, sprinted 49 yards for an early touchdown and guided Tulane to a 14-0 upset victory over Georgia in a Southeastern Conference football game today.

Tulane stopped Georgia's air attack when it counted and the Bulldogs couldn't punch over a score on the ground.

Newton, a sophomore, also scored Tulane's clinching touchdown in the fourth quarter, racing eight yards around his left end. This score was set up when tackle Dalton Truax recovered a fumble by Georgia's Charlie Harris at the eight.

Georgia threatened twice in the first half, but star passer Dick Young couldn't connect. The first Georgia threat, set up by Roy Wilkins' recovery of an Otis Gilmore fumble at the Tulane 33, stalled at the 25 when Young overthrew Wendell Tarleton in the end zone.

Japanese Kick In 5 Runs as Yankees Win

TOKYO, Oct. 22 (AP)—Aided by two Japanese errors, the New York Yankees opened a 16-game exhibition series today with a 10-2 victory over the Tokyo Orions.

Elston Howard paced the Yankees with two home runs and a triple that banged off a sign 375 feet into left field and rebounded to the shortstop.

A crowd of 35,000—5000 under the park's capacity—turned out. It included former New York Governor Thomas E. Dewey and his wife and Mrs. Ichiro Hatoyama, wife of the Prime Minister who stayed home because of a cold.

The Orions spotted the New Yorkers five unearned runs in the first inning.

The Orions, owned by the newspaper Mainichi which is sponsoring the Yanks's Exhibition tour, finished third in their Pacific League this season.

Georgia Tech Subs Do Honors in 34-0 Rout

ATLANTA, Oct. 22 (UP)—Georgia Tech gave its second, third and fourth stringers a workout today and the big Engineer squad rolled up an easy 34-to-0 victory over outmanned Florida State before 30,000.

Tech Coach Bobby Dodd, sharpening his offensive and defensive weapons for next week's big battle with Duke, left his first string in only long enough to make a touchdown seven and a half minutes after the opening kickoff. The subs took it from there and scored once in the second period, twice in the third, and once on the fourth.

Second string Quarterback Toppy Vann scored two touchdowns.

BPA Travel Results.

First-place Bowl-O-Crat (17-10) won two games from Sports Bowl in the BPA Traveling League last night at Midway Bowling Lanes. Arway Recreation (942-2723), runner-up, defeated Eddie's Lanes, 2-1; Terry Moore Bowl (942) nosed out Saratoga, 2-1, and Midwest beat Golden Eagle, 2-1. Paul Miller was top bowler with 242 and 585.

Greenberg Offer To Buy Frisco Is Withdrawn

CLEVELAND, Oct. 22 (UP)—Hank Greenberg, general manager of the Cleveland Indians, tonight withdrew his offer to buy the San Francisco Seals baseball franchise because he received "double talk" from Pacific Coast League officials.

Greenberg said he expected an answer to his offer within 24 hours, but instead received "double talk" and no actual rejection.

Greenberg said he was led to believe four of the league directors liked his proposal and would act favorably on it within 24 hours. Instead, Greenberg said, he learned through newspaper stories they planned to table his proposal until the league meeting in Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 10.

"I made a good offer for the Seals by proposing to take over a franchise loaded with $200,000 in debts," he said. "I planned to pay off the creditors with the ball club's earnings once we made it a paying proposition, but some said my plan asked the league to donate the franchise to me.

"It's no donation when I offer to risk my money to revitalize a club that has lost $900,000.

"San Francisco baseball is in a sorry mess and we offered a possible solution."

Greenberg said he doubted whether he would again try to buy the Seals. He noted the Milwaukee Braves still were interested and said he hoped they would be successful in buying the club. He said he did not want to be put into a position where the league might try to pick the best of two offers.

St. Paul-St. Ambrose Game Tops C.Y.C. Soccer League Card

Now that the C.Y.C. teams know that St. Ambrose can be defeated, as proved by Our Lady of Sorrows team last Sunday, it would not be surprising to see a new trend. For example, Coach Bill Gockel will be expecting his St. Paul eleven to match that upset of a week ago when the defending champions from The Hill were shut out, 1-0. St. Paul, then captained by Bob Fitzgerald (now with Simpkins) battled hard in the post-season playoffs and lost out only because of lack of a scoring punch.

In their first league game, St. Paul downed young Holy Rosary, 3-1, so perhaps this scoring defect has been corrected.

However, St. Ambrose is expected to bounce back strong after that first league defeat in two seasons.

Further evidence of the good balance in the C.Y.C. five-club "traveling" league is the fact that the scores have been close. The longest margin of victory thus far was a 4-1 count.

Hawks Book Five of 26 Home Games at Washington U. Field House

4 Shows At Kiel Twin Bills

Washington University's athletic department, through Director Elair Gullion, has come to the rescue of St. Louis's professional basketball team, the Hawks. When the local pro club found that its new home, Kiel Auditorium, would not be available on five dates allotted to St. Louis, an appeal was made to Washinfton U. for the use of the Field House. Gullion opened the doors and the Hawks were able to announce last night a full 26-game home schedule.

The season will open here Wednesday, Nov. 5, and will go through March 10. Five of the games will be played at the Field House and the others at Kiel.

Each of the other seven clubs in the National Basketball Association will appear here at least four times. Boston will play here five times, opposing the Hawks four times and Minneapolis once. Minneapolis will play the Hawks three times and Boston once. Syracuse will play the Hawks three times and Fort Wayne once; New York will oppose the Hawks four times; Rochester will play the Hawks four times, and Fort Wayne and Philadelphia once each; Philadelphia will play the Hawks four times and Rochester once; Fort Wayne will play the Hawks four times, and Rochester and Syracuse once each.

Four Doubleheaders.

Four of the 26 home games will be league doubleheaders. The first twin bill is listed for Nov. 12 with the Hawks opposing the Syracuse Nationals, world champions of professional basketball, in the nightcap and Rochester playing Fort Wayne in the opener.

Other doubleheaders are Dec. 6, Boston playing the Hawks and Fort Wayne opposing Syracuse; Jan. 31, Philadelphia playing the Hawks, and Boston versus Minneapolis, and Feb. 14, New York opposing the Hawks, and Rochester versus Philadelphia.

Seven of the 26 games will be played on Saturday night; seven on Tuesday; six on Sunday; two each on Wednesday and Thursday and single games on a Monday and a Friday. Sunday games will start at 8 p.m., single games on other days will start at 8:30 p.m. and doubleheaders will start at 7:30 p.m.

Still on Training Tour.

The Hawks continue their pre-season exhibition tour, opposing the Lakers at Minneapolis tonight. The two teams meet again tomorrow night at Hibbing, Minn., Tuesday at Ada, Minn., and Wednesday, at Eau Claire, Wisc.

The Hawks return home Thursday, then travel to Jackson, Mo., to meet an All-Star team that night. A three-game series with the Philadelphia Warriors winds up the pre-season games. The Hawks play the Warriors in Toronto, Oct. 31, in Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 1, and in Hamilton, Ontario, Nov. 2.

Minneapolis provides the opening game opposition here Nov. 5.

Two of the home games will be televised nationally over the NBC network, as part of the NBA's Game of the Week program, each Saturday. The dates for the TV contests will be announced next week. All of the Hawks's games—both home and away—will be broadcast over Station KXOK.

When These St. Louisans Go Deer Hunting They're Not Foolin'

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

Upon their return from their deer hunting expedition in Colorado, these St. Louisans posed with their trophies at 5900 Gravois. From the left, the hunters are: TONY DROSTE, 1801 Sybil Court, ED RUPRECHT, 9741 Gravois, AL BAILEY, 9500 Gravois, RUSSELL EMMENEGGER, 3 Fox Meadows, ED HELTON, 15 Oakwood Lane, CLARENCE (RED) HENKE, 618 Kirkshire and DON EMMENEGGER, 9332 Aster. (Mel) Schneider, 526 Willoughby lane, one of the hunters, was not available when the picture was taken.) The successful hunt was featured by Droste's kill of a big buck at 600 yards. The group bagged nine bucks the first two days of the season (Oct. 15-16). Colorado officials said it was one of the largest kills made by one group in that area, both in number of animals and size.

Ask Me Another

By Harold Tuthill

"My friend and I had a discussion about Harry Walker's hit which scored Slaughter in the eighth inning of the seventh game of the 1946 World Series between the Cardinals and Boston Red Sox at Sportsman's Park, now Busch Stadium. My friend said Walker's hit landed on the fly off the left or left-centerfield wall. I maintained it was a long single to left-centerfield, lined over Pesky's head and the ball fell to the ground before it hit the wall. Who is right?" William K. Costigan, 4440 Lindell boulevard.

The play-by-play bears out your contention. At the start of the Cardinals' half, Klinger took Dobson's place as Boston's pitcher, Culberson went to center and Partee behind the bat. Slaughter singled to center. Kurowski, attempting a sacrifice, popped to Klinger. Rice flied to Williams. Walker hit a liner over Pesky's head, Slaughter scoring all the way from first when Pesky hesitated momentarily in relaying Culberson's throw to the plate Walker reached second for a two-base hit.

"Who started the seventh-inning stretch?" Mary Miller, Lemay, Mo.

The practice never has been authenticated to the complete satisfaction of everyone. One explanation is that the interruption came in the seventh because it gave the beverage dispensers their last chance to hawk their wares before the game ended.

Muny Football Loop Presents A New Team

The Vets A.C. Raiders, who went over movies of their games of previous seasons at a get-together last week, make their first start in the Muny Football League today. They will oppose the McCrarys in the second game of a doubleheader at the Forest Park drill grounds.

In the only league game played so far, the McCrarys defeated the Monkeys, 20-7.

The Merchants, brand-new entry in the league, will face the Monkeys in the 1 o'clock game.

C.Y.C. Basket Pilots To Meet Nov. 7

Managers of boys' and girls' teams in all six age divisions of C.Y.C. basketball will meet at 8 p.m. Monday, Nov. 7 at the C.Y.C. office, instead of tomorrow as previously announced. Nov. 7 also is the entry deadline.

The six divisions are senior, junior, juvenile, parochial, midget and crusader.

Public Shooting Areas for Waterfowlers

MISSOURI will have four management shooting areas available to the public when the state's waterfowl season opens Friday. In addition, there will be 9880 acres of land along the Mississippi river open to public hunting.

The four management areas are:

Fountain Grove—On Linn county Highway W, five miles south of U.S. Highway 36, near Meadville.

Duck Creek — On State Highway 51, nine miles northeast of Puxico.

Swan Lake—Just off farm-to-market Highway N, which leaves U.S. Highway 36, five miles west of Brookfield. The nearest town is Sumner.

Trimble—On farm-to-market road that leaves Highway 169 just north of Trimble.

The Trimble area is near Kansas City, but the other hunting places are within reasonable driving distance of St. Louis. Swan Lake will be open to goose shooting only—no ducks.

Blinds and pits in the four areas are allotted by reservation. Persons desiring reservations should address a letter to the Area Manager, specifying the date on which reservations are desired and the number of hunters in the party.

Alternate dates which would be acceptable also should be given. A reservation card will be mailed to the person sending the request.

How to Reach Managers.

Addresses of the managers for the four areas are: Fountain Grove—Meadville, Mo.; Duck Creek—Puxico, Mo.; Swan Lake—Sumner, Mo.; Trimble—Trimble, Mo.

Telephone calls for information—not reservations—can be made to the Fountain Grove and Swan Lake Wildlife Management Areas through the Sumner exchange. The Swan Lake number is 12.

Calls to the Trimble area are handled through the Plattsburg exchange. The Missouri Conservation Commission requests that no telephone calls be made from 7 p.m. to 5 a.m.

Small fees will be charged in each of the four areas for use of blinds, rental of boats and—when and where available—use of decoys.

Regarding shooting on the Mississippi river lands, the conservation commission says:

"Waterfowl hunting privileges on the public hunting lands are provided on a 'first-come, first-served' basis. Hunters are to build their own blinds. When a blind is unoccupied, it may be used by the first hunter who comes along.

"On the federally owned lands, the builder cannot claim a priority or evict the first hunter who occupies the blind each day. No occupied blinds will be permitted closer than 200 yards apart.

"Here again the 'first-come, first-served' rule applies."

Mississippi River Areas.

Among areas listed by the conservation commission as available for waterfowl shooting along the Mississippi are:

Dardenne island, Bolter island, Mason island, Island No. 526; 215-Mile Group, Dresser island (Brick House slough), West Alton Group, Island No. 487, Island No. 486.

Eagle island, Sterling island, Stag island, Little Stag island, Hausgen island, Jim Crow island, Harlan-Shaper Island, Island No. 462, Pharrs island, Moser island, 305-Mile Tract.

Gilbert island, Blackbird island, Salt River tract, North Fritz island, South Fritz island, Ducker island, Angle island.

Cotton Wood island, Fabius river tract, Orton island, Fabius island, South river tract, Whitney island, Bay de Charles tract and Glaucus island.

Occasionally, someone will object that he owns private property on an area listed as open to the public. Hunters should make on-the-spot checks, looking for signs and markers that will indicate if the area is closed or open.

The regulation that hunting on opening day of the waterfowl season many not start until noon has been abolished this year.

Shooters may start firing at ducks and geese in Missouri 30 minutes before sunrise Friday.

Rabbit Season on Now.

Sportsmen have been confused by the state's new regulation changing the rabbit season.

Inquiry by Outdoors discloses that the season on bunnies is open now and will remain so until Nov. 1, even though the wildlife code book shows it closed.

From No. 1 through 10, hunting is barred in Missouri except for waterfowl and during the five days of the deer season.

Rabbit shooting again will be permitted Nov. 11 and the season will remain open through Feb. 28.

THE first large flight of ducks seen in the Batchtown, Ill., area this season arrived Thursday evening, it was reported by Lawrence Bick, secretary of the Batchtown Sportsmen's Service.

Ducks estimated at about 2000 were seen settling on the public feeding refuge that adjoins the Illinois state-supervised hunting area.

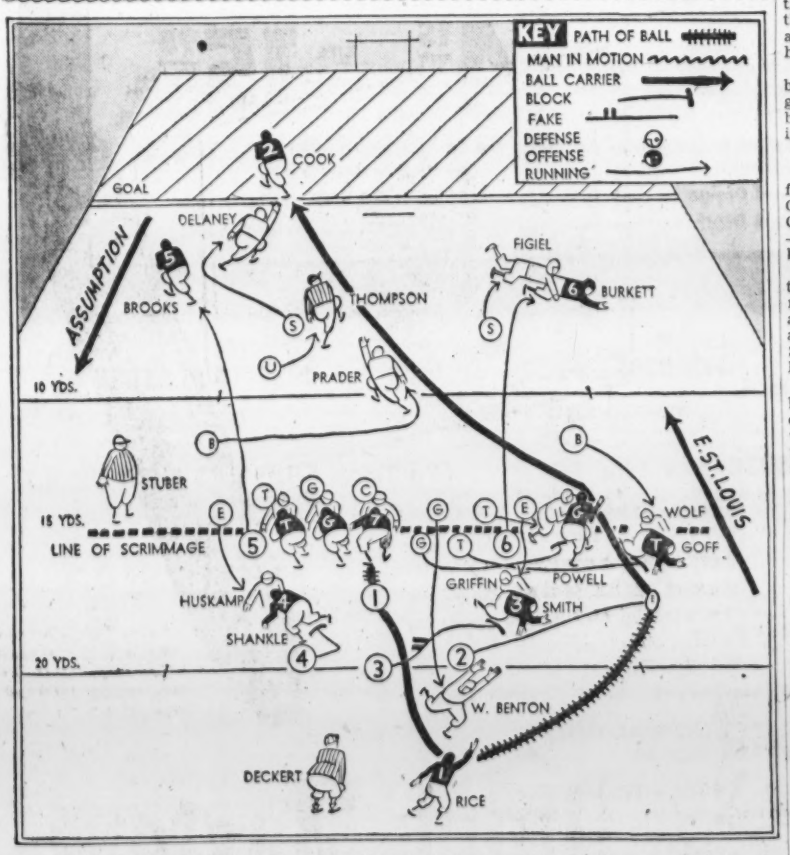
East St. Louis Flies Through Screen

By Dukes Duford and Amadee.



The Flyers of East St. Louis High School used a screen pass to score insurance points and defeat Assumption Thursday night. The final score was 30 to 6, as East St. Louis ran its string of games without a defeat to 38. Here's the play: Leading by only six points late in the third quarter and with possession of the ball on Assumption's 15, East St. Louis lined up in a regular T, while Assumption used a 7-2-2 defense. Quarterback Jack Rice (1) took the ball from Center Bruce Cameron (7), faded straight back and faked a handoff to Fullback Ronnie Smith (3), but instead tossed a short pass to Right Halfback Bobbie Cook (2). Cooked had moved to his right behind a screen set up by his own right tackle and right guard, Goff and Powell. Catching the ball, Cook cut back sharply to his left, getting some fine blocking and decoying from his teammates and was able to scoot across the goal line.

Only the Beginning

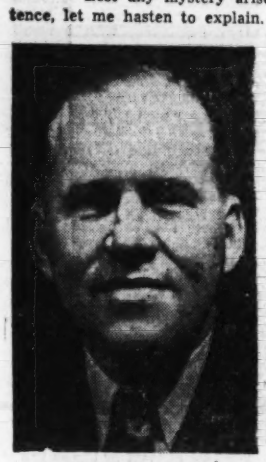
'Take Your Hands Off Me,' She Cried

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (AP).

A HUMAN skull rolled out on the table, and the duchess cried, "Take your hands off me!"

Lest any mystery arise from the foregoing sentence, let me hasten to explain. I wrote it only to please two of my oldest critics.



HAL BOYLE . . . BARES HIS TYPEWRITER.

A dozen years ago I took up that odd kind of mental carpentering called newspaper columning.

Over all those years a writer friend has told me perhaps a thousand times, "the only way to interest readers is to startle them at the start. You should begin every column with the sentence, "A human skull rolled out on the table"—and then go on and write about whatever else you have in mind."

Another writer friend has agreed with him in principle, but has held out for this opening sentence, "Take your hands off me," the duchess cried.

"It has the three things that interest people most—sex, money and high society," he claims. "You could use that sentence day after day after day and your readers would never tire of it."

Maybe they wouldn't—but I would. And so let us say goodby forever to the rolling skull and the crying duchess.

For some reason many readers are interested in the behind-the-scenes trials and tribulations of writing a daily newspaper column. Today I'd like to answer some of the questions most often asked me during my 12 years of buried life.

Q. DO YOU OWN A YACHT?

A. !:-"&£'(-½ (Editor's note: He says, "No!")

Q. Is it hard getting a new idea every day?

A. No harder than it would be to give blood every day.

Q. My son, who is in the sixth grade and says the cutest things, wants to be a columnist. What should I do?

A. Hold his head under cold water; repeat whenever necessary.

Q. What really is the best training for a columnist?

A. Ditch digging and flagpole sitting.

Q. How does a columnist really get most of his ideas?

A. Crying himself to sleep.

Q. COLUMNISTS are always crusading to change the world. Which of your crusades are you proudest of?

A. My lifelong attempt to gain more recognition each year for the second robin of spring.

Q. Does a columnist need a good memory?

A. No. He needs a bad memory. Otherwise he couldn't write the same idea 10 times over and still keep a clear conscience.

Q. Do columnists like each other?

A. Sure, the same way women like each other.

Q. Why are columnists always setting up straw dummies and knocking them over?

A. They have found that if they hit real people, the real people hit back—and that hurts.

Q. DO MOST COLUMNISTS write from an inner need? If so, what is it?

A. Hunger.

Q. What is the greatest problem that could face a columnist?

A. Having to write a column on a typewriter with a broken "I" key.

Q. What is the one thing a columnist needs most to become successful?

A. A successful employer with a sense of humor.

Gene Austin Comeback

By Emily Belser

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 22 (INS).

GENE AUSTIN—the Frank Sinatra of the roaring twenties—won and lost $17,000,000 in 17 years, but he still has nerve enough left to hit the comeback trail.

Not only will Gene record the entire score for a movie based on his colorful life, but he'll soon be crooning old favorites such as "My Blue Heaven" on a cross-country television hook-up.

GENE AUSTIN . . . WHEN AT THE TOP.

Gene—you remember—is the guy who leaned against a radio microphone and gave out with such ditties as "Carolina Moon" and "Bye-Bye Blackbird" while the flappers rolled in the aisles.

But all that a long time ago and meanwhile most of the headlines in the family have gone to Gene's pretty actress daughter, Charlotte Austin. Now, it looks as if it's Gene's turn again.

Austin and his red-haired wife, Lou, are living in a king-size trailer 15 miles from Hollywood while negotiations are under way for his big comeback.

● AUSTIN—who was crooning the blues in the days when Der Bingle still used a comb and Frankie Boy was in his cradle—came by his style by accident. He couldn't sing in the popular loud and brassy vein of the day, so he decided to take it easy.

It was a smart decision, too. He sold 86,000,000 platters and added a number of his own compositions (including "Look Down That Lonesome Road") to the national repertoire. "My Blue Heaven" alone sold 6,500,000 copies.

After this, the shekels rolled in for Gene, but he ran headlong into old John Barleycorn and wound up frittering and gambling away most of his fortune.

"Now," he admitted, "I'm almost afraid to make any money. The more you make the more you spend and Uncle Sam gets the rest."

Four and One-Half Minutes of Television

It Looked Effortless, That St. Louis Segment of 'Wide, Wide World' Show—In Actuality, Sequence Took Weeks of Precision Planning

By Dickson Terry

LAST Sunday afternoon several million people sat in front of their television screens and watched a mammoth, panoramic program called "Wide, Wide World," which transported them to far-flung places and let them watch the people in those places doing the things they happened to be doing that particular autumn afternoon.

Several million people probably will be doing the same thing next Sunday, and a lot of Sundays to follow, because the program, produced by NBC (and seen here over KSD-TV) was the first of a series planned for every other Sunday during the coming winter.

Sunday's show lasted for an hour and a half, was narrated by Dave Garroway and cost more than $100,000. It took the viewer to 11 different spots over the United States, required 73 television cameras scattered from California to New England, which were manned by some 1800 cameramen, engineers and technicians, and a whole raft of producers, directors, assistant directors and experts of all sorts. It used 41,000 miles of cable.

The show took its viewers to San Francisco, the Grand Canyon, the Texas State Fair, New England, Lake Mead, Utah; Arizone, Florida, New York and other interesting places and scenes around the country, including the confluence of the Mississippi and Missouri rivers just above St. Louis.

We will now pan down, as the TV directors say, to this spot on the Mississippi and Missouri rivers where one of the 11 sequences in the show originated, through the facilities and efforts of KSD-TV.

Here viewers saw a paddle-wheel steamboat drifting down the river on a Sunday afternoon. Jet planes flew overhead, speedboats dashed about in the water and an airplane equipped with a television camera gave aerial shots of the meeting of the waters.

MEANWHILE the voice of Garroway, in a seemingly easy and offhand manner, wove a charming commentary around the scene. The whole St. Louis sequence lasted only about four and a half minutes and no doubt to the viewer it presented just the air of casual charm and interest at which the whole program aimed.

No doubt also it gave the impression of having been done with the greatest of ease. All you have to do is get a steamboat, eight jet planes, a TV-equipped plane and a lot of speedboats together at the same time and turn the camera on them. The slightly hysterical laughter you hear offstage comes from producers, directors, cameramen, technicians and engineers of KSD-TV, who have now just about recovered from the job.

Arrangements for the St. Louis segment of the show, which may be used as a microcosm to illustrate the complexity of the job of putting together the whole show, began in early September with telephone conversations between NBC in New York and KSD-TV in St. Louis. Plans for the show were outlined and KSD-TV was asked to handle the St. Louis segment.

No television show, of course, is born full grown, and all the NBC producers knew then was that they wanted a picturesque scene of an autumn afternoon on the Mississippi. A steamboat would, of course, be fundamental. There was even talk of a jazz band and other bits of color, but as the segment took shape the jazz band went out in favor of jet planes. Don't ask anyone how these things happen.

NBC also wanted aerial shots showing how the Missouri flows into the Mississippi, and the only way this could be done, obviously, was with a plane equipped with a TV camera since the whole show is live pick-ups. No film. Planes equipped with TV cameras are something you can't hardly get any of. Just like stern-wheel river boats. The former is too new, it developed, and the latter almost too old.

Frank Eschen, KSD-TV director of special events, and Kieth Gunther, producer-director assigned to the segment, took one thing at a time, and they first went out for jet planes. The nearest available jet planes were those of the Eighty-fifth Fighter Interceptor Squadron, based at Scott Air Force Base, whose duty it is to protect this area from possible attack by enemy aircraft. They make routine flights from time to time, and perhaps a "routine" flight could be arranged at exactly 2:10:57 o'clock on the afternoon of Sunday, Oct. 16, at a point on the Mississippi river where a steamboat, television cameras, etc., were present.

It isn't easy to borrow eight jet planes. Negotiations were started in New York between Eugene Jones, NBC supervisor of cross-country pick-ups, and Maj. Ray Housman of the Air Force. Shortly thereafter a three-and-a-half-hour meeting was held at Scott Air Base attended by a half dozen representatives of NBC; Eschen and Gunther and Ed Risk, chief engineer of KSD-TV; Maj. Housman, Lt. Col. Douglas M. Peck, commander of the jet squadron, and various other Air Force personnel. The TV men explained to the Air Force men what they had in mind and the technicalities involved.

AFTER the Air Force agreed to take part in the show, there was the matter of working out time, altitude and other matters so that the show would run smoothly and everything would be synchronized. It's no easy task to synchronize jet planes into a script when they fly faster than 600 miles an hour. The're likely to be gone before you know it.

Flights were made in the Post-Dispatch plane by NBC and KSD-TV men over the proposed site of the show, to determine where cameras should be, equipment should be stationed, elevation of the jet planes and elevation of the TV-plane and so forth.

After flying over and touring the site, Risk decided on a central control spot on the Illinois side of the Mississippi, directly across from the mouth of the Missouri. Here, at the docks of the Conoco Oil Co., were power lines to which they could hook up. At this time Risk had to make arrangements for this with Ed Michaels of Conoco—another of the many details.

It was decided to have two complete remote TV units, one on the shore and one on the boat. There would be one camera on shore, two cameras on the boat and one in the plane.

In the week preceding the show, meetings were held with all the jet pilots and other Air Force personnel, including the communciations experts from Scott Air Force Base who would maintain contact with the planes from the TV control unit by radio. With maps of the area, the pilots were briefed thoroughly, shown the flight pattern of the TV plane, which would give them their cue to fly into camera range. This had to be split-second timing in the literal sense of the word.

They were to be cued by the pilot of the TV plane, who was to say on the air: "I am about 23 miles northeast of St. Louis on my approach to Scott Air Force Base," and things were to be timed so that when he said the last word, base, the jets were to zoom across the field of vision. They, of course, were in touch with the TV plane by radio, one of many cross-currents of communication going on all the time—shore to boat, boat to shore, shore to KSD in St. Louis, and to NBC in New York, short to Scott Air Base and shore to jet plane. We'll come back to the jets later.

RIGHT now we need an old time Mississippi river stern-wheel paddle boat. There are still some stern-wheelers working the river, but they're tow boats. The Steamship Mississippi, which belongs to the United States Army Corps of Engineers, is the only one of its type left, with a paddle in the back, a Texas deck, and the general nostalgic lines of the old river packets.

The Mississippi is a work boat, used by the Army Corps of Engineers to patrol the river, supervise dredging and other operations to keep the channel clear. It makes an inspection trip up this way every so often, but it wasn't due for a couple of months yet.

Again negotiations were started at the top, with Brig. Gen. Tom Hardin, chief divisional engineer of the lower Mississippi. The boat was at Natchez. The general was persuaded to change the schedule for the next trip and bring the boat up in time for the show.

The Mississippi is 221 feet long, 38 feet wide and carries a crew of 39, headed by Capt. Dave Cook of Memphis, who comes from a long line of steamboat captains. Cook, a young, pleasant and very cooperative skipper, once had a TV show from his boat. It was an Ed Murrow show, but it was done with film. This being a live pick-up, the boat's crew had to be rehearsed just like the jet pilots.

The boat wasn't due to arrive until Saturday, the day before the broadcast. So on Friday night Gunther, Risk, and a staff of technicians set off with a big truckload of equipment and met the boat at St. Genevieve. They loaded on two cameras with tripods and other accessories, control and power supply units, switchers, synchronizing generators, microwave transmitters and controls, two remote control amplifiers, six microphones, 1500 feet of cable and a lot of spare parts. The eyes of the deckhands bugged out.

"All that stuff come in just one truck?" they wanted to know. One deckhand was handed a coil of heavy cable. It slipped through his fingers and almost went into the river.

"Man," he exclaimed, "I thought that was jest garden hose."

A COMPLETE TV station was set up forward in the main deck, with cable stretched to the engineer rooms to get power from the boat's own generator.

The TV-equipped plane, it so happens, is also the only one of its kind in existence. It is one of two planes equipped by the Army Signal Corps for experimental purposes. The other has since been dismantled. The idea behind them—to fly over front lines and televise what's going on for the benefit of the general and his staff who are watching a screen back at field headquarters.

The plane, an L20, commonly known as a Beaver, is based at Fort Huachuca, near Douglas, Ariz. Its use was arranged by NBC and it was flown to St. Louis for the show by Capt. Gordon Parks and Lieut. Richard Livingston, with a crew of six technicians.

Chief Engineer Risk started setting up his shore point, the control center for everything, early in the week before the Sunday of the broadcast. This meant that communication to and from the boat and the planes had to be co-ordinated. Eight technicians were stationed on the boat, eight more on shore.

ALL pictures, those made from boat, plane and a camera on the shore line, would go through the control truck and be fed to the network by microwave. The picture went to Southwestern Bell Telephone in St. Louis which was connected to the cross-country network, and the sound was microwaved to Illinois Bell, through Alton.

This meant that trucks, equipment and men from both telephone companies were working on the scene from Tuesday on through the telecast. Illinois Bell, for example, had two mobile communications units on hand, one at the river and one at Alton, and a crew of 10 men.

The last few days before the broadcast were hectic ones, with rehearsals in which nothing seemed to go right, installation of equipment, and telephone calls between NBC in New York and KSD-TV in St. Louis. The number of calls hasn't been verified yet, but it is expected to be in the dozens, ranging from 15 minutes to an hour, and discussing every detail of the show down to and including whether to swing the cameras in a 90-degree arc or a 180-degree arc to get a close-up shot of the paddle wheel churning the water. A 90-degree arc can be done in five seconds, whereas it would take 10 for a longer arc. Seconds are like diamonds on a deal like this.

By Saturday all the equipment was in place, including the mobile units from the telephone companies, an air-force trailer containing transmitter and receiver, the KSD-TV mobile unit and subsidiary trucks and equipment, all hovering in a tight little group on the river's edge, all surrounded by a couple of dozen cars belonging to telephone men, TV men, Air Force men and various unidentified observers. Across the river loomed the steamboat.

IN the KSD-TV truck were five monitors, labeled "boat," "plane," "air," "shore" and "live output," not to mention a dozen other pieces of highly technical equipment with lights flashing on and off. In addition to the director, who, with headphones, was in touch with all the units, there was the assistant director, Bob Bell, who was in constant communication with NBC at New York, various technicians who watched all the monitors, a sound man, and an Air Force man in communication with the jets.

A rehearsal was held Saturday afternoon, at which everything went wrong. The jets were either early or late, the steamboat was slow or fast, and towboats kept getting into the picture. This necessitated getting in touch with lock masters at the Chain of Rocks and Alton, who agreed to hold up towboats during the show.

Nobody slept well Saturday night. A number of the technicians stayed on the boat. Early Sunday morning everyone was gathered on the cold river bank again, and at 10 o'clock another rehearsal was scheduled. It developed, however, that the jets couldn't get into the rehearsal because of certain flying time restrictions. This was a complete dress rehearsal of the entire show, from coast to coast. Everything went all right, except the steamboat was a little late, so they ran through it again. Captain Cook, a man of considerable humor and good nature, estimated he had crossed the river about 50 times, but he never lost patience.

Lunch was brought out to the shore crew by a catering firm from St. Louis. It was eaten in grim silence. Those lucky enough to be on the boat, however, had fried chicken, potatoes and gravy, peas and hot rolls, served on snow white linen by stewards in crisp white jackets. The technicians stationed on the boat had reason to congratulate themselves.

At a quarter of two Gunther alerted everyone. They were due to hit the air at 2:10.50, which means exactly 10 minutes and 50 seconds after two.

Sleep, Sweet Sleep For the Ground Hog

By Leonard Hall

THERE are advantages to living in a countryside which is a jumble of fields and woods, creeks and ponds, patches of waste ground and thickety fence-rows. Land such as this supplies a variety of environments so that it almost always supports a good population of birds and wild animals, both in number of individuals and range of species. And the longer one lives in close association with these birds and animals, the friendlier one becomes with them. No longer do we look upon them as game to be killed or pests to be destroyed, but rather as neighbors that have as good a right to live out their lives here as we have.

The fact of the matter is, we've even made our peace with the ground hogs which farmers generally regard as a nuisance and hunters as a target. There's no doubt these furry little fellows are great forage eaters, consuming a considerable amount of such crops as clover and alfalfa. Also they are tremendous diggers, so that their burrows are sometimes a danger to livestock. Yet the ground hog generally digs at the edge of the field and very often a few yards back in the wooded border. And here there can be little doubt that his excavating activities do have a useful purpose, since the burrows serve as shelters and dens for other animals and especially the cottontail rabbit.

The ground hog—or woodchuck, as he is known in the eastern part of his wide range—is actually an engaging and peaceable little fellow. He harms no other animal and, except for man and his dogs, has few enemies. He can, in a pinch, be eaten although he seldom is hunted by man for this purpose. His pelt, moreover, has little value so that he is scorned by the trapper. Yet in spite of this and of the fact that he consumes almost any sort of plant food and thus seldom suffers from a limited diet, it isn't often that the ground hog population gets really out of hand.

We generally start watching for the ground hog along in mid-April when he awakens from his long winter's sleep and comes out looking for food. This is also his mating season and the young are born after just four weeks, generally about a half-dozen of them in a litter. For several weeks they remain in the nest which the mother ground hog has built deep down in the burrow. But by alfalfa cutting time, the youngsters are fat and fully furred out and can often be found playing and feeding around the mouth of the den.

● ONCE THE YOUNG GROUND HOGS are old enough to forage for themselves, the family breaks up and they are on their own. For ground hogs are actually solitary creatures, each having its bit of territory and its own burrows. These burrows are really remarkable structures, often going down for six feet, then extending laterally for 25 feet or even more. There is always a mound of dirt around the main entrance and then, perhaps four or five feet down the slanting tunnel, a sort of barricade of dirt which blocks off any direct view of the depths and also probably serves as a sort of observation post for the owner. Somewhere far from the entrance the ground hog digs a side tunnel ending in a sort of room where he sleeps and stores emergency rations. And also somewhere far from the main entrance, which is marked by the inevitable dirt mound, the ground hog digs straight upward until he comes out above ground again. This gives him an emergency entrance, well hidden in the grass and inconspicuous because there is no tell-tale pile of dirt to mark it.

During the summer a ground hog may dig several dens. One may be out in the field where the forage is heaviest, another at the edge of a cornfield and still another close to a creek or spring. Or one of the burrows may be quite deep in the woods, for more than once in the heat of mid-summer, I've come upon a fat young ground hog stretched out in the sunlight at the base of a big oak tree. If the dogs aren't with me, I can sit down close by and watch. The ground hog yawns and stretches, dozes awhile, awakens to scratch his ear with a furry fore-paw. Finally, when I toss a small clod of dirt toward him, he gives his sharp, flute-like whistle and dives into his burrow among the roots.

● AS SUMMER WEARS ALONG the young ground hogs mature and the old ones grow fat as senators. Often in the early morning and late afternoon we see them standing contemplatively beside the mouths of their burrows, observing their small world with a calm and philosophical eye. Summer has been good and all during early autumn they've been storing fat for the long winter's sleep that lies ahead. Actually I suppose the largest ground hog is seldom more than 24 inches in length and with a weight of perhaps 12 pounds. But at this season when we see one of the big fellows waddling sedately across the alfalfa field, it would be easy to guess he'd tip the scales at twice that figure.

As the days grow shorter and a chill comes to the morning air, the ground hog becomes less active. Now we see him mostly in the afternoon when the October sun has warmed the air. And each night his sleep becomes deeper and each day his blood circulates more slowly and his awakening is later. Finally as the leaves fall and most mornings bring sharp frost, there comes a day when he does not waken at all. Gradually his pulse slows until, from 80 beats a minute, it slows to a mere dozen. Curled deep in his den, his normal 95-degree temperature gradually drops to 40 degrees. If we could watch, his breathing would be almost imperceptible, coming only a dozen times in an hour. Thus our small and furry companion of the summer meadows has rounded out the cycle of his active year and we will see him no more until the April sun warms the earth again and sets the meadow to growing.

Fortune From Gullible Women

'Oom the Omnipotent,' Who Died Recently at 80, Sold His Clients On the Idea That He Had Secret Of Living to Well-Preserved 200

By Virginia Irwin

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.

OOM THE OMNIPOTENT, The Great Loving Guru of the Tantriks, is no more.

On Sept. 28, death came quietly in a New York hospital for the self-styled mystic who back in the twenties talked New York society matrons out of millions by selling them on the idea that he held the secret of 200-year-long life.

Oom couldn't even turn that trick for himself. He died at 80, a whole 120 years short of his mark.

One of the New York area's most colorful characters in the first three decades of the century, Oom in recent years preferred to be known as Dr. Pierre Arnold Bernard. Seeking to shroud his past under a mantle of respectability, he had for some time lived a placid life on his sumptuous and almost inaccessible estate in nearby Rockland county. And so well did time knit up the tatters of his once-raveled reputation that he became something of a pillar in his community and even president of a small-town bank.

THE MAN WHO BEGAN LIFE AS JUST PLAIN PETER COON AT LEON, IOWA, ON HIS ESTATE AT NYAK, N. Y., IN 1924. AT THAT TIME HE REFERRED TO HIMSELF AS DR. PIERRE ARNOLD BERNARD.

Oom began life as just plain Peter Coon at Leon, Ia. The dawn of the Twentieth century found him working as a barber in Chicago. Bitten with the wanderlust, he made his way to the Pacific coast where he worked for a while, first as a lemon picker and then as a salmon packer.

In 1905, after observing the workings of several flourishing cults on the West Coast, the young man from Iowa decided that the mystic business had it all over manual labor. With little more effort than it took to make a swami's turban out of a bath towel, he set up shop. With a San Francisco pal, one Martin L. Hargis, he formed the Bacchante Club to teach young women the art of "soul charming" and to instruct them in the mysteries of acquiring mystic powers over the male sex.

The "club" soon folded when skeptical police insisted on regarding the swami from the Midwest as a fraud.

During the next few years Coon underwent a complete metamorphosis. He became Oom the Omnipotent. He even seemed to believe it himself. No longer content with the two-bit trappings of his San Francisco days, he descended upon New York as a Hindu guru, "the all-knowing teacher" and "possessor of the key to the 200-year-long life."

OOM prospered as jaded socialites flocked to his Temple of Mystery where he served up "spiritual cocktails" composed of his own homemade hokum, made by stirring together a few Yoga exercises, some ritual dances and a generous portion of double talk on Hindu philosophy.

Soon Oom felt sufficiently omnipotent to set up an even more ambitious undertaking, The New York Sanskrit College. But in 1910 he again ran afoul of the law and was thrown into jail on the complaint of two young girls who charged he held them captive in his cult headquarters. The Omnipotent Oom languished in the Tombs for 141 days while police gathered juicy material about the midnight rituals and other Oriental goings-on at the so-called college.

Oom was never prosecuted because the two girls vanished before the trial and the charges were dropped.

Oom promptly opened another cult headquarters on Manhattan's fashionable East Side and in 1924, with lavish "donations" from his faithful followers, many of whom were social registerites and several of whom were members of America's most famous families, he bought a huge estate in Rockland county and established The American Order of Tantrik. It was also in 1924 that one of the great society shocks of the day occurred when Barbara Rutherford Hatch, heiress to Vanderbilt millions, married Winfield J. Nicholls, who turned out to be Oom's old San Francisco pal, Hargis, who had stuck by his boss all those years.

Now known variously as The Great Loving Guru of The Tantriks, Odysseus the Ordained, and The Greatest Guru of Them All, Oom also was referred to as the Nizam of Nyack since his new estate was near the town of Nyack, N. Y. On the estate in addition to an "affection palace" built at the reputed cost of $3,000,000, Oom constructed what he called the Inner Circle Theater. The theater was decorated with many buddhas, mystic symbols, incense jars, Javanese upas trees and also housed a library of thousands of books.

THE SELF-STYLED MYSTIC INSTRUCTING LOU NOVA, HEAVYWEIGHT BOXER, IN THE PRACTICE OF YOGA, AT THE LATTER'S NYAK TRAINING CAMP IN 1939.

AT Oom's "religious country club" or "health farm," well-heeled socialites listened to lectures by their leader, The Wise Man of Many Mysteries, and sought to grasp his version of the fundamentals of Yoga. Social life was of course not neglected by The Great Loving Guru of The Tantriks.

One of his most lavish entertainments was a society circus held in 1929. More than 100 automobiles, most of them with liveried chauffeurs, were counted entering the estate.

One of the highlights of the entertainment program was a dance by Mlle. Blanche de Vries, a Parisian showgirl whom Oom had married some years before. For her dance, Mlle. de Vries, clad in flowing veils, arose from a coffin and while executing some difficult Oriental gyrations saluted Oom with a song composed especially for the occasion:

That man has the whole world.
He has me, he has you.
He has all of us now.
He has the whole world in his hands.

Oom acknowledged the tribute by doing a dance specialty number with a baby elephant as his partner. The baby elephant, incidentally, came from Oom's own zoo, which housed five elephants, a lion, a chimpanzee and several llamas.

The elephants figured in one of the favorite forms of relaxation practiced by the society princesses after they had worn themselves out with a good stiff round of Yoga exercises. Lolling in howdahs atop the elephants' backs, the ladies would take their afternoon naps as uniformed mahouts led the great beasts about the estate.

At one point the solid citizens around Nyack initiated a drive to rid the community of the Omnipotent Oom. Local residents peeping through the tall hedges of the estate reported incredible goings-on. For instance there was the spectacle presented by the wealthy cultists standing on their heads practicing deep breathing and hippety-hopping over the greensward with soda straws in their nostrils. Oom claimed breathing through the straws improved the respiratory process.

NOTHING ever came of the move to oust Oom from his stronghold. Instead he entrenched himself even deeper in the community. He bought up property after property and by 1931 was paying taxes on $12,000,000 worth of real estate in Rockland County.

He also began to develop a passion for respectability. He changed from the toga-like robe he wore as chief poobah of the Tantriks and took to wearing expensive English tweeds around his estate.

He became president of the nearby Pearl River bank and attended meetings of the board of directors in a black frock coat with gates-ajar collar, striped trousers and pearl gray spats.

Little by little the old Oom was forgotten and as Dr. Pierre Arnold Bernard he took an active part in community life. He held a variety of posts in financial institutions. To his vast real estate holdings he added a $75,000 greyhound racing track which he rented to a syndicate. He became the crony of many top figures in the sports world. He built a stadium and promoted football and lacrosse games, boxing matches and wrestling contests.

AS "OOM THE OMNIPOTENT" IN 1925.

IN recent years, Oom had become every inch the respected financier. Indeed, the very community that once wanted to toss him out on his ear claimed him as one of its leading citizens.

Oom once described himself as "a curious combination of the business man and religious scholar." His widow, Mrs. Blanche Bernard, said at the time of her husband's death that he had spent the last 10 years or so of his life traveling and writing for Indian periodicals on comparative religion and comparative philosophy.

Many questions about the erstwhile Oom's life remain unanswered. For instance did he really study in India as he claimed and gain the right to call himself a Shastri, a teacher of Hinduism?

Whatever questions remain unanswered, there can be no doubt about the fact that in his hey-day as Oom the Omnipotent his mystic personality reached into and influenced the lives of members of some of the great blue blood families of the country.

Nor can there be any doubt about his prowess as a promoter. More interested in money than in metaphysics, he parlayed a swami bathtowel turban into a fantastic fortune.

Comings and Goings of the Hollywood Movie Crowd

By Sheilah Graham

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 22.

ROBERTO ROSSELLINI will be in India while Ingrid Bergman stars on the Paris stage in "Tea and Sympathy." But don't get Ingrid wrong. She's loyal to Roberto, who has agreed it will be better for her career to work with other directors for a while. . . . However, her Somerset Maugham movie with Mel Ferrer is out. Ingrid didn't care for the script or the producer.

Jimmy Cagney won't see his Martha's Vineyard farm until Christmas. He starts "All Our Tomorrows" at M.-G.M. immediately after he finishes his present "Tribute to a Bad Man."

WHILE CLAIRE TREVOR was working in France in "The Mountain," husband Milton Bren bought a new boat. . . . Which reminds me, Humphrey Bogart will enter the next Honolulu yacht race with his "Santana," and Dewey Martin — Bogey's brother in "The Desperate Hours" — will be one of the crew.

William Holden owns a piece of the Japanese film, "Samurai" —which is why he does the narrating. . . . Carol Haney's contract with M.-G.-M. starts one month after the baby is born. . . . Cary Grant will really sing his songs in "Can Can."

When Red Skelton gave his wife a $17,000 bracelet, he told her, "Here's something I got in a Crackerjack box." . . . Grace Kelly is serious about doing a Broadway play. . . . Jayne Mansfield's click in "Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter?" makes Warner Brothers sorry they let her go.

Marlon Brando has put away the spats and homberg and reverted to his old blue jeans. He doesn't have to go to New York between pictures—his psychiatrist is here.

The new British Marilyn Monroe — the just-as-blonde Diana Dors—is coming to this country to spark interest in her movies. Marilyn usually travels alone, but Diana will be escorted by a baronet and a marquis.

Gary Cooper said he would take a long vacation after doing "Friendly Persuasion." But, when William Wyler asked him to co-star with Audrey Hepburn in "Arianne," Coop was a sitting duck. He didn't even bother to read the script.

INGRID BERGMAN . . . DON'T GET HER WRONG.

JIMMY CAGNEY . . . NEW PICTURE COMING UP.

JUDY HOLLIDAY . . . LOOKING FOR LARGE HOUSE.

Here's something new in film selling: Christian Dior's creations for Olivia de Havilland in Norman Krasna's "The Ambassador's Daughter" will be sent on a nation-wide tour prior to the release of the picture. This is Olivia's first comedy since her Warner days.

Judy Holliday says to say everything is fine with the husband, and he's coming out to stay with her as soon as she finds a house large enough to hold the whole family. Judy is here for Columbia's "Solid Gold Cadillac."

GUY MADISON was mobbed by a bunch of kids in Florida while doing an outdoor love scene with Virginia Leith (for "Threshold of Space"). The kids walked off saying, "That just can't be Wild Bill Hickok."

Rossana Rory, Warner Brothers' new import from Italy, doesn't have to act for a living. Holding a degree in architecture, she is also a successful painter, with showings in the best art galleries. Rossana, a beautiful blonde, speaks English fluently.

So far, the directors' battle for this year's Oscar will narrow down to William Wyler ("Desperate Hours") and Mark Robson ("Trial." John Huston would certainly be in the running for "Moby Dick" but, at this writing, it doesn't look like his Gregory Peck picture will be released in time to qualify for the Oscar Derby.

Rita Hayworth's return to her picture career depends on how soon Columbia drops the lawsuit against her. The studio has nearly $2,000,000 invested in "Joseph and His Brethern," and all will be forgiven if Rita agrees to star in the movie.

Mitzi Gaynor breathlessly reports she has signed to star on Broadway next spring in "Li'l Abner." . . . Dinah Shore is writing a cookbook for wives inexperienced in the culinary art. . . . Julie London, the ex-Mrs. Jack Webb, has a hit record in "Cry Me a River."

Jean Pierre Aumont isn't talking—but things look cozy for his future with Grace Kelly, who never talks too much about affairs of the heart either, but always is cozy in love. . . . Nor is Robert Stack talking—but I hear it's a spring wedding with Rosemarie Bowe.

KATHARINE HEPBURN returns via Hollywood from her Australian tour to discuss her "Not For Money" picture with Bob Hope, and to visit old pals here. . . . Kirk and Ann Douglas will live in Paris for a spell, after the baby arrives and after Kirk finishes "Lust For Life."

There'll have to be a rewrite on "The Story of Esther Costello" to make the older woman more agreeable for Joan Crawford. . . . . Robert Wagner is moving into his Paramount dressing room for the duration of "The Mountain." . . . . But Spencer Tracy's flu is holding up the picture.

Alec Guinness will start on his memoirs when he returns to England after completing "The Swan." . . . Mae West is in the market for a dude ranch. . . . And Richard Boone put all his U-I salary from "Away All Boats" into real estate. Dick's movie salary has doubled because of his "Medic" success.

Anthony Quinn seems to have a passion for owning homes—he's building his fifth in Portofino. He'll co-star with Robert Mitchum in "Bandido." . . .

Jerry Lewis laughingly refers to Frank Sinatra as Frank Sinister. Sinatra's independent movie, "The Man With the Golden Arm," shows him as a dope addict and there is no seal of approval for it from the Johnston office.

Marriage 3-Ring Circus

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

THE family that plays together stays together; and the husband and wife who learn to use their leisure time properly are building a solid foundation under their marriage.

They should try to make a three-ring circus out of their marriage. If you are old enough to remember, you'll recall the big center ring, with a small ring at each side. In marriage, one small ring represents the husband's personal life, into which his wife does not enter but with which she must sympathize. This may be his business associations, his lodge, union, veterans' organization, bowling club, or anything else. The other small ring is his wife's personal life, into which he does not enter but with which, again, he must be in sympathy. It may be her lodge, club, sewing circle, women's society of the church, or anything else. Each must have a life of his or her own.

But between these two smaller rings is the center ring which represents the joint activities of the pair, the things which husband and wife do as a team; and this must be at least as big as the other two rings put together. Marriages fall apart when either of the two side rings becomes too big in relation to the center.

IT IS IMPORTANT that the wife have some opportunity for self-expression, some interest outside the home that makes her feel she is an individual in her own right, as well as a wife. But husband and wife must do more things together than they do separately. This requires deliberate planning because there is what might be called a normal conflict at this point, growing out of the fact that the husband is usually away from home all day while the wife is in the home. The only time they have for recreation is in the evening.

Now recreation, by definition, means doing something different from what you have been doing all day. All right —something different for the wife is to go out, something different for the husband is to stay home! No question comes to me more frequently than this one from the wife, "How can I get my husband to take me out oftener?"

HUSBANDS who want to succeed in marriage will have to make some sacrifice, if necessary, to build up a good social life with their wives.

Answers to Questions.

Q. Isn't a man entitled to have some private life after marriage?

A. Certainly; but he'd better not make it too exclusive and prolonged, or he may end up by having nothing else. The marriage won't survive.

Q. My widowed mother, now in her forties, wants to remarry; claims it's really love. Is that possible for a woman of her age?

A. Why not? A mature woman might be capable of much deeper, more permanent, more worthwhile feelings than the transient romantic impulse of a high-school girl. Write me, with self-addressed, stamped envelope, for my free rating scale, "Are You Sure It's Love?"

Q. DO PEOPLE who come from large families generally feel that they want small families of their own, not large ones?

A. Questioning 613 students at Texas Christian College, Austin L. Porterfield found that "children from small families want larger families than their parents had, and children from larger families want fewer children than their parents had."

Q. My wife is somewhat jealous. . . .

A. Psychologist E. Roland says that "a certain amount of jealousy is both an obligation and a right of each partner in marriage." Don't give her cause for more than "a certain amount"; and make sure she manages that amount constructively to strengthen the marriage.

Q. I think I'm at least entitled to justice in my marriage!

A. Some philosophers have argued that if any of us really got justice we'd be in pitiable condition. A little mercy helps. A little more generosity on your side would probably bring out more of the same on your husband's side.

Flawless Table Top

By Christopher Billopp

A WELL-POLISHED and flawless table top is something beautiful to behold. It is no wonder the woman of the household is always on guard to protect it from careless and thoughtless persons.

It may be admitted that a ring or other scar on a table top is difficult, if not impossible, to rub off. It has to be confessed that a table top which has been carelessly ringed or scarred will never look the same.

On the other hand, is a flawless table top so valuable that, while it takes up room and is the most convenient place in sight, no tumbler, cup, jam jar or other object is to be permitted to rest upon it? Is a flawless table top so essential that a child who threatens it must be screamed at and have its emotions so excited that it may be embittered against civilized society and develop a hatred for all beautiful things?

IS THE DEFENSE of a table top worth scolding a husband who, coming home exhausted from a day's work earning money to support his family, thoughtlessly rests his wet umbrella on it?

Is any table top worth so much that members of the family are made to hold it in awe and forbidden to treat it in the natural, hearty manner they treat less valuable and less beautiful, but certainly more useful, pieces of furniture?

IS ITS PRESERVATION justifiable if the children stand in so much terror of doing it harm that they seek the homes of friends where there are no similar table tops?

In short, would it not be better to have a table top of glass that could be washed off, or one of plain, unvarnished board that could not be hurt by anything short of being attacked with an ax?

Educating the Handicapped

225 Children Under Special Instruction in Catholic Schools—Program in Sixth Year

By Clarissa Start

WHY bother to educate the handicapped child? The one who is mentally retarded so that he can never progress beyond the simplest reading, writing, and counting stage. The crippled, the spastic, the epileptic child who may never make "Who's Who," or grow up to be president.

The Rev. E. H. Behrmann, director of special education for the Archdiocese of St. Louis, has several answers to those who feel that money, space, and teachers should not be wasted on children who can never benefit fully because of their limited capacities. He likes to quote James Truslow Adams who, in his book, "The Epic of America," describes the American dream as "that dream of a land in which life should be better and richer, and fuller for every man, with opportunity for each according to his ability or achievement."

He also likes to quote Archbishop Cushing of Boston who said that Christian civilization is measured by "the test of the least," or, "What provisions does a civilization make for its least members?" But most of all, he feels he has only to cite the life of Jesus among the blind, the lame, the deaf, and the maladjusted, and His statement, "Amen, I say unto you, as long as you did it to one of these my least brethren, you did it to Me."

Now in its sixth year, the program of special education classes in Catholic schools takes care of 225 of these "least" ones, 165 of them in day schools, 60 at St. Mary's Residential School. The schools have done an outstanding job in a field where so much needs to be done. This afternoon an Open House and Fall Festival for the benefit of both phases of this program will be held at St. Mary's School, 5341 Emerson avenue.

SPECIAL education is not a new idea. St. Louis public schools have had special classes for many years. But until 1950 there was no co-ordinated program in the Catholic schools. St. Louis County schools, public and private, are still inadequate to care for the handicapped, and residential schools for outstate residents are even scarcer.

"But I feel there has been a recent ground swell, an increasing amount of interest in the care and education of these children," Father Behrmann says optimistically. "The state Legislature recently appointed a subcommittee to study the problems of the mentally retarded children. The office of the National Association for Retarded Children is establishing clinics and nurseries and what they call 'sheltered workshops' to provide job training for the retarded. All these are indications of the dawn of a new day for parents who have been groping in the dark for such a long time."

Estimates show that 2 per cent of all children are mentally retarded. Father Behrmann's terminology divides them into high, medium and low grade defectives. The low grade are totally dependent, can be taught very little; usually they have trouble feeding and clothing themselves. A medium grade child will have an IQ of 25 to 50; a high, 50 to 70. A child with an IQ of 50 can best be understood by comparing him to a child half his age. At eight, he will be the equivalent of a 4-year-old. At 16, where most of us level off in mental development, he will have the mental age of an 8-year-old.

"But," Father Behrmann emphasizes, "in later life, he can learn to use more effectively what mental equipment he has. A child of 16 may be the mental level of an 8-year-old, but he can do second grade work more successfully because he has the advantage of eight more years' experience. Often he can do fourth grade work.

"Some of these children have been helped beautifully at home. They are emotionally adjusted. They've been taken on vacation trips, sight seeing trips to the zoo, for instance. They are better developed than a child who has lived in an impoverished social situation, whose parents are indifferent—as sometimes happens—and have let the child vegetate."

WORK with the parents is the first step in educating a handicapped child. They insist that the parent call his child mentally retarded if that is the difficulty, that he face facts. They find it helps parents greatly to meet with other parents of retarded children to talk over problems. The idea of "hiding away" a retarded child is rapidly disappearing.

"Not long ago a mother came in here with a Mongoloid child," Father Behrmann says. "When the child was born, the doctor had advised the mother not to take him home. This is a fallacy we're trying to uproot. The Mongoloid is a medium defective child, besides having certain personable characteristics which distinguish him. He is by far the most adjustable of handicapped children.

"When the mother insisted on taking the child home, the doctor advised her to keep him out of sight. So for the first five years of his life, he was never taken out of the apartment in which they lived. He had never seen the outside world. When he came into this office for testing, he was scared to death. Now he has adjusted very well to school work."

Testing is done by Father Behrmann to ascertain the degree of retardation. Sometimes a child believed to be retarded by parents turns out to have an emotional problem instead. One girl who was failing in school work tested in the genius classification. A tense family situation had caused her difficulty and boarding school proved to be the answer.

According to state law, the "educable" child is that child with an IQ of 48 or more; below that he is considered "trainable," that is, he may be trained to feed and clothe himself but will not profit from education.

"Those standards are for public schools, "Father Behrmann says. "We as a private school system interpret our admittance policy on the individual child and have admitted many whose IQ falls below 48. We have gone as low as 30 and found our judgment vindicated.

"I think there has been overemphasis on statistical IQs. A child may have a fine personality which can be developed. We try to take into consideration health, social maturity, other factors and by and large we bend over backwards to give every child the benefit of the doubt.

"Often we can bring a child at least to second or third grade level in reading, writing, numbers. These are basic skills which, with character training and socializing, enable them to be trained for some sort of job so they will not be dependent on parents, brother or sister economically, or shunted off to a state school which is already overcrowded."

THE program for day students in regular parochial schools and residential students (mostly from rural areas) at St. Mary's run "on parallel tracks." Classes are ungraded; they consist of 15 boys and girls from six to 16 years of age. All are mentally or physically handicapped to such a degree that they cannot learn in normal classes.

"One might be a child of 12 with an IQ of 45, another a child of six with an IQ of 60," explained Father Behrmann. "One might be a polio victim, another a brain-damaged child, hyper-active, constantly talking, one a convulsive child given to spells similar to epilepsy. One sister must face this heterogeneity and adapt her methods to the needs and interests of each individual. Sometimes she can group them, perhaps a six-year-old and a 12-year-old may have the same mental level. In any event, her work is always challenging."

Teachers are recruited from various religious communities. At present there are 19 of them, from the Dominican and Ursuline Orders, from the Sisters of St. Joseph, the Sisters of Loretto, the School Sisters of Notre Dame, the Sisters of the Most Precious Blood, and the Sisters of St. Francis (Oldenburg). All teachers have special training, Father Behrmann a Ph. D. degree.

With the approval of Archbishop Ritter and the co-operation of the Rev. James E. Hoflich, superintendent of parish schools, the department of Special Education was established in September 1950.

"The St. Louis public schools have an excellent program since 1922," Father Behrmann says, "and they were most kind in helping us get started. We owe a great deal to Miss Lucy Elliott (retired special education director) who allowed our sisters to visit their classes and see how the work was done."

LAST year, Father Behrmann added a new class for senior students, 16, 17 and 18, who receive on-the-job training.

"We teach them perseverance, seeing a job through, punctuality, the ability to accept criticism gracefully," Father Behrmann said. "Some retarded young people have been discharged from jobs not through inability to do the work but through inability to get along with people. In placing them, we try to find jobs which are not in competitive situations but in sheltered conditions, such as hospitals and convents.

"Such a job may not be a highly paid job but for them it's like striking uranium because it's the difference between a youngster being self supporting and being a liability."

Tuition in special education classes has purposely been kept at a minimum ($50 a year for day work, $800 a year at St. Mary's) to benefit a majority. Fund drives, card parties make up the deficit. Father Behrmann converts any available music room, study hall or spare corner in a regular parochial school to make space for his growing classes. His office on the ground floor of the building at 3800 Lindell boulevard is usually crowded with youngsters waiting to see him.

IN addition to work with the mentally retarded, Father Behrmann's department conducts remedial reading clinics for normal children, and does child guidance work with problem children. Often the problems are interchangeable. A juvenile delinquent referred to Father Behrmann by the police may turn out to be a child who had difficulty in school stemming from an inability to read well.

Some of the children in special classes are the physically handicapped, the spastic youngsters who have faulty motor coordination but normal minds and who cannot be grouped—as was often done in the past—with the mentally retarded. Some children who have had polio have been unable to keep up with regular classes at school and come into the special education group. One story with an especially happy ending was that of the boy recently enrolled who had never gone to school because he could not go up and down stairs.

"We solved the problem," Father Behrmann says, "by having two husky eighth graders call for him each day and carry him, basket fashion. In his first year, he reached the sixth grade level in reading. Now he even plays basketball from his wheelchair, and you've never seen a happier boy about going to school.

"Sometimes," Father Behrmann smiled, "we wish we could get our normal children to be as happy about it."

Mike, the Dog Has His Master Trained

By Stan Delaplane

SAN FRANCISCO.

A MAN named Willie Necker has written a book, "How to Train the Family Dog." And Grosset & Dunlap sent me a copy. They couldn't have sent it to a better man.

This is a good book, with plenty of illustrations, and costs only $1. Which is as much as anybody should sink in dog-training books. Any more would be a mistake. Because training a dog works only half way. The other half is how he trains you.

I am a well-trained dog owner and I think my boxer is proud of me. He has to snap me up once in a while. But mainly I am obedient and handle well.

My boxer's name is Carmichael (though I call him Mike). During the nine years we have been together he has been patient and taught me quite a bit.

Necker says one of the best things a dog can learn is "No."

Mike has learned "No." But I have had to learn that I don't really mean it. This was hard for me to learn. But he kept at me and now I know.

Take when this dog was a puppy. Boxers are pretty big to begin with. When this dog got to be about a year old, he considered he was still a puppy. He liked to sit in my lap. He weighed about 80 pounds.

WHEN I TRIED to push him off my lap—"No! No!"—he bit me. He said it was nothing. Just firmness. Didn't even break the skin. He growled horribly.

After that I got out of the chair when he came around. Provided no lap. That will cure him, I said.

Well, this suited Mike just fine. He climbed into the chair with a deep sigh. Nowadays he bites me if I sit in his chair. I don't dare sit in the chair while he is in the house. If I sit in the chair and he sees me through the window, he barks like crazy.

Then I get up and go sit on the couch. The couch is not as comfortable. But it is safer. All mine.

We went through most of the dog-training book during our first year together. But we gave up a lot of it as useless.

We gave up "Stay." When you say "Stay," your dog is supposed to stay there. This dog doesn't care to stay anywhere very long. It bores him. He likes to move around and check the action.

I USED TO THREATEN HIM. But after he drove me out of my own chair, he knew he had me. My spirit was broken.

We have dropped "Heel." Also the leash. All dogs should walk quietly on a leash, Necker says. But Mike feels that a leash is put on him because he is a killer.

Actually, he is a rather mild dog. But he has delusions of being a Golden Glove champion. When he is on a leash he screams at other dogs.

"If I was off this leash, I'd show you!" he screams. "They keep me on this leash because I'm a killer!"

The other dogs, not being on a leash, come over to check this statement. Mike expects me to get in the fray and bite the other dog on the hind leg. I have been involved in many dog fights.

We have given up the leash. It is nothing but trouble.

I wish Necker had said something about how to keep a dog from worrying.

My dog worries almost all the time. Though it is hard to figure with a boxer, since they have a naturally worried expression. He has a face a good deal like my banker when I am renewing the loan.

I CANNOT FIGURE WHY he is worried. Because as near as I can see the only interest he has in life is eating. I think maybe he worries about where his next meal is coming from. Though he knows perfectly well it comes right out of the ice box.

There is also nothing in the book about what to do about dog hiccups. This dog is the only dog I ever saw who had hiccups. I have tried giving him sips of water. Once I tried putting a paper sack over his head. He has never forgiven me for it.

Anyway, it is nice to have a trained dog around the house. But you have to have a trained man to go with him.

Metallic Brocade

Metallic brocade is sufficiently handsome as a material for evening dresses that it needs no adornment. The slim sheath dress which is street length is featured in pale blue, mauve or blond tones. Most of the dresses have a low neckline which is round at the front but extends to a deep V at the back. Some dresses that are slim at the front have fan-shaped fullness at the back.

Birthday Beats Deadline

Law Nearly Kept Gillian Barber Out of 'Alice' Role

By Jack Gaver

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (UP). IT may be that Gillian Barber's fourteenth birthday will prove to have been the most important in her life, and it arrived just in the nick of time.

Gillian — she pronounces it Jillian—is the British lass who will have the title role in Maurice Evans's 90-minute production of "Alice in Wonderland" on KSD-TV from 2 to 3:30 this afternoon.

Evans went to London last June to select an Alice, and he had no difficulty making up his mind once he came to Gillian in the crowd of eager applicants. But his overwhelming desire to employ her wouldn't have done him a bit of good had the girl's fourteenth birthday been due a week or so later than Sept. 27, on which it fell.

UNDER British law children cannot go abroad for theatrical employment before they are 14. Gillian made it barely in time to get here for the rehearsals. She hasn't had much opportunity to "do" New York.

"I'm staying in a hotel near Central Park, and I've had a ride through it in one of the carriages," Gillian said. "And I've been to the top of the Empire State Building. But that's about all. I had hoped to be able to get about last Sunday, but I had to have my hair lightened that day and there was no time."

Gillian has light brown hair that reaches her waist. For the show, which is in color, it is desirable that it be more on the blond side. She wears it in doubled-up pigtails normally, but when she's playing Alice it will fall loosely in the fashion of the Alice made famous in the John Tenniel drawings for the Lewis Carroll classic.

THE girl is small for her age, which is a decided asset in playing Alice, who was about eight years old. She has been a professional for two years—starting at the age of 12 which is the earliest permitted by British law — and has had two seasons in winter pantomime on the stage and appeared in a number of television productions. Shortly before she came here she finished working in a filmed "Scarlet Pimpernel" series for the new British commercial TV.

GILLIAN BARBER . . . SHE PRONOUNCES NAME JILLIAN.

"Gillian started out to be a ballet dancer," explained Mrs. Irene Grandison-Clark, founder and principal of the professional school Gillian attends in Croydon, her home. "She is a good dancer, and I'm sorry she doesn't have a chance to do any dancing in 'Alice'."

"I really don't know yet what I'm going to do," Gillian said when asked whether she was going to choose between dancing and acting. "I will just have to wait and see what happens."

MRS. GRANDISON-CLARK, who is the girl's chaperon here, said that Gillian is somewhat advanced in her schooling and is now the equivalent of a high school junior.

Gillian is the only member of her family in show business. She has an older brother and two older sisters. Her father is an engineer for a hospital. She doesn't care for sports and finds her greatest pleasure in painting. As for "Alice in Wonderland":

"Mummy read it to me when I was quite young, but I didn't get too much out of it. After I got this part, I sat down and read it myself. It is quite a role, isn't it, and I'm so lucky to have been chosen."

As Crosby Sees It

Exploiting New Movies On TV Tricky Business

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.

THIS business of exploiting movies on television is a tricky business and heaven knows where it will all end. In the beginning, you recall, movie producers hardly dared mention TV above a whisper. No movie stars were permitted within miles of a TV camera. And not a scrap of important film was ever allowed on the air.

All that's been changed. Probably the biggest single event in this line was when Walt Disney actually showed the home folks on TV more of "Davy Crockett" than they could see in a theater when the film was released. Last time Disney was in town I asked him what effect he thought this had on the box office.

"It's hard to say," he said. "Normally a picture like that with a couple of comparative unknowns like Fess Parker and Buddy Ebsen couldn't expect to gross more than $700,000 or $800,000 in this country. However, Crockett grossed $2,000,000 which is a very good domestic gross. Television has got to be credited with much of that."

That opened the floodgates and now Twentieth Century-Fox, M.G.M. and Warner Brothers are all showing bits of their old pictures in the hope of attracting some cash at the box office for their new ones. The question arises: how much is enough to whet your interest without slaking it?

IT'S A TOUGH ONE. A short while ago, Ed Sullivan showed roughly a half hour of the film from and about "Guys and Dolls." There were scenes of Frank Sinatra singing "Ever Lovin' Adelaide," a love scene between Jean Simmons and Marlon Brando, Miss Simmons socking a Cuban cutie, and the Goldwyn Girls doing a number. There were also glimpses of Goldwyn, the producer; Joe Mankiewicz, the director; Michael Kidd, the choreographer, and Frank Loesser, the composer. Also Sullivan interviewed Brando and Miss Simmons (though not Sinatra who in a dispute over this show accused Sullivan in a paid ad in "Variety" of being "sick, sick, sick.")

Well, it was interesting enough but several people in my living room announced that, where they had once planned to see the picture, they now didn't want to. It isn't that they had seen too much; it's simply that what they did see disappointed them. Right there is the danger. Television is a marvelous medium of exploitation. But what you show had better be good or you'll drive people away rather than lure them in. For example, I was lured to see a disappointing picture, "Daddy Long Legs" by a scrap of it I had seen on television. It just so happened they tossed us the best song and dance number in the whole picture. I went to it expecting all of it to be that good. It wasn't.

NOW SOME TIME ago, "Mr. Roberts" was shown on the Sullivan show, a whole hour of it. It hasn't seemed to have hurt business, but if I were a movie producer, I would never allow that much of a picture to the home folks for free. Not if I planned to sell tickets to it.

Then there's the other side of the coin—not showing enough of the picture. Recently, Twentieth Century-Fox kicked off its series of TV remakes of old films (along with plugs for new ones) with "Cavalcade," the Noel Coward play that made a truly great picture. Naturally the story had to be skeletonized for TV and those of us who remember the original with fondness were slightly horrified at the vast gashes that had been cut out of it.

A good many pictures could be cut from two hours to 50 minutes and be improved by the cuts. Not "Cavalcade," though. The Twentieth Century-Fox program has remakes of some good movies in store for us, including "The Oxbow Incident," "The Late George Apley," "Junior Miss" and "Miracle on Thirty-fourth Street." It will be interesting to see how they fare on television.

New Arthur Miller Drama Tense, Vivid

By Walter F. Kerr

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.

AT the beginning of the second — and longer — of the two new Arthur Miller plays that compose "A View From the Bridge" at the Coronet, a dapper but worried little Italian lawyer named Alfieri turns up in a spotlight. Mr. Alfieri is there to set the scene for a savage domestic development along the Brooklyn waterfront, and to throw in a choral word or two as the curious tensions mount. One of the things his straightforward mouthpiece has to say is that he is terribly interested in getting at the facts.

"In facts," he muses, "I find the poetry, the wonder, and the amazement of spring."

The facts of the play are terrifying. A run-of-the-mill longshoreman, a fellow who loves his wife and is kind to kids and especially kind to an orphan girl he has reared, is faced with the problem of finding shelter for a couple of his wife's relatives who have entered the country illegally.

One of the refugees is a handsome blonde youngster who falls in love, almost at once, with the pretty orphan kind-hearted Eddie has watched over so carefully. And out of the innocent and unsuspecting affection between two likable children there rises hell's own brew to envelop Eddie. Eddie does not understand what is happening to him, but he cannot bear to have the girl touched. He is ready to do anything—spread the word that the boy is homesexual, tip off the immigration authorities to a crime he has himself created, take a switch blade knife to the whole neighborhood — before he can surrender a child he has only been gentle with.

VAN HEFLIN PLAYS the generous man who is torn on the rack of his own unrecognized passion, and he has worked out a series of tense and affecting mannerisms to help him build to an anguished crescendo. With a restless cracking of his knuckles, a breathless stammer, and an evasive irritation that drives him away from other people's faces even when he is trying to command them, the actor betrays the secret sense of shame that drives unlucky Eddie to his final violence.

Around him, Eileen Heckart, as an alarmed but loving wife, Jack Warden as a refugee with a strong arm and a stronger sense of honor, Antony Vorno as the "paper doll" lad who is determined to have a bride and Gloria Marlowe as the frantic cause of the uncontrollable tangle, supply crackling performances as further fuel for a dramatic bonfire.

The lines of the play are taut, the dialogue speaks its mind directly, the theatrical images that spread open to give vividness and color to every crisis are shrewdly conceived. Above it all looms a Boris Aronson waterfront that has in it, almost magically, echoes of Italy and Rome and even the Greece that gave us tragedy.

If I have a reservation about "A View From the Bridge," it is that that overwhelming human majesty, that echo of warmth and pity, suggested in the setting is not entirely present play. We watch with fascination; but we do not honestly like Eddie as much as we ought to.

IT MAY BE THAT Mr. Miller has clung too fiercely to the facts. His picture of life may need some of that poetry that the remote classical parallels hint at, some of that very poetry that Miller is always honestly reaching for and in this play barely missing. I suspect, too, that it might have helped to elaborate this almost-full-length play into its full dimensions—we need to know and feel for the original Eddie before we can descend with him, in full sympathy, into his inferno.

The little play that takes up the earlier part of the evening, "A Memory of Two Mondays," is an interesting and sometimes affecting mood piece in its own right, though it might easily have been sacrificed in the interests of the larger work.

That lost note of exultation that might have made "A View From the Bridge" a major work from a major playwright is missing—and missing in a context that begs for it.

But the evening remains a must for anyone who is at all interested in what the contemporary American theater is thinking about.

'Cinderella' Number on Ice to Cost $75,000

One number alone in the Hollywood Ice Revue that will open a 10-performance engagement at the Arena Nov. 4 cost $75,000, Producer Arthur M. Wirtz announced. It is the "Cinderella" extravaganza. The ball gown for Gundi Busch, the German-born 1954 world's champion figure skater who plays Cinderella, cost $4000, for instance. The costume of each of the four mice cost $900. Wirtz claimed the entire cost of the show will be $1,000,000. He did not break that figure down. The revue, the twenty-first edition of the show, is rehearsing here, preparing to start its tour.

Webster Tryouts

Tryouts for George Kelly's comedy, "The Torchbearers," will be held by the Experimental workshop of the Webster Groves Theater Guild at 8 o'clock tonight at the guild Playhouse, 517 Theater Lane. William Van Cleave is directing.

'Pajama Game' Opens At American Tuesday

LARRY DOUGLAS AND FRAN WARREN IN "THE PAJAMA GAME," HIT MUSICAL COMEDY WHICH OPENS A THREE-WEEK RUN TUESDAY AT THE AMERICAN.

"THE PAJAMA GAME," the outstanding Broadway musical comedy hit, will come to the American Theater Tuesday night for a three weeks run, with Fran Warren, popular recording singer, Larry Douglas and Buster West starred in the national company.

The Broadway company is still going strong after nearly a year and a half and 606 performances—it opened May 13, 1954—and the national company has been in business since last January 29.

Performances will be given at 8:30 o'clock nightly, except Fridays and Saturdays, when two shows will be given, at 6 and 9:20 p.m. There will be a special performance at 7 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 6, for the benefit of the Actors' Fund of America. It will be the only Sunday performance. The show will close its run Saturday, Nov. 12.

The score by Richard Adler and Jerry Ross (who also did the latest Broadway hit "Dawn Yankees") contains the hit parade songs, "Hey There" and "Hernando's Hideaway," and also, "Steam Heat," "I'm Not at All in Love," "Small Talk," and "Once There Was a Man."

George Abbott, famous director of farces and musicals, is co-author of the book with Richard Bissell, from whose Book-of-the-Month Club novel, "7½ Cents," the show was adapted. It concerns a Midwestern pajama factory during a strike, Hernando's Hideaway, a night spot, and the romance of a factory superintendent and a girl union leader.

Abbott and Jerome Robbins directed the production. Lemuel Ayers designed the scenery and costumes, and Bob Fosse did the choreography. Also featured will be Pat Stanley, Fred Irving Lewis, Marguerite Shaw, Jack Straw, Owen Martin and Mary Stanton.

The theater has booked Magda Gabor in a play, "This Thing Called Love" for the week of Nov. 14.

Another Broadway musical comedy hit, "Can Can," with songs by Cole Porter and book by Abe Burrows, has been booked for the American for two weeks beginning Monday, Nov. 21.

'World of Sholom Aleichem' to Be at Empress Nov. 23

"The World of Sholom Aleichem," will be presented at the Empress Theater the evening of Wednesday, Nov. 23, by a road company of the original New York production now on a tour of 43 cities.

The production, under the auspices of the Y.M.H.A.-Y.W.H.A. Jewish Cultural Committee, will be in English. Including two of Sholom Aleichem's one-act dramas, plus a third Jewish folk tale by I. L. Peretz, the production has been dramatized by Arnold Perl, directed by Howard Da Silva, and has music by Serge Hovey and Robert DeCormier. The cast includes Herschel Bernardi, Gilbert Green, Jack Banning, George Tyne, Marie Andrews and Fritzi Burr.

JOHN WAYNE AND LAUREN BACALL ARE STARRED IN "BLOOD ALLEY," DRAMA ABOUT THE FLIGHT OF AN ENTIRE VILLAGE FROM RED CHINA. IT WILL BE NEXT AT THE FOX.

At the Movies

By Myles Standish

TO CATCH A THIEF—Director Alfred Hitchcock's slick, clever romantic crime-comedy. Cary Grant as an ex-jewel thief proving his innocence of a new wave of thefts, and Grace Kelly, lovely as a rich American girl, handle some amusing dialogue in sophisticated style. Some ravishingly beautiful shots in VistaVision of the French Riviera. FOX.

I AM A CAMERA—Julie Harris as a well-bred English trollop in Bohemian Berlin in 1930, lights the screen with her incandescence. John van Druten's comedy, a graceful, humorous slice of life, comes off well, although it seems more objective on the screen in analyzing the gay, vital moral gadfly. Laurence Harvey is Isherwood. PAGEANT and RICHMOND.

WILL ANY GENTLEMAN . . . ?—An English comedy starts off well by having a timid bank clerk hypnotized into being a perfect devil, especially with the ladies, but the device stretches thin and it degenerates into all the hackneyed fast farce tricks. With George Cole, Veronica Hurst. SHADY OAK.

SIMBA—Better understanding between black tribesmen and British settlers comes out after a lot of slaughter by the Mau Mau terrorists in Kenya, Africa. Intelligently done, but unfortunately the color photography is wretched. With Dirk Bogarde, Virginia McKenna, Donald Sinden. ORPHEUM.

FEMALE ON THE BEACH—Joan Crawford as a wealthy widow with a swank beach house who marries Jeff Chandler, a fresh gigolo from next door, then is afraid he is going to murder her. This runs the gamut from the trashy to the ridiculous, and you'll probably laugh rather than shiver as you're supposed to. ST. LOUIS.

TRIAL—The Commies muscle into the defense of a Mexican-American boy being tried for murder in a town which hates Mexicans. Don Mankiewicz's adaptation of his prize novel is absorbing and well-acted, especially by Glenn Ford as an idealistic young attorney who turns out to be a patsy for the Reds. Also TIGHT SPOT, lively and amusing comedy-melodrama, with Ginger Rogers. LOEW'S STATE.

CINERAMA HOLIDAY—The spectacular depth process explores Paris, Switzerland, and some American points. AMBASSADOR.

Art and Artists

Perspective on Italian Show

By H. S. Derrickson

A NEW City Art Museum exhibition of 82 prints by 37 contemporary Italian artists provides valuable perspective on the museum's current major show of 178 modern Italian paintings, sculptures and drawings.

The displays overlap in several ways. Thirteen of the 34 artists with work in the major-medium collection are also represented in the print show. Having opened later than the big exhibition, the graphics show will run 16 days longer, ending Nov. 30.

Examples of the monotype, a hard-to-classify form in which single transfer is made of a composition painted on glass, are included in both shows. Both will go from here to Minneapolis.

Miss Mary Powell, supervisor of education at the museum, who booked the print collection as a loan from the Binet Gallery, Brimfield, Mass., pointed out the graphics display ranges back 45 years.

In contrast, only the last 10 years are stressed in the bigger show. This occupies five main-floor galleries, compared with three lower-floor rooms devoted to the prints. Despite and because of these differences, the two collections admirably supplement one another.

MUCH THE MORE puzzling and controversial of the two is the upstairs show. Some understanding of both can be gleaned from books, notably "Twentieth Century Italian Art," by James Thrall Soby and Alfred H. Barr Jr.; "Sculpture of the Twentieth Century," by Andrew Carnduff Ritchie, and "The New Decade: 22 European Painters and Sculptors," all published by the Museum of Modern Art.

Because the print exhibit makes a solid link with the art of the past, it may be more comprehensible to the average museum visitor than is the more concentrated showing of ultra moderns upstairs. The lower-floor display has advantages over books, too, in that its insights are immediate and expressed in visual rather than verbal terms.

Upstairs, Giorgio Morandi's 11 still life paintings and drawings of bottles are rewarding to students of plastic painting. The same dedicated artist's single impressionistic landscape downstairs provides general gallery-goers with an inkling of how his involvement in purely spatial problems came about.

WITHIN THE SURREALIST tradition, the print show supplies an interesting intermediate step in work by Pierluigi Arri. Here the palm for inclusion of the more original pictures must go to the major-medium exhibition.

Aldo Pagliacci's paintings of burning cathedrals, of which an outstanding example is on hand, are so striking that they have become almost his trademark. Arri, on the other hand, seems to see with the eyes of Hieronymus Bosch.

Arri's "Hercules and the Amazons" and "La Reve" resort to Boschian monsters and Boschian scatalogical subject matter but make effective use of the familiar perspective of dreams, in which imagery may become fantastically huge and then abruptly dwindle in scale.

Some corroboration of the persistence of futurism, despite its unfortunate and extraneous association with fascism, comes from Armando Pizzinato's continuing study of suggested motion in three oils and three drawings. To these the print show adds "The Embrace" and "The Sailor," both abstract color lithographs.

The abstractionists themselves are out in force in both exhibits. In a fine, bold, blocky print, Afro emerges in a mood different from that of his paintings, with their weaving linear contours, evocative of ideas of the beholder himself because the lines always appear to be about to define a form but never quite do so.

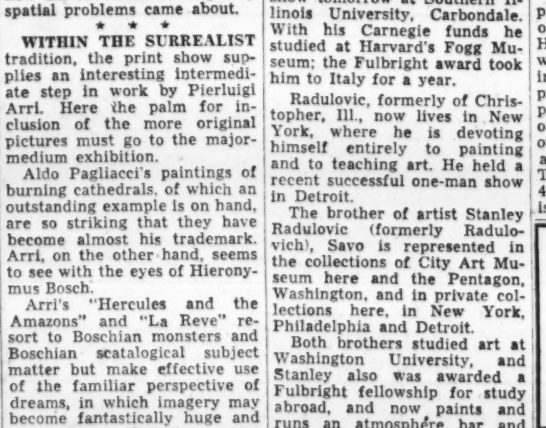
AFRO'S BROTHER, the sculptor Mirko, contributes a cubist abstract color lithograph, "Clangor," in which insistent, reverberating sound seems to assault the ear in waves.

Of some interest is the graphics collection's minor enlargement of St. Louisans' notions of Renato Birolli, winner of the $800 third prize in the new Carnegie International. A better idea of his art, not unlike that of the Carnegie juror Afro himself, is given by six drawings and oils upstairs, such as "Song to a Happy Land" and "Adriatic Spaces."

The print show has values all its own. Mina Maccari's satirical "Capriccio Tedesco," depicting spike-helmeted Nazis in a ludicrous game of leapfrog, strikes a note at variance with the major show, with its careful avoidance of political themes.

Interesting, too, are the smaller display's dynamic compositions of human forms and horses, which have curious echoes of classicism. These are by Georgio de Chirio, once a leader of the metaphysical school, now a conservative painter and polemicsist with contemporary trends as his target.

It gives an oddly faithful picture of the art world's immemorial state of affairs to find him skulking here in the basement while what he would regard as rampant modernism so gaily disports itself upstairs.



JULIE HARRIS AND ANTON DIFFRING IN "I AM A CAMERA," MOTION PICTURE VERSION OF JOHN VAN DRUTEN'S STAGE PLAY, WHICH IS AT THE PAGEANT AND RICHMOND.

FARLEY GRANGER AND JOAN COLLINS IN "THE GIRL IN THE RED VELVET SWING," THE STORY OF THE SENSATIONAL HARRY THAW CASE, WHICH IS BOOKED NEXT AT THE ST. LOUIS.

Gallery Notes

SAVO RADULOVIC, former St. Louis artist who has won Carnegie and Fulbright grants, will open a one-man show tomorrow at Southern Illinois University, Carbondale. With his Carnegie funds he studied at Harvard's Fogg Museum; the Fulbright award took him to Italy for a year.

Radulovic, formerly of Christopher, Ill., now lives in New York, where he is devoting himself entirely to painting and to teaching art. He held a recent successful one-man show in Detroit.

The brother of artist Stanley Radulovic (formerly Radulovich), Savo is represented in the collections of City Art Museum here and the Pentagon, Washington, and in private collections here, in New York, Philadelphia and Detroit.

Both brothers studied art at Washington University, and Stanley also was awarded a Fulbright fellowship for study abroad, and now paints and runs an atmosphere bar and restaurant in New York. Savo's Carbondale show will include new cubist oils, with light, bright palettes, done on gesso panels as well as on canvas—pictures this reporter studied last May in New York. The Carbondale display will end Nov. 24. —H.D.

Mike Todd Admits 'Oklahoma!' Film Premiere a Flop

By Aline Mosby

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 22 (UP).

"OKLAHOMA!" on the new Todd A-O wide-screen was billed as the biggest movie event since sound, but it stumbled to a bad start in New York and "I'm not happy," showman Mike Todd admits.

Since the top musical of all time was transferred to a gigantic screen the size of a barn wall, reams of publicity, including Todd's, have praised the production. But the premiere in New York last week turned out less than colossal.

Most New York critics praised the picture but tabbed the Todd A-O process disappointing.

Todd himself admitted in an interview today that to say the premiere was a flop is "an understatement." But he insisted "the process is great—it was a bad print and bad showmanship."

"If they had called in experts to louse up the premiere they couldn't have done better," he moaned as he paced around his office at RKO.

By "they" he meant Magna Theaters, distributors of the movie.

"The print was scratchy and covered with snow," he continued. "It destroyed the illusion of depth. And the sound was muffled. They kept the curtain closed at the opening. They wanted to show off that curtain, I guess.

"They kept telling me, it will be all right next week. It doesn't matter next week! It's the opening night that counts. Showmanship!" he cried.

TODD RUSHED to the rescue by sending the theater raw film so a new print could be made. Only one print had been made of "Oklahoma!" because "as of last Friday they were still fiddling around with the title opening on the master print. They should have postponed the premiere."

"They didn't like the shots of Oklahoma, afraid the process might be shown off better," he said with sarcasm. "They'd taken out the two best scenes—of the corn and the chase—and finally put them back in."

"'Oklahoma!' will make more money than anything in the history of show business, but a man cannot live by bread alone," he said.

Giraudoux Comedy

'Tiger at the Gates' Slyly Gibes at War

By Walter F. Kerr

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.

IN "TIGER AT THE GATES," the anti-war play that has come to us from France by way of England, playwright Jean Giraudoux wins his argument by being willing to lose it gracefully.

It is perfectly clear, to begin with, that M. Giraudoux thinks warfare a trumped-up excuse for indulging a dozen silly vices: the love of display, of noble posture, of good rousing music, of 10-cent-store romance. Wars aren't fought because anybody is really mad at anybody else, but because a robust and giddy urge to self-destruction rises regularly in the human breast.

It seems probable, from the exuberant "Amen" that Christopher Fry has scrawled all over the play in translating it from the French, that poet Fry agrees with philosopher Giraudoux. And between them they have set up, on a handy classic soapbox, the perfect fellow to speak their several pieces; he is Hector of Troy, experienced in battle, sick to death of battle, and the one man in the ancient world who might have talked his fellow fools out of further battle.

In short, the ingredients for a thumping tirade are ominously present. Authors and hero are poised on the edge of an old theatrical trap: they are in imminent danger of venting their wrath not so much upon the thing they hate as upon the audience that has come to hate it with them. Class is assembled for a severe lecture, and maybe a sharp rap on the knuckles. Good haters often do have the bad habit of doing more damage to their listeners' ears than to the subject marked for slaughter.

NOT SO with Giraudoux, Fry, and the character created to deliver their melancholy message. No one at the Plymouth is hellbent on converting us, or saving us, or trouncing us for our perennial imbecilities. One and all are eager to remind us that war is absurd, all right; but they mean to do it with a dig in the ribs, a sly and rueful look into a mirror, and a candid confession that yesterday's nonsense will be just as nonsensical—and just as much with us—tomorrow.

"Tiger at the Gates" becomes a delicious comedy about absolute disaster. To give the paradox a possible frame, Giraudoux has located the action in a lightly fantastic Troy—a Troy in which Priam is old enough to dote upon young blondes and in which Paris is jaded enough to covet a woman precisely because she eludes him.

The characters keep a cool, comic distance from the bonfire they are lighting, displaying the best of manners as they stubbornly and elegantly inch toward murder. Helen, for instance, is no one you can despise, or even blame; though she is directly responsible for the whole shebang, you'd still be happier with her on your knee than over it. She is, as she is perfectly willing to tell you in swift and liquid syllables, only doing what the public demands of her: people must have an image of glamour or they simply cannot exist. The poet who drums up the nation's marching songs is equally civic-minded: he is a dolt, but he is honestly willing to give any number of lives for his country. The population of Troy is examined tartly, smartly, and with a knife that cuts deep; but every last man is given a chance to express his bumble-headed convictions. In the end we are faced, not with a club, but, with a scalpel, not with bombast, but with irony.

IT IS ONLY FAIR to tell you that the technique—with all its tongue-in-cheek restraint and its airy reliance on words—does become tenuous from time to time. There is quite a lag in the middle of the second act while the principals are catching their breaths and the small-fry are filling in with vaudeville. The single, astringent emotional tone—relieved by only one or two outbursts of heartfelt passion—has you attending the lines with almost feverish concentration but without that relaxed response that a more generous balance of wit and warmth might have generated. And, to complete this list of minor reservations, some of the supporting players who have been recruited locally—the production was originally mounted in London—are inclined to shout what they cannot otherwise sell.

Cotton Popular

Cotton continues its popularity for suits and dresses. Some of the winter coats have a nubby surface and give the appearance of wool tweed. One suit made of this nubby cotton is in shades of blue and purple. Another suit is made of a brown and white cotton tweed. Dresses with matching jackets also are noteworthy in the fashions for cold weather.

Leopard Fur Bag

The bag made of leopard fur is a versatile type to carry with a variety of costumes. One version is edged with charcoal gray flannel. Another has dark brown calf as a trimming. An Ascot scarf or a belt may be obtained to match the bag.

Girl Jealous, Knows It, and Wants Help

By Martha Carr

Dear Martha:

IS there any way a girl can get over being jealous? I love a boy very much, but still I am jealous. He is in the service right now, and will be discharged in a year, and I would like to get some help before his discharge. We are planning to be married sometime after his discharge, and I don't want to be one of those jealous wives. Something happened about two years ago that made me mistrust him, but since that one incident he has tried constantly to show me how much he loves me. I suppose nothing can be done about my problem until his discharge, but I wanted to write to you to see if you can throw any light on the subect. I don't want to be as jealous as I am now when I walk down the aisle, and I want very much to become his wife. Can you help me?

WORRIED.

Jealousy is one of the hardest faults to overcome—but that, coupled with possessiveness—has caused more heartbreak in this world than you can imagine. It seems to me that you have taken a major step in overcoming this feeling by recognizing it and determining to conquer it. If you don't, you know as well as I do that your marriage will be miserable. But why should you be jealous? He chose you, didn't he? Of the many girls he could have married, he turned from all the others in favor of you. Even if he made a mistake two years ago, why punish him forever by constantly clouding your love for him with fear and suspicion? You'll find some good books in the Public Library on the subject. For the sake of your future happiness, try to rid your mind of this poison before he comes home.

Dear Martha:

● I AM WRITING in hope you can help me. A girl friend of mine has started going with a married man. He gave her his telephone number and has her call him at home. That is why I believed him when he said his wife didn't care about him and ran around with other men. He asked my friend to marry him and asked his wife for a divorce, but she refused. I decided to try to find out what kind of person she was. She is treated like a dog. The things he said about her were lies. She is a good person and the reason he had my friend call him at home was that she was working. I am ashamed of my part in all the trouble. I no longer want to be friends with him and this girl. When I believed him, I felt sorry for him but now that I have found he is lying I want no part of it.

FRIEND.

It's too bad that you didn't refuse from the start to have any part in this affair. But at least you have seen your mistake and that is far more than your friend has done. What you can do to make up for that mistake, I don't know. I have an idea that the less you have to do with any of those involved, the better. And you can at least resolve never to let yourself be fooled like this again. Even if the stories about his wife were true—and remember, they so seldom are in a case like this!—you had no right to encourage your friend. If she wants to hurt someone, that must be her decision to make. Don't let her drag you down with her.

Dear Martha:

● MY HUSBAND has a small office, employing just one woman as his secretary-bookkeeper. She is married and I am quite sure has no interest in my husband. He certainly doesn't act as though he cares for her although he does like her naturally and appreciates her efficient way of running the office. Sometimes he has taken her to lunch but he has always told me about it and I have never thought anything about it. But apparently others do. Two or three of my friends have started making remarks about seeing them together. My husband tells me not to listen to gossip. Please help me.

TROUBLED.

Your husband has the right idea; don't listen. What if he does take her to lunch? He has never tried to hide the fact from you, has he? I don't say that a woman should close to her eyes to any symptoms of trouble with her marriage, but you're asking for misery if you let yourself listen to women who have nothing better to do than to report where and with whom your husband lunches. Take them off guard the next time by telling that that of course you know about their lunching together and treat it as unimportant. They'll soon stop talking if they can't get a rise out of you.

Dear Martha:

● I AM 29 and engaged to a very fine man of 28. I am very much in love with him and plan to be married shortly. However, I find myself uneasy about marriage because I have found he was formerly in a mental hospital. I honestly thought I knew enough about him and his background when I became engaged. He seems to be well as far as I can see and is one of the nicest men I've ever known. Is there something wrong with me because I feel this way? We seem so right for each other. Where could I go for help and courage?

DAILY READER.

I cannot, of course, discuss this medical problem, but it is quite understandable that you would want counseling, especially if your fiance has not been frank and candid with you. I believe both of you should seek advice, although you may want to go alone at first rather than broach the subject to him. Let me suggest that you ask for an appointment with the pastoral counseling service of the Metropolitan Church Federation, CEntral 1-3770. Through that service you can talk with psychiatrists who can guide you in making the right decision.

Dear Martha:

● I AM 16 YEARS OLD, and have been going steady for about three months. My boy friend says that another boy likes me, and whenever a group of kids go out together and he can't go, he always tells me to invite this other boy to go with me. I never did, but the other night a bunch of kids went to the V.P. parade, and he couldn't go, so he told me to invite this other boy. I was getting tried of having him tell me that, so I did (I only like this other boy as a friend). I didn't have any fun, but now my boy friend won't talk to me. My girl friends told me he is really mad about it. What can I do about it?

TEEN-AGER.

Looks as though he asked for it. He certainly has no right to be angry as long as he insisted that you date the other boy. I won't tell you to forget him, but I will say that you're in for some unhappy days if you let him treat you like this without even so much as a mild protest over his inconsistent behavior.

Martha Carr is glad to answer your problems. If you wish a personal reply, please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. She cannot answer questions of a medical or legal nature.

By Sylvia Stiles

THE glint of gold and the sparkle of jewel tones enhance the season's fashions. Although the black ensemble and the "little black dress" continue as indispensables in a woman's wardrobe, the colorful themes are more characteristic of the late 1955 modes, and illustrative of the general festivity that surrounds the latest designs.

A "Midas touch" has created an aura for fall and winter. This is seen not only in the gold emphasis that is given to jewelry and accessories but also to the fabrics, of which many of the late-day and evening clothes are made. There's a siren-like accent when gold provides the glitter, so many of the most impressive fashions have sheath-like silhouettes or a figure-moulding line with sudden flare at the hemline.

Noteworthy among the golden fashions on display in the stores are those made of gold lame. There are other interesting fabrics, too, such as the mixtures of acetate and Acrilan with Lurex threads. Lurex contributes the gold which has a non-tarnishable feature that gives the material greater service than was obtained in former eras of the gilded look. Both American and European designers are using the metallic fabrics extensively. Of interest, too, are the brocades that are especially striking in alliances of gold and white. For a gold accent rather than the more formal treatment in a dress design, there are chiffon weight tweeds embroidered with dots of Lurex. Not only dresses but many coats are being made of this new material.

In the vogue of jewel tones to create the effect of splendor, ruby red stands out above all others. Red is exceedingly popular now for both daytime and evening, and every woman will want one red dress in her wardrobe. There is the afternoon sheath of silk taffeta textured with an interesting herringbone weave. Also noteworthy is the silk faille coat dress while the vogue of red with blue and purple undertones is seen in beautiful satins for late day wear. Garnet satin is an elegant choice for a full-skirted cocktail dress. Ruby velvet is a flattering choice for a dinner and theater suit.

The woman who likes green and finds it especially becoming has an opportunity this season to choose an entire daytime costume or one festive dress in a variety of green tones among which emerald is the most fashionable. Emerald brocade, for example, is the choice of one designer for a slim, square-necked dress which has a fanfare of pleats at the back of the skirt. From France comes an Oriental-inspired brocade dress of green and gold threads accenting Empire lines. Green crepe appears in a shirtwaist dress to wear casually for daytime. For more sophistication there is a long-bodiced cocktail dress of the crepe that has a pleated skirt.

Sapphire leads the list of blue tones that are proving that blue is as appropriate for winter as it is for spring. One attractive dress with its own jacket is made of peau de soie and beaded in iridescent coloring. The electric blue tones will look bright and cheerful on a drab winter day. Wool costume suits as well as silk ones are arriving in the stores for holiday festivities. Among the light brown and beige tones topaz is getting unusual attention. It is featured most extensively in satin although the brocades and the soft-finished woolens such as duvetyn and jersey.

The Renaissance trend in costume jewelry coordinates with the vogue of gold and gem tones in ready-to-wear. Gold and imitation pearls, gold and rhinestone, pseudo emerald, sapphire and ruby are endorsed by the jewelers for clothes to be worn for dress-up occasions. Jeweled embers, textured pseudo-golden twigs tippee in rhinestones and made more interesting with multicolor cabochons of ruby, sapphire and emerald colored stones illustrate the perference. The popularity of gold is seen, too, in several collections. Trifari emphasizes the "golden look" with textured golden acorns, loops, and tone-on-tone effects used for necklaces with matching earrings and bracelets. Brown and beige are combined with gold in some striking ensembles.

"Gold" slippers or leather ones that have the heels tipped with gold colored metal, draped turbans made of gold cloth or of jeweled-toned velvet, overblouses of glittering fabrics, and many other costume accoutrements indicate that winter fashions are far from somber.

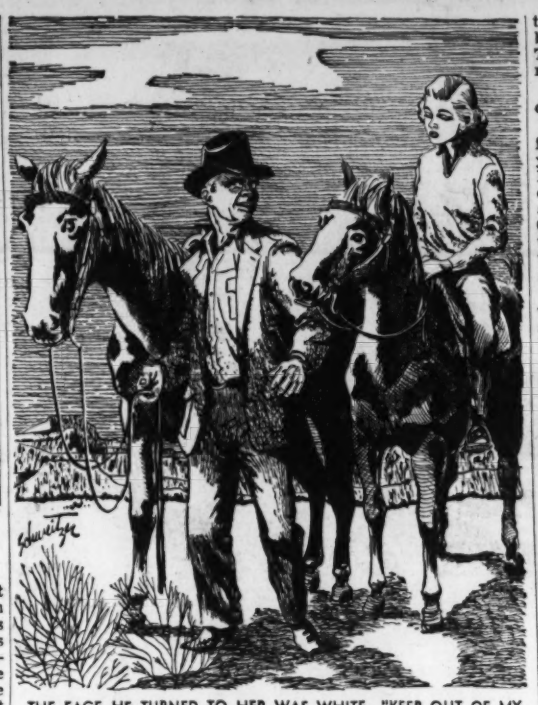
THE REDHEAD FROM TEXAS

Molly's Father Still Aloof and She Decides to Go to New York

Synopsis

MOLLY BRADEN, daughter of a wealthy Texas rancher, H. J. BRADEN, has become engaged to WALTER SYMINGTON, who has managed well the money his father left him. He has, however, a sister, DEBRA, who has wasted all her inheritance. When Molly returns to Texas she is met by MATHEW BRADY, who tells her he is the new manager of the ranch. Her father is away but she learns he is angry with her for becoming engaged to Walter. Next day, before her father returns, Walter calls from the airport, announcing he and Debra are there. She goes for them. When she returns her father is home. He greets the guests coldly and, after they retire, tells Molly she must not marry Walter—that he will disinherit her if she does. Next day, after having had word with Mol:y's father, Debra leaves by plane. A week later, with H. J. still discourteous to him, Walter decides to leave. He tells Molly if she still loves him after a month, she is to follow him to New York. Molly later learns that H. J. apparently is having some kind of trouble which he has not confided to her. She learns to respect Matt and tells him she has discovered three $25,000 entries in H. J.'s check stubs within a month. They trail him when he goes to Dallas and discover he mails a large envelope at the registry window of the post office.



THE FACE HE TURNED TO HER WAS WHITE. "KEEP OUT OF MY AFFAIRS, AND MY CHECKBOOK, MOLLY. I'M WARNING YOU."

By Anne Allison

CHAPTER EIGHT

MOLLY BRADEN and Matt returned to El Rancho in time for dinner. H. J. was there, too, having arrived in his private plane before them. Tension was high at the table which Wong had laid on the terrace. In the flickering light of the candles there was doubt, anxiety and fear.

"How was your trip to Dallas?" Matt asked pointedly.

H. J.'s hand trembled as he poured himself another glass of wine. "All right." His voice was abrupt. "Why shouldn't it be?"

"I'd have been glad to go along," Matt reminded him. "It might be a help for me to fly the plane for you. You seem tired."

"I'm not tired," H. J. snapped. "And when I want your help I'll let you know. Just because you're manager here doesn't give you the right to interfere in my personal affairs."

His worry was revealed by his unreasonable attitude better than any confession but Matt glanced at him sympathetically. "I'm sorry H. J. You know I'd do anything. . . ."

"Please let us help, darling," Molly cried impulsively.

Her father threw down his napkin and rose unsteadily. "What's the matter with you two? What in blazes are you carrying on about?"

* * *

THEY dared not incur his wrath further by telling him they had followed him to Dallas, and that they had seen him mail the envelope they believed to contain blackmail money. Helplessly they watched him stomp off the terrace and a few minutes later they heard the hoofbeats from the stable as he rode his favorite horse, heading into the moonlit night.

"I'm going to follow him," Molly exclaimed.

Matt's hand was on her arm. "Don't," he advised. "There are times when a man wants to be alone. Whatever your father's problem is, he wants to wrestle with it by himself."

But with the quick anger which belonged to the Bradens, Molly flung herself away. "H. J. has always shared his troubles with me. There's no reason he shouldn't now."

"Except that he doesn't want to."

"It's none of your business," Molly called over her shoulder. She was already on her way to saddle Thundercloud.

Wong materialized at Matt's side. "Too bad," he murmured. "He not in mood for arguments."

Matt nodded moodily as he sat down and resumed his meal. A clash between the high spirited father and daughter was inevitable but it was none of his business, as Molly had so neatly pointed out.

He attempted to eat but his appetite was gone. When he heard Thundercloud galloping out to the range he went to the edge of the terrace to watch. Molly's red hair was flying behind her as she rode with the easy grace of a fine horsewoman. Mathew Brady sighed as he lit a cigarette. He would wait until she returned.

Molly found H.J. in their favorite spot where the great flat lands of El Rancho could be viewed without interruption. Here in the pale moonlight with the dusty scent of the night so poignant, the two horses stood silently side by side as the man and the girl stared out at the land they loved so well.

"Since I was a little girl we've come here," Molly said quietly. "It's always been a comfort to me—to look at the land. It's something you can't describe to outsiders. Something only we understand."

H.J. did not reply. It was as if he did not trust himself to speak. Finally he muttered, "Your mother and I used to come here, too, when I first brought her to the ranch. I loved her so, Molly. If you could only know how much."

"But I do know, darling," Molly cried. "You don't have to convince me. You've always been so loyal to both of us. That's why I want to help you now."

"I don't need any help," H.J. declared stubbornly.

"Yes, you do and you know it. We're all worried about you. Matt and I and Wong, too. I'm going to tell you something else. I found your checkbook and the stubs representing $75,000 worth of checks made out to cash, H.J. I think someone's trying to blackmail you. You've got to tell me."

The face he turned to her was white. "Keep out of my affairs, and my checkbook, Molly. I'm warning you."

Tears in her eyes, Molly persisted. "But I want to help. Why should you keep it from me? Why?"

"I have no intention of discussing my private affairs with my daughter," H.J. thundered.

"And that's final."

"That's final—and now get back to the house."

In all her life he had never spoken to her like this. Suddenly Molly knew what she was going to do. She would marry Walter Symington after all.

"All right," she said furiously. "If that's the way you feel about it. But I'm going to New York and get married and nothing you can say will stop me now."

She could not see the agony in his face as she and her horse wheeled about and headed back to the ranch. For a long time after she had gone he sat hunched in his saddle, a lonely figure staring with unseeing eyes at the empire which was his.

NOW that Molly Braden had made up her mind to marry Walter she was invincible. With the furious drive of H.J. himself she made her plans, yielding neither to the disapproving glances of Wong or the brutal frankness of Mathew Brady. Her father said nothing.

"You're crazy," Matt snorted, "to marry a man just because you want to spite H.J. You don't love Walter Symington and you know it. And don't tell me it's none of my business because it is."

Molly looked up from the telephone where she had just called Walter to tell him she would arrive Friday by plane.

"I'm sorry you don't approve, Matt," she said wearily. "I hoped that you and I were going to be friends but I see it's no use. You're just like H. J. Completely unreasonable."

"H.J. is in trouble," he reminded her, "and you're running out on him. If he's unreasonable it's because he's worried." He pulled her up into his arms. "Molly, Baby, don't do it . . ."

For a moment she thought he was going to kiss her, and although he did not, the sense of his nearness made her giddy.

"Please, Matt. Don't argue with me."

He released her. "Okay. No arguments as far as I'm concerned but what about H.J.?"

"He doesn't want my help," Molly stated flatly. "He told me to stay out of his affairs and that's just what I'm going to do."

Matt lit a cigarette. "All right. And then what?"

Molly picked up her pocketbook. "I'm taking the plane this morning to Dallas. I'm going to buy my wedding dress." She laughed a little wildly. "No father to give the bride away but every inch a bride."

There were tears in the blue eyes which she lifted to challenge his. "I'm hurt, Matt, terribly hurt."

He nodded understandingly. "Then don't do it, Molly. Don't have a lifetime of regrets."

She shook her head. "I can't go on at El Rancho any longer. H.J. has pushed me out of his life and I can't bear to live here as if we were strangers."

Wong padded in to watch her leave the house. "Terrible mistake," he predicted. "Symington no good for girl like Miss Molly." He glanced at the big man beside him. "She need man like you."

But if Mathew Brady heard him he did not reply.

THE department store where Molly Braden did her shopping was one of elegance, carrying luxury items from all over the world. Within its modern, carpeted, air-conditioned depths Molly was well known. Her favorite salesgirl in the dress department accompanied her to the bridal salon at Molly's request.

"How are you, Jean?" she asked affectionately, walking arm in arm with the young woman she had known since high school days.

Jean Martin's parents had died when she was still a sophomore but H. J. Braden, hearing of the orphan's plight, had paid all her expenses until she graduated and then obtained a job for her at the department store where she had worked ever since.

Each Christmas there was a generous check from the man, who, according to Jean had "the biggest heart in Texas." Needless to say, she was fanatically loyal to the Bradens.

In a corner of the bride's room Jean said, "I'm sorry not to be more excited about your wedding plans. Of course, I heard you were engaged to some man from the east." She glanced over her shoulder. "Something happened at the store several weeks ago. I think you should know about it, Molly, but I didn't want to call you at the ranch."

Molly's senses quickened. "Something about H.J.?"

"Yes. Strange that you should say that. Perhaps I'm talking out of turn."

They faced each other in the luxurious fitting room. "Tell me," Molly demanded. "It may be very important."

"A friend of mine works in the fur department," Jean began. "About three weeks ago a woman came in and bought a fur coat. Mink. The best."

"Well, go on," Molly said impatiently.

"She asked that the coat be charged to your father. The funny part of it was she wouldn't give her name."

"But surely the store wouldn't charge anything to H.J. under those circumstances."

Jean looked at her kindly. "That's the strange part of it. They did call your dad, Molly. And he said it was all right. As a matter of fact he's already paid the bill. I checked on it.

Molly's face was so white that Jean cried distressed, "I They did call your dad, Molly. I'm so sorry."

"Yes, you should. After all if H.J. wants to buy a mink coat for some woman, why shouldn't he?" She laughed to cover up her worry.

"Do you suppose your father's going to get married again?" Jean asked innocently.

Her words were a shock to H.J.'s daughter which set her pulses pounding. "No," she insisted. "I'm sure it's not that. Jean you must find out who that woman was. You must. Do you hear me?"

Questions of Social Usage
By Emily Post

"WHAT can be done if all one's friends like to play for stakes whenever they play a game of any kind? I don't play for money because I was brought up not to play games for money. It isn't a question of the sums of money involved, because they are slight and not beyond what I could easily afford. I would appreciate hearing from you on this matter."

This is solely a question of your own conscience! Feeling as you do, your friends will understand why you refuse to play (I take it for granted that they will not change their own custom for you alone)!

DEAR MRS. POST: I am planning to be married soon. Both my fiance and I are in the early 20s. We plan to have four bridesmaids and four ushers in the wedding party. My fiance has two uncles of whom he is very fond and he would like to ask them to be ushers. Both, however, are in their early 60s. All the other attendants are around our same age. I would like to know if it would be proper to have them as ushers, or might they look out of place. I would appreciate your advice on this matter.

Answer: No — uncles would seem a very strange choice unless they happen to be extraordinarily close to your own age.

DEAR MRS. POST: Will you please tell me the proper way to introduce a husband and wife who are both medical doctors? Also, what is the correct form of introduction when only the wife is a doctor?

Answer: (1) Dr. Jane and Dr. William Jones. (2) Dr. Jane and Mr. William Jones.

Co-ordinated Costumes

Costumes achieved by co-ordination of design are seen for all hours of the day. Dress and jacket combinations vary from a casual theme combining a fingertip length topcoat of black watch plaid chinchilla and navy wool jersey sheath dress to a beaded flannel and satin ensemble. Other costumes of special interest include three-piece ensembles, usually made with semi-fitted overblouses that hug the hipline, and are accompanied by wool cardigan coats.

Effective New Table Settings

By Dorothy Brainerd

AS the autumn party season gets into full swing smart hostesses are on the alert for effective new table settings, so we kept our eyes open for ideas we might pass along to you while attending a recent convention where superb foods, attractively served, were in the spotlight.

Most of the combinations below were taken from tables designed by Helen Chamberlin, leading table fashion authority. You will note that the majority of Mrs. Chamberlin's arrangements were built around pineapple yellow, a current fashion favorite. And a sunny, hospitable color it proved to be on tables formal and informal, blending beautifully with greens, purples and browns.

Because space does not permit full descriptions of these charming tables, we have jotted down random notes which may suggest ideas adaptable to your own table designs.

A MOST UNUSUAL and enchanting centerpiece which combined bird of paradise with fresh pineapples, grapes, and very tall slender yellow tapers.

A punch bowl in which floated a ring of ice, chipped out to hold a wreath of maraschino cherries, with a cartwheel slice of orange in the center.

A gay table in which a brass dish held an arrangement of purple grapes and yellow mums used with yellow tapers; leaf-patterned dinnerware; gold-toned flatware and wooden serving pieces.

A Hollowe'en table moderne, with yellow hand-woven place mats, black and charcoal dinnerware; an immense black ceramic cat leering from one corner of the table.

A handsome autumn table which combined a deep purple cloth with yellow napkins; black and yellow service dishes; a centerpiece of purple grapes, yellow mums and purple and yellow candles.

A pretty informal table with leaf-patterned dinnerware in autumn colors; yellow straw flowers pilling from a straw basket; hobnail glasses; napkins in wood tones, with green and rust fringe.

A wedding table (and why not for a Golden wedding, too?): yellow roses combined with lilies of the valley for the centerpiece; sterling in a damask rose pattern; a yellow cloth with a yellow nylon net skirt to which gold leaves had been appliqued; tall, slender golden tapers rising from a crystal bowl.

Christmas table: red cloth covered with red nylon net with appliqued Christmas trees cut from white felt; long white candles; a black wire basket overflowing with gay Christmas balls and surrounded by holly leaves.

Idea for a child's party: centerpiece of an artificial Christmas tree to which miniature all-day suckers and tiny gum drops had been affixed with large color-headed pins.

A truly elegant table in which bunches of white and pale green grapes were arranged in garlands at each of the four corners. The grapes were interspersed with full-blown pink roses; a pink damask cloth furnished the background. This arrangement had, in our opinion, two outstanding features. Esthetically, as guests passed around the table the fragrance of the roses was ever-present (to a much greater degree than had they been used in the center of the table). Practically, a few choice, expensive roses can be "stretched" by combining them with the grapes which, of course, appear in the family menu the day after the party.

SPEAKING of table appointments, it is interesting to watch the trend toward combining traditional with contemporary in all fields of homefurnishings. A new sterling silver pattern is a perfect example. The graceful, flowing lines are streamlined enough to please the most modern taste; but they are accented by a single, deep-carved flower which would make the pattern suitable for use with traditional china or crystal. The pieces are so designed that forks on the left curve toward the plate; knives and spoons on the right also curve inward, thus making a balanced setting (and guiding the inexperienced homemaker in the decision as to 'which pieces go on which side'.)

MRS. F. wants to know if it is possible to launder wool jersey blouses successfully.

It is difficult to give a blanket answer as to whether or not any garment will launder well, Mrs. F., as much depends upon the color, trimming, buttons, etc. However, I can report that I have laundered plain untrimmed jersey blouses satisfactorily many times by washing in mild rich suds and lukewarm water, rinsing well in water of the same temperature, laying flat on a Turkish towel to dry, then pressing on the wrong side with a steam iron.

Any homemaking problems bothering you? If so, write to Dorothy Brainerd in care of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

She will answer your questions or publish them and see if other readers have the answers for you.

Broadway Briefs

NEW YORK, Oct. 22—Judy Holliday, who shot to stardom on Broadway in "Born Yesterday," will return soon for a new Betty Comden-Adolph Green musical. The show's titled "The Bells Are Ringing" and is being produced by the Theater Guild. . . . Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" has been put to music and changed around a bit, ending up with the name "My Lady Liza" and starring Rex Harrison and Julie Andrews. It's due in March. . . . Broadway audiences are going to get another look at Tyrone Power's handsome profile. The Hollywood hero of many years standing set them back on their ears with his fine performance in "John Brown's Body" a few years ago, and last season won applause as the male lead of Christopher Fry's "The Dark Is Light Enough," which had Katharine Cornell dominating the stage. Power starts rehearsing his new play, "A Quiet Place," Monday; it's scheduled for a winter opening.

Four and a Half Minutes of TV

With one eye on the clock and the other on the monitors, Gunther called out the time and kept in touch with the various units. All had code names. The boat was "Mermaid," the jet planes were "Dropkick," the TV plane was "Beaver" and the ground station was "Groundhog."

At two o'clock Gunther called out: "Secure all units—Beaver, you're a little out of focus." The communications officer, Capt. John A. Boyle, was talking to the jets: "That was a beautiful shot on rehearsal, but you were five seconds early—," and various cryptic messages were criss-crossing: "This is Mermaid, we begin feeding audio after Beaver" and "Mermaid from Groundhog, there's an overload on video," and "three minutes to St. Louis," and "Dropkick, drag it a little if you can." All of which no doubt meant something to those receiving them.

Assistant Director Bell called out, "One minute to go" and you could cut the tension in the control truck with a knife. To the jets: "one—three-zero: over." Gunther: "Mermaid, hold your position."

I looked at a technician standing beside me, and he was looking up at the sky with his fingers tightly crossed. "Stand by," said Gunther, "we're on the air!"

The next four-and-a-half minutes was like an operating scene in "Medic." Directions were given in low sure tones, everyone did his job with quiet precision and suddenly Gunther said in a voice low but relieved, "That's it—we're off."

It was over and the "live output" monitor was showing scenes of a fishing fleet in Gloucester, Mass. The steamboat was heading on down the river to unload the equipment at the foot of Arsenal street, and the technicians were tearing it down to get the stuff back to town in time to set it up for the Laclede show that night.

This was what it took for four and a half minutes on television. The same scene, in effect, was enacted that afternoon in 11 other spots over the country, and all things considered, it went off smoothly.

Of course, there was to have been an ice skating sequence on the rink at Radio City, New York, but during the show a rain came up and melted all the ice. And at Weekiwachee, Fla., where they presented underwater ballet and tropical fish, someone forgot to connect the oxygen hose and the tropical fish all turned over and died just before the show, and they had to rush in a new load of fish. And at Princeton, N.J., the floods washed all the cables away and they had to rush in new cables.

At Lake Mead, Utah, although they got one shot of Donald Campbell in his speed boat, just after the camera left him, the boat sank.

Television is a many-splendored thing.

The costume consisting of a fitted waist-length jacket and a matching slim-skirted dress is a fashionable one for autumn wear. Tweed is the fabric used most for such a suit. Jacket fits so snugly at the waistline it seems to be a part of the dress.

Seek Hepburn, Evans For Stratford Theater

NEW YORK, Oct. 22—Katherine Hepburn and Maurice Evans may participate next year in the second season of the American Shakespeare Festival Theater and Academy at Stratford, Conn., it has been announced by Lawrence Langner, Lincoln Kirstein and Chandler Cowles.

The producers disclosed that both stars had "expressed interest in the project and one or both, at different times, will be on hand."

The agenda for 1956 calls for four productions — two comedies, a tragedy and an historical play.

It also was revealed that negotiations are under way on a plan under which the Shakespeare Memorial Theater's complement, now located at England's Stratford-on-Avon, would journey in 1957 to the United States as guests of the Connecticut Shakespeare Festival. This proposal would have the British troupe seen in "Richard II," "Henry IV, Parts 1 and 2," and "Henry V."

In its first season this year, more than 60,000 persons paid to attend the new $750,000 theater, but the productions were poorly received by the critics.

Cooked noodles, condensed cream of mushroom soup and tuna make a good casserole for lunch or supper. Dilute the soup with a little milk and add a topping of grated cheddar cheese.

UNITED FUND

PART SEVEN — ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 23, 1955 — PAGES 1—4H

UNITED FUND DRIVE LARGEST EVER HELD HERE, $8,245,925 GOAL

IT SUPPORTS 114 AGENCIES, 40,000 WORKERS SEEK DONATIONS

Campaign Moves Into First Full Week — Tucker and Matthews Call on Citizens to Respond.

The largest civic fund-raising drive in the history of the St. Louis area will move into its first full week tomorrow, with about 40,000 volunteer solicitors of the United Fund seeking to raise $8,245,925 for the support of 114 welfare and service agencies.

The campaign, the first to be held by the United Fund, opened officially last Thursday. It will run to Nov. 22.

William A. McDonnell, general campaign chairman, asked the public to contribute generously to the drive, saying that the goal represented a bare minimum of the money considered necessary for operation of the voluntary agencies.

Comment By Mayor.

Mayor Raymond R. Tucker, joining St. Louis County Supervisor Luman F. Matthews in urging support of the drive, declared that the campaign should be another expression of "the new spirit of St. Louis."

St. Louisans, who accepted the necessity for progress in approving the recent $110,000,000 bond issue, now are being given "another opportunity to affirm their conviction that our community must go forward," he said.

Matthews, stressing the need for funds to support youth programs, said that "the alternative to providing wholesome activities for young people is to provide more expensive corrective institutions later on" for young criminals.

Aim of the new United Fund organization, established last April and patterned after similar groups in some 400 other cities, is to eliminate the numerous charity fund-raising drives held each year by holding one single large campaign.

The Community Chest, with its 109 agencies, represents the bulk of the United Fund membership, and the drive this year is largely the annual Chest campaign under a new title.

Five Others Join.

Five other organizations, however, also have turned over their fund-raising functions to the United Fund and will no longer conduct separate campaigns of their own.

These are the Red Cross, United Cerebral Palsy, Associated Hospitals (Christian, Deaconess and Missouri Baptist), St. Louis Diabetes Association, and St. Louis Association for Retarded Children.

Several large fund-raising groups, on the other hand, have refused to join the United Fund. Reason given is that policies of their national organizations prevent such amalgamations.

These non-participating groups, which will continue to conduct separate fund drives, include the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis (March of Dimes), the St. Louis Heart Association, the St. Louis chapter of the American Cancer Society and the St. Louis chapter of the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Also not included in the United Fund are the Christmas and Easter seal mail campaigns of the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis and the St. Louis Society for Crippled Children, respectively.

United Fund leaders have said that the two societies were not asked to join the new group because of their "traditional background and seasonal effort" which will not conflict with the present campaign.

Campaign Costs Cut.

Costs of the United Fund campaign will be 3.8 per cent of the goal, compared with costs for separate campaigns last year which ranged from 4.8 per cent for the Community Chest to as much as 23 per cent for one of the other organizations, a United Fund spokesman said. He did not identify the organization.

Leaders of the United Fund said that although the $8,245,925 goal is the largest of any previous civic drive here, it still is $1,300,000 below the amount required to meet existing needs of Fund members adequately.

The group's executive committee, after a study of requirements of the participating groups and what each had raised in past drives, decided on the campaign figure as a "rock bottom" goal.

However, they said, a total of $9,500,000 would be the proper amount to meet present needs. The cut was agreed on as "the soundest course," so that the urgency of the drive "could not be challenged," they said.

The present goal is $861,379 more than the member agencies raised separately last year, and can be reached if contributors donate 11.7 per cent more than they gave last year, Fund leaders said.

The additional money is to be allocated as follows: $500,000 to the Community Chest, $115,000 to the Red Cross for regular and disaster use, and $246,379 to other participating agencies.

Reasons for Greater Need.

Three reasons why more money is needed this year, as listed by the United Fund, are:

1. Most agencies in recent years have been trying to do more work with the same amount of money. Unless additional funds are available, the groups "will be even more severely handicapped in the coming year and the entire St. Louis area community will suffer."

2. Hospitals which provide free care for indigent patients have long been burdened by the fact that it costs them more than the reimbursement the Community Chest has been able to provide them. "This needs to be adjusted to a fairer level."

3. Direct relief agencies, such as the Salvation Army and the St. Vincent de Paul Society, which give short-term aid to families which are without money, also have been unable to meet the need with their allotted funds. It has been necessary to use Community Chest reserve money to make up the difference.

Spokesmen of the Fund said that the organization's purpose is not to replace all other money-raising drives in the St. Louis area, but to consolidate all campaigns for health, welfare and character-building purposes.

The Fund does not include groups outside of these three categories and is not raising money for capital or building purposes, officials said.

In the three categories, however, the Fund urges that "a firm stand" be taken by St. Louisans against any other campaign.

This is outlined in the Fund's "chapter plan" recommendation to businesses and industries, suggested as a means of raising money at the least cost and eliminating "the waste and annoyance of successive solicitations."

Fund Chapters Urged.

Corporations are urged to form United Fund chapters and "permit no other solicitation in your organization."

The "chapter plan," proposal adds that the executive who announces that company personnel will be made available for the United Fund campaign alone "will win the respect of the employes who have been harassed into working for many drives and are weary of the task of multiple solicitations."

The United Fund idea was tried first in Detroit a few years ago and since then in about 400 cities.

Fund officials here said that "with the exception of one city, all have found that the givers responded to the United Fund plan with enthusiasm and are supporting the co-operating organizations more generously than when all were seeking their funds independently." The exception was not named.

For several years in St. Louis, various organizations urged that a United Fund be established. At one point, a volunteer committee of 12 business men asked Civic Progress Inc. to study the problem and make recommendations.

The study was made by a three-man committee, the members of which were Donald Danforth, president of Ralston Purina Co.; David R. Calhoun Jr., president of St. Louis Union Trust Co., and Edgar E. Rand, president of International Shoe Co.

The group held meetings with labor leaders, business men and others to ask if they would support a United Fund. The response was unanimously favorable, the committee reported.

United Fund Set Up.

In April of this year, after Civic Progress asked the three committee members to form an organizing committee, the United Fund was formally established. Danforth was elected president and a board of directors was set up with 125 members, representing a broad variety of organizations in the city.

Records indicate that more than 400,000 persons received benefits or services last year through agencies which will be allotted money raised in the United Fund campaign.

The total includes about 50,000 patients treated in clinics; 84,000 members and leaders of the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts; 15,000 persons who received personal counseling; 814 patients who received long-term hospital care, and 5500 handicapped persons who were given care toward rehabilitation.

Ability to speak clearly is a difficult accomplishment for cerebral palsy patients. The United Cerebral Palsy Association and the hospital will receive support from the United Fund campaign.

5-MAN GROUP HEADS LABOR ROLE IN DRIVE

Joseph E. Griesedieck Chairman—Unions for 'One Gift' Plan.

Organized labor in St. Louis, which has indorsed the "one gift" principle of the United Fund, will take part in the campaign to meet the $8,245,925 goal under the direction of a five-man committee, it was announced yesterday.

Four committee members are representatives of labor groups. The fifth, the chairman, is Joseph E. Griesedieck, president of Falstaff Brewing Corp., who headed a similar committee in last year's Community Chest drive.

Griesedieck said meetings with various unions showed strong support for the United Fund. "With such co-operation from the leaders and ranks of organized labor, I don't see how we can keep from going over the top," he said.

Other members of the committee are William A. Webb, executive secretary of the AFL Central Trades and Labor Union; John Walsh, international representative of the CIO Communications Workers of America; Allan E. Snyder, representative of the Midwest Independent Union Council, and Frank J. Winters, district council president of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees.

Liaison representatives of the two major union federations are Joseph P. Clark, AFL, and Edward M. Tod, CIO, who will attend committee meetings.

AFL and CIO indorsement of the United Fund was given Sept. 28 at a rally held at Hotel Statler. Spokesmen for other labor groups and for management also voiced their approval of the new fund-raising program.

On behalf of the CIO, Oscar A. Ehrhardt, executive secretary of the CIO Industrial Union Council, said that there was general acceptance of the United Fund chapter plan for corporations, under which a firm agrees to allow only the one solicitation of its employes per year.

"A genuine spirit of co-operation exists between employes and employers in most of our industries in an effort to reduce the hardship of lump sum contributions through the sensible program of payroll deductions spread over 52 weeks," Ehrhardt added.

Plaques for Employe Gifts.

Companies in which at least 80 per cent of the employes contribute the minimum recommended gifts will receive United Fund Plaque Awards.

List of Agencies Which Share In Funds Raised in Campaign

$5,894,814 Allocated to Those in Community Chest — Amounts for Others Announced.

Money raised in the $8,245,925 United Fund campaign will be used to support 114 charitable and service agencies, of which the 109 Community Chest agencies form the major part.

Of these Chest agencies, 102 have been allocated $5,894,814, or roughly 70 per cent of the total goal. The seven other agencies, which recently dropped plans for separate campaigns and joined the Chest, have been allocated $127,905.

Of the five remaining agencies whose funds will be raised by the United Fund, the largest allocation is for the Red Cross, including the St. Louis and Webster Groves chapters. The organization is to receive $1,150,000 for ordinary purposes and $65,000 for disaster relief.

The United Fund drive is directed by William A. McDonnell, general campaign chairman, and 23 other persons who hold top posts in the fund-raising effort.

McDonnell, president of First National Bank in St. Louis, was named chairman by Donald Danforth, president of Ralston Purina Co., who heads the United Fund.

As his two principal assistants, McDonnell appointed Edwin M. Clark, Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. president, who is chairman of the money raising divisions, and Clark Hungerford, president of the Frisco Railway, in charge of promotion.

Clark and Hungerford in turn appointed heads of eight soliciting divisions and five divisions concerned with promotion. Through the division chairmen, an estimated 40,000 volunteers have been recruited to solicit contributions.

Large Firms Division.

William B. McMillan, president of Hussmann Refrigerator Co., heads the largest of the soliciting units, the large firms division, with a goal of $4,497,675. J. Wesley McAfee, president of Union Electric Co., is co-chairman.

The special gifts division is headed by S. C. Davis, assistant vice president and trust officer of St. Louis Union Trust Co. The division quota is $1,298,006.

Powell B. McHaney, president of General American Life Insurance Co., is in charge of the trades division, which has a $670,425 goal. In charge of the industry and manufacturing division, with a quota of $587,247, is Russel L. Savage, district manager of Sears Roebuck & Co.

Hugh A. Logan, vice president of Marsh & McLennan, Inc., insurance brokers, is chairman of the mercantile and office division, which has a goal of $286,675. John H. Lashly, an attorney, heads the professional unit, seeking to raise $333,358.

The city division, responsible for solicitation of small firms and residences in St. Louis, is under the leadership of Mrs. Edward M. Harrington, member of the Board of Education. The unit's goal is $231,981.

Residential and small firm gifts in the county will be sought by the county division, headed by Mrs. Lee I. Niedringhaus. The quota is $340,558.

Non-Soliciting Units.

Non-soliciting divisions include:

Public relations, advertising and promotion committee, with Paul M. Morris, director of public relations for the Frisco Railway, chairman, and Charles E. Claggett, senior vice president of Gardner Advertising Co., co-chairman.

Labor participation committee, headed by Joseph E. Griesedieck, president of Falstaff Brewing Corp. Members are William A. Webb, executive secretary of the AFL Central Trades and Labor Union; John Walsh, international representative of the CIO Communications Workers of America; Allan E. Snyder, representing the Midwest Independent Union Council, and Frank J. Winters, president of the district council, Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employes.

Training committee, under the leadership of A. W. Moise, director of personnel administration at Ralston Purina Co.

Speakers' bureau, with Richmond C. Coburn, an attorney, chairman.

Torch tour unit for promotion of visits to United Fund agencies, under the direction of Kenneth A. Bell, vice president of Boatmen's National Bank.

Joseph H. Cinnater, treasurer of McDonnell Aircraft Corp., is chairman of the audit division, composed of a crew of volunteer auditors from St. Louis firms. The unit will audit daily returns and report directly to Campaign Chairman McDonnell.

UNITED FUND USED TO HELP WIDOW REGAIN HER JOB

Mrs. R. had been a skilled worker in a shoe factory, until she left her job to begin the life of a housewife. Suddenly she found herself almost helpless, her husband dead, family savings exhausted and ill of tuberculosis.

After sanatorium treatment helped her combat the disease, her physician recognized that if she could get a job her health and emotional outlook would be much improved.

The Occupational Therapy Workshop, a United Fund agency, and the Missouri Vocational Rehabilitation Service were called in to help her regain proficiency at her former trade.

Now Mrs. R. has a regular job in a shoe factory and is not dependent on public funds. This is one of more than 100 case histories related in "True Stories," a United Fund publication showing the need for contributions to it.

Record Total Last Year.

In the 1954 Community Chest campaign, a record total of $5,803,960 in contributions and pledges was raised. This was 4.9 per cent short of the goal of $6,100,000.

TORCH REPLACES RED FEATHER AS SYMBOL IN DRIVE

The United Fund symbol of a torch has replaced the familiar red feather of the Community Chest as the mark of the major welfare agencies' annual fund-raising campaign in St. Louis.

The torch, firmly grasped by a hand, is intended to represent the spirit of compassionate service to mankind. It has been used in similar United Fund drives in other cities.

The accompanying slogan, "One Gift . . . For All," sums up the new organization's goal of conducting a single fund drive for all voluntary agencies engaged in health, welfare and character-building activities.

CAMPAIGN SONG WRITTEN BY 2 IN WOMEN'S AD CLUB

The United Fund campaign song, "One Gift for All," was written by two members of the Women's Advertising Club of St. Louis who have composed skits for the club's annual gridiron dinner.

Lyrics for the song were written by Miss Bea Adams, executive vice president of Gardner Advertising Co., and the music was composed by Miss Helen Prange, advertising manager of Mermod Jaccard King Jewelry Co.

SUGGESTED GIFTS BY THOSE WITH VARIOUS INCOMES

Minimum of $10.40 for Hourly-Paid Workers, $12 for Salaried Proposed.

Minimum contributions of $10.40 for most persons paid on an hourly basis and $12 for most salaried employes are recommended by leaders of the United Fund campaign.

Sliding scales in which donations are related to wages or salaries have been suggested as a guide for volunteer solicitors. Employers were urged to establish payroll deduction systems so that contributions may be made in weekly or semi-monthly installments.

The deduction for the proposed $10.40 minimum gift would be 20 cents a week. For the $12 minimum gift by a salaried man, it would be 50 cents semi-monthly.

The $10.40 donation is recommended for employes earning $1.25 per hour. The suggested gift is $13 for those paid $1.50 hourly, and rises to $54.60 for persons paid at a $3.60 hourly rate.

The $12 gift is proposed for persons paid salaries of $108 semi-monthly. The recommended donation is $14.40 for those earning $130 semi-monthly and rises to $96 for persons who receive $417 semi-monthly.

$6000 a Year or More.

For executives, earning $6000 a year or more, another sliding scale has been drawn up. The "fair share" gift would be $58 for a person whose salary is between $6000 and $6600, and rises through a series of higher income brackets to $499 for those earning from $24,000 to $25,000.

For salaries above $25,000, a minimum gift of 2 per cent of income is urged.

Fund leaders said that, because of "confusion" arising from a multiplicity of drives last year, 37 per cent of the executive gifts — from those earning $6000 or more — averaged only $11 in the 1954 Community Chest campaign.

Corporations are asked to increase by 11 per cent the total amount given last year to the Community Chest, Red Cross and other agencies. As an alternative method of computing their gifts, corporations are asked to multiply $8.60 by the number of employes. The $8.60 figure represents the average corporation gift per employe last year to the various agency campaigns, plus a percentage increase.

It is pointed out that, because of tax deductions permitted for such gifts, the actual cost to a firm of a donation will be considerably less than the amount of the contribution. For corporations having taxable income in excess of $25,000, the net cost of gifts would be 48 per cent of the amount, or, for example, $2400 of a $5000 gift.

Hourly Basis Scale.

This is the United Fund's sliding scale of donations for persons paid on an hourly basis:

Hourly Wage	Annual Gift	Weekly Deduction
$1.25	$10.40	$0.20
1.50	13.00	.25
1.75	15.60	.30
2.00	18.20	.35
2.25	20.80	.40
2.50	26.00	.50
2.75	31.20	.60
3.00	36.40	.70
3.12	41.60	.80
3.37	46.80	.90
3.60	54.60	1.05

Salary Basis Scale.

This is the sliding scale of donations for persons paid on a salary basis:

Semi-Monthly Salary	Annual Gift	Semi-Monthly Deduction
$108	$12.00	$ .50
130	14.40	.60
152	16.80	.70
173	19.20	.80
195	21.60	.90
204	24.00	1.00
217	27.60	1.15
238	32.40	1.35
260	38.40	1.60
271	43.20	1.80
292	48.00	2.00

375	79.20	3.30
396	86.40	3.60
417	96.00	4.00

'Fair Share' Table.

The "fair share" table for suggested gifts by executives follows:

Salary Range	Annual Gift
$ 6,000- 6,599	$ 58
6,600- 7,199	66
7,200- 7,799	78

EMPLOYE SOLICITATION DUE TO END BY OCT. 31

Solicitation of contributions from employes in industries and businesses should be completed no later than Oct. 31, United Fund officials said yesterday.

A "follow-up" program, to canvass persons missed in the regular drive, should be finished by the end of the following week, they added. At this time, they said, total donations should be posted and letters of thanks written to contributors.

Argentine Public Acts to Rid Theater of Peron-Favorite Stars

Doesn't Wait for New Government—Boos Actors, Actresses Off Stage — Tea Racket Resented.

By JOHN B. McDERMOTT
The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1955.

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 22— The Argentine public is relieving the provisional government of the task of de-Peronizing the theaters.

Hooting, whistling, booing spectators are making it impossible for actors and actresses closely associated with the late government dictator Juan Peron to put on their performances.

Part of the public displeasure is a result of a black market tea racket which was run by theater people.

In the last two years of the Peron rule tea was in very short supply.

Black Market Tea.

For some unexplainable reason, the Peron government made large quantities of tea available to certain favored actresses and actors. They in turn sold it at black market prices.

Now the public is striking back. It is making life uncomfortable for all performers who are known to have been closely associated with the Peron government.

One of the top actresses to feel the sting of public criticism for her friendliness to the Peron government was Lola Membrives, who is now in her seventies. She had ostentatiously displayed her affection for Peron and his late wife Evita.

When she appeared on the stage of the Comico theater following the September revolution, she was sent scurrying back to the wings amid catcalls, boos and whistles.

Performances in two other theaters also had to be cancelled because of noisy public disapproval of performers.

Also in Movie Houses.

The situation is the same in movie houses. Argentines, enjoying their first taste of freedom of expression in 10 years, are bursting forth with vocal disdain every time a picture of a Peron government official appears on the screen in a newsreel.

Some actors and actresses have goine into voluntary "retirement" as a result of the crowd reaction. They would rather be unemployed than risk the public wrath.

In some instances, irate audiences have threatened to burn down theaters unless management canceled scheduled performances of pro-Peron actors and actresses.

SENATORS OPEN TOUR ON FARM ISSUE MONDAY

18 Hearings Scheduled Throughout U. S. — 'Grass Roots' Opinion Is Sought.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (UP) —Senate farm leaders will start out at St. Paul Monday on the first lap of a nation-wide tour to sample "grass roots" opinion on the politically-explosive issue of slumping farm income.

The Senate Agriculture Committee, faced with the job of writing a new farm price support bill when Congress returns in January, has scheduled 18 formal public hearings on its trip, beginning with the session at St. Paul.

Democrats already have seized on farm income as a powerful issue for 1956 campaigns. Republican leaders, admitting "some unrest" in the farm belt, insist there will be no repetition of 1948, when farm votes were a key factor in ex-President Harry S. Truman's surprise victory.

Sites of Hearings.

Following the St. Paul meeting, the committee will hear farm spokesmen testify at hearings in Worthington, Minn., Tuesday; Des Moines, Ia., Wednesday; Brookings, S.D., Thursday; Minot, N.D., Friday; Pendleton, Ore., Oct. 31; Fresno, Calif., No. 2; Albuquerque, N.M., Nov. 4; Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 5; Hutchinson, Kan., Nov. 7; Stillwater, Okla., Nov. 8; Alexandria, La., Nov. 9-10; Macon, Ga., Nov. 12; Columbia, S.C., Nov. 14; Raleigh, N.C., Nov. 15; Montpelier Vt., Nov. 18; Utica, N.Y., Nov. 19, and Chicago, Nov. 21.

Committee chairman Allen J. Ellender (Dem., Louisiana), said he would tell farmers at every stop that the government's current surplus stockpiles of farm products must be cut sharply to stabilize farm income. Ellender indicated he favors dropping some of the legal restrictions which now hamper the Agriculture Department's efforts to dispose of surpluses piled up under price support programs.

Spokesmen for both parties have promised to push new farm legislation when Congress returns. The Administration's program will be "nothing dramatic," Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson said recently. It will be a plan—possibly an expanded soil conservation subsidy—to boost farm income without disturbing his basic flexible price prop plan for major crops, Benson indicated.

Johnson's Charge.

Senate Democratic leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas charted his party's path last month in a statement denouncing Benson's program.

Congress must "undo the mistake" the Republican-controlled Eighty-third Congress made by approving Benson's flexible support plan in 1954 and "enact legislation that will give agriculture a fair break," Johnson asserted.

Some Democratic Senators were pressing for a return to the rigid price prop system in effect for 10 years until last January. Under this program, wheat, cotton, corn, peanuts and rice were supported at 90 per cent of the "fair earning power" parity level. But Ellender has indicated he favors restoring rigid supports only on top grades of these major crops. For lower grades he has suggested a system of discounts in support prices.

MEXICAN CHILDREN'S ART AT THE PEOPLE'S CENTER

An exhibition of 75 paintings by Mexican children was hung yesterday at People's Art Center, Community Chest agency at 3657 Grandel square. The pictures, recently shown in Chicago, were painted by children of San Miguel de Allende.

A reception will be held Tuesday at 4:30 p.m., with Carlos Grimm, Mexican consul in St. Louis, scheduled to attend. The show will run through Nov. 14.

PARADE OF SCHOOL FLOATS

A parade of floats of schools in south St. Louis county will begin at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at Lemay Ferry road and River Des Peres. Prizes will be awarded by the Lemay Ferry Business Men's Association to the best of 25 floats in the procession.

Theme of the floats will be "Famous Americans." The parade will proceed south to Telegraph road, and will include the Anheuser-Busch Clydesdale horses and a miniature working model of the Wabash Bluebird.

URGES MORE TAX FUNDS FOR LAND GRANT COLLEGES

Publisher John Cowles Says Schools Will Need Twice as Much in 10-15 Years.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22 (UP)—Land grant colleges and universities will need "at least twice as much tax support" within 10 or 15 years as they are now receiving to keep pace with the expanding population, Minneapolis publisher John Cowles predicted last night.

Cowles said the added tax support must be made available if land grant institutions are to do the job "I believe they must . . . to insure our survival as a free nation."

Cowles told a group of prominent educators gathered for Pennsylvania State University's centennial convocation he felt their biggest job in the future was educating everybody on why "greatly increased appropriations for the public schools and state universities are necessary."

"In my own state of Minnesota, for example, which now has no sales tax," Cowles said, "I think it will be necessary to enact such a tax to provide adequate funds for public education. In some states that do not now have state income taxes, I would guess that state income taxes may be necessary."

Cowles, publisher of the Minneapolis Star and Tribune, said the land grant colleges would have to be "greatly expanded" to accommodate the successfully larger waves of children already born who will be of college age five, 10, 15 and 20 years from now."

He predicted the present ratio under which 56 per cent of all college and university students attend tax-supported schools and 44 per cent attend independent institutions would increase. He said he would guess that independent colleges would not increase their student bodies more than "10, 15 or 20 per cent" by 1963-4, while land grant institutions would need to expand their facilities 50 to 100 per cent.

If the "quality and quantity" of American education in the past half century had not been as good and widespread as it was, Cowles said, "I seriously doubt that our nation would have been able to preserve its free institutions."

"If the land grant institutions should fail, quantitatively or qualitatively, to play to the full the role which destiny is assigning them," he added, "I doubt that we will have a free society and a democratic form of government in the United States a century hence."

M'KENDREE COLLEGE TO HIKE TUITION $10 A SEMESTER

A $10-a-semester increase in tuition will become effective at McKendree College, Lebanon, Ill., at the beginning of the second semester of the current school year, the college announced yesterday.

The rise will bring the tuition up to $160 a semester for the normal 12 to 16-hour load. Hourly rates in the evening college will rise from $9 to $10 at the same time.

Prospective increases in salaries, equipment costs and expense of library materials made the rise necessary, authorities said. Under current rates, the tuition meets only 58.2 per cent of the cost of educating a student, it was reported.

POLITICAL POT IN CALIFORNIA AT BOIL, HERE'S WHY

Knight, Nixon, Knowland and Fight One Factor — Kefauver Has Strong Backing.

By CHARLES B. CLEVELAND
The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch. Copyright 1955.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 22—The political pot will continue to boil in California until next June's showdown. Here's a winter book line on the presidential race and some of the developments to watch.

In March candidates will file. Vice President Richard M. Nixon, Gov. Goodwin Knight and Senator William Knowland are all Republican possibilities. Adlai Stevenson, Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee and Gov. Averell Harriman of New York are among the possible Democratic entrants.

One thing to watch is who enters the primary. At the moment Gov. Knight is the only announced candidate, and he says he will lead an uninstructed delegation.

California's political climate is difficult to judge, but at the moment most observers think Knight would beat Nixon.

They base their belief on the fact that the Governor is popular and has energetically stumped the state.

He also has the anti-Nixon sentiment behind him and in this state people either love or hate Nixon—there are no neutrals.

Nixon a Rugged Campaigner.

These same experts, however, warn that Nixon has proved himself a rugged campaigner. He has a devoted following, particularly in the Los Angeles area. The Knight-Knowland strength is more apparent in the San Francisco area.

Finally there is the Eisenhower influence. If Mr. Eisenhower does not run and taps Nixon as his choice, it will markedly boom Nixon stock.

Knowland's role is also a question mark. There is a possibility Knowland and Knight will join forces. If Knowland, however, runs his own slate it will probably cut more into Knight's strength than Nixon's.

California's most influential newspapers have frequently joined forces. This time, however, they are split.

The Los Angeles Times is expected to favor Nixon; Knowland's family owns the Oakland Tribune, and the San Francisco Chronicle has been leaning toward Gov. Knight.

Nixon's strength in southern California must be reckoned with because 1,300,000 of the state's 3,200,000 Republicans are in Los Angeles county.

Support for Stevenson.

Stevenson has most of the state's top name Democrats in his corner. However, Kefauver won this state's delegation in 1952 and appears to have retained much of his basic following.

Most observers rate this one a toss-up until the campaign reveals the voter strength of the two rivals.

There is no obvious Harriman strength in the state.

Here, as elsewhere in the country, his chances lie in having Stevenson fall short. It rests heavily on exploiting Stevenson's greatest weakness: The fact that he is a defeated candidate.

How seriously Harriman is running may be revealed here.

In order to have pledged delegates, a candidate must declare that he is running. So the only way Harriman can test his strength in California is by entering the race.

Most observers now, however, believe Harriman will sit it out hoping that Kefauver and Stevenson kill each other off at the polls.

In watching the coming events, take with a liberal grain of salt the name list of followers of the rival candidates. It means little because there is little political organization in either party.

Personal Popularity Counts.

The personal popularity of the candidates is the big thing.

Also, you can pretty well ignore the state's registration figures. They show that the Democrats outnumber Republicans by 800,000 voters. They must stick to their own party in the primary.

But in the election they can —and often do—switch. Democrats win few state elections in California. Fights between conservatives and liberals are partly accountable.

Also, in many instances a Democratic registration dates from the Roosevelt days and the voter just hasn't changed it although voting primarily for Republican candidates in recent years.

It appears also that arguments to vote for a given candidate because he is a Californian carry a little weight.

Nixon and Knowland campaigners presumably will use the argument that if their man loses the nation's top job will go to another state.

California has become such a melting pot (1000 out-of-staters settle here every day) that state pride is minimized. Actually a large number retain loyalty to their former state rather than their new home.

SOUTHERN FLYING FISH IS CAUGHT IN NOVA SCOTIA

ECUM SECUM, N.S., Oct. 22 (AP)—Fisherman Heath Jewers caught a flying fish on Nova Scotia's eastern shore. It was a new experience in nearly 50 years of fishing—but then all sorts of strange things are happening in this part of the Atlantic.

Rays, tarpons and turtles, native to semitropical waters, have been caught off Nova Scotian shores.

Jewers caught his flying fish when he saw it skimming over the waters of a cove near his home. When it lighted on the beach, he clamped a bucket over it.

At the fisheries experimental station at Halifax, scientists identified the catch with its 10-inch wingspread as exocoetus violitans, a variety rarely seen north of the Virginia capes.

They told Jewers that Nova Scotia's coastal waters have warmed by an average of two degrees in the last 10 years. The warming water has been accompanied by an invasion of semitropical fish.

At the same time, the codfish, native to colder waters, appears to be moving north.

Skin Specialist Shows How to Rinse Away Complexion Blemishes

"Thrilled and delighted," says Miss Carolyn Peterson (left) after demonstration. "Could hardly believe my eyes!" said Miss Maxine Cantway (center). "It's true! I can't believe it! Where did the blemishes all go?" exclaimed Mrs. Sylvia Schaeffer (right).

Reveals Valuable Complexion Secret

Richard Estrin, of QUEEN HELENE FAME.

"Now no woman need despair of getting rid of ugly blackheads that mar an otherwise clear and lovely complexion. For here is a wonderfully simple treatment that gives dramatic proof of what it will do the very first time you use it.

"In thousands of beauty salons across the country, thousands of women have paid from $3 to $10 for single Queen Helene Treatments. However, I have arranged for Famous-Barr to bring you the very same treatments at a cost of less than 10c each . . . when you give them to yourself at home."

If you are not pleased with the results, your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Fast, Easy Treatment now available for home use

by CLAIRE HOFFMAN

NEW YORK, N. Y.—I was one of an audience of truly surprised men, women and teen-agers yesterday when a leading New York skin specialist demonstrated a new rapid way of removing blackheads.

Each demonstration took only 15 minutes—and the results were frankly amazing! Ugly blackheads actually rinsed away and many could be seen on the white cleansing tissues that finished each treatment.

But this wasn't all! The treatment also helped reduce enlarged pores and made rough, muddy complexions look cleaner, clearer and smoother.

Here's what I saw . . .

Five women and two men were each given three products and told to use them. The specialist himself did nothing but direct them—it was so easy!

First, he had them cleanse their faces thoroughly. Not with any cream that takes off only surface dirt, but with a scientific laboratory-developed pore cleanser that softens and loosens even the grime that has been caked and cemented into the pores for weeks. It is called Queen Helene's Whipped Cleansing Cream. As it is applied, it liquefies and floats out much of the pore "filler" with its rapid emollient action.

I was amused at the look of amazement on one woman's face as she tissued off the cream. The tissue was literally gray with dirt — and she confided to me that she had washed her face before taking part in the demonstration!

I'm convinced that any woman who sees, with her own eyes, the dirt this cream floats out of her skin—will begin to understand why it is so important to use a cleanser that really works.

Waste material drawn out by "suction action."

The second step in this skin specialist's treatment was an application of Queen Helene's Masque, a delightfully mint-scented cream. He had them smooth it on with their fingertips, applying it very generously on "trouble spots," such as around the nose and mouth.

Any woman will really enjoy this part of the treatment! For within two or three minutes your skin begins to feel a marvelous stimulation, as though being "massaged" by the action of the medicated ingredients in the masque. Next your face feels alternately "hot" and "cold"—followed in a few minutes by a delightful sensation of utter relaxation. Then your skin feels tighter . . . and tighter . . . and tighter!

It was explained this way

A special absorbing agent called Argilla dries and turns the cream into a plastic-like masque. As this firms and hardens, its suction action draws on the waste matter in the pores . . . This, he informed us, was the most important part of the treatment.

Here's proof you can see . . . tiny specks of black on your cleansing tissue that were once ugly grime and embedded pore dirt.

SEE COMPLEXION IMPROVE IN 15 MINUTES

they just rinse away!

Complete treatment takes only minutes—produces startling results!

1. APPLY QUEEN HELENE WHIPPED CLEANSING CREAM. It liquefies instantly on skin and floats out dirt with emollient action. Wipe off with cleansing tissue.

2. APPLY QUEEN HELENE MASQUE. As masque tightens and hardens, drawing action of special absorbent agent draws out waste material and other pore impurities.

3. RINSE OFF. In about 10 minutes, rinse off. The masque dissolves in seconds, you'll see dirt, grime and other impurities come off on the cleansing tissue.

4. FINISH WITH QUEEN HELENE PENETRATING ASTRINGENT. This special formula astringent helps close "emptied" pores, tones up complexion, makes skin feel vibrantly fresh and alive.

LOOK IN MIRROR—SEE THE BIG DIFFERENCE
But don't be satisfied with one treatment—repeat daily until complexion is firm, smooth, and pores are reduced.

Rinses away with water

After about 10 minutes, the masques were rinsed away with water. Hot or cold makes no difference—the hardened cream dissolves in seconds. You simply wipe your face and—to your amazement—you see blackheads and other pore "filler" actually come off on your washcloth or tissue! Your skin feels clean—really clean—and refreshed and smooth, like velvet!

Pore sponging and closing

The third and final step in the treatment was a quick dousing with Queen Helene's Penetrating Astringent. I found out this was a very special astringent that sinks deep into your pores and performs the final necessary dissolving, soaking-up action—after which it helps tighten the pore openings and leaves an invisible film that helps protect your skin for hours against dirt and reinfection.

What will happen when you use this 3-step treatment?

You'll find the answer when you look in your mirror. Even after a single treatment, you are bound to see a marked improvement in your complexion. The chances are you'll find it hard to believe your eyes.

For example, some of the blackheads and whiteheads should be gone—either completely or partially—while others will be softened and made ready to be drawn out in another treatment or two. You will also see that many of your most prominent pores appear to be smaller—that your skin looks smoother—and feels fresher and more alive!

In short, after a single treatment taking less than fifteen minutes, you can expect to see results that normally you would not dare hope for even after many weeks of treatment . . . but don't expect everything at once, just the same! The damage done by years of neglect and improper care cannot be undone in a single day. But—with 3 or 4 treatments a week, taking less than 15 minutes each—you may confidently look forward to startling complexion improvements within the next 30 days. From then on, a single treatment a week—or every second week—will probably be all that your skin will need to be kept beautiful and healthy-looking.

Important Discovery for Normal Complexions, too!

Even if you are not plagued by blackheads, whiteheads, or other tell-tale signs of skin blemishes, you will find this 3-Way Treatment a remarkable aid to a smooth, glowing young-looking complexion.

By properly cleansing and flexing your skin regularly—just as you flex your muscles—this 3-Way Treatment helps keep your complexion looking and feeling firm, youthful and alive.

If you should be over 35, and beginning to look it, you will see minor lines flatten out, feel tired facial muscles tighten, and enjoy the look and feel of youth for hours . . . Countless women use Queen Helene's 3-Way Skin and Beauty Treatment as a quick beauty "pick-me-up" just before a party—or important date!

Try this skin treatment in your own home without risking a penny

Clinical demonstrations of this treatment have been so startling that we know the results you'll see in your mirror will delight you. This is why we invite you to try Queen Helene's 3-Way Skin and Beauty Treatment without risking a penny. This treatment, developed by a leading New York Skin Specialist for home use, will not only enable you to rinse away troublesome blackheads, but it will also help smooth and beautify your complexion so that you yourself will see the difference—or the treatment won't cost you a cent! All you need to do is return what you haven't used, and your purchase price will be refunded. It's as simple as that. You have complexion loveliness to gain—and nothing to lose!

No matter what your skin may be like now—if it is anything less than perfect — Queen Helene promises you results you can see in your first 15-minute home treatment and dramatic improvements within 14 days. After the first two weeks you will discover whether you need to keep on using the treatment several times a week, or less often, depending on how fast your complexion clears. But act now! So right now, while you are determined to help yourself, send in the coupon!

AIR FORCE SURE IT WON'T HAVE TO USE DRAFT

Re-enlistments Rising—Recruiting Quotas Oversubscribed—West Pointer Gets Credit.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (UP) —The Air Force, with re-enlistments rising and enlistment quotas oversubscribed, is increasingly confident that it can avoid the draft.

This optimism, in marked contrast to the ill-concealed gloom of less than a year ago, was expressed this way today by Brig. Gen. Richard H. Carmichael:

"We anticipate no trouble whatsoever in maintaining a voluntary Air Force with a minimum tour of duty of four years."

Carmichael, a 42-year-old former strategic air division commander, was called back to the Pentagon in the spring of 1954 when slumping re-enlistment rates were causing alarm.

A square-set Texan who graduated from West Point in 1932, Carmichael, was made deputy director of personnel procurement and training—the military designation for a small, 10-officer task force which drew the assignment of boosting re-enlistments.

Campaign Successful.

Thus far the tasks force's efforts have paid off, in terms of money as well as men. Re-enlistments, which has a record low of 22 per cent in September 1954, were up to an overall rate of 49 per cent last August.

For the Air Force this increase means potential savings of hundreds of millions of dollars in replacement training costs, not to mention greater combat readiness with a bigger core of trained personnel. The increase also lessens the chances that the Air Force will have to resort to the draft.

With re-enlistments and enlistments on the upswing, Carmichael said confidently that "as far ahead as I can see we will have no trouble getting enough men."

"We are capable, unless something unforseen comes up, of maintaining strength through voluntary means," he said.

That "something unforseen" could be congressional refusal to extend the draft four years from now. Carmichael frankly admitted that if it were not for the pressure of the draft, the Air Force would not be able to reach a 975,000-man strength, a far larger volunteer force than ever before maintained in peacetime.

While re-enlistments have been rising, the Air Force has had no trouble with enlistments, either. In fact, last month the Air Force had to cut off enlistments in the middle of the month, when recruiters started to go above their 10,000-man quota.

Pay Rise Effective.

The increase in re-enlistments is attributable to many factors. They range from a pay increase to internal improvements. Designed, as Carmichael put it, "to take as much misery as possible" out of the military life. The Air Force has also taken a page out of private industry's book by adopting a sales campaign —complete with personal talks and illustrated sales packets— that rivals the techniques of any large business.

Re-enlistments started to climb right after Congress approved a pay increase in April. From 30 per cent in April, they jumped to 38 per cent in May, slipped off to 36 per cent in June, were up to 42 per cent in July and 49 per cent in August.

Moneywise, Carmichael said, the increase in re-enlistments has more than paid off the cost of the hike in salaries.

As long as re-enlistments were running around 20 per cent, the Air Force, in effect, was having to buy a new air force every four years. Last fiscal year, when 200,000 men left the service, the Air Force suffered a two billion dollar loss in trained manpower.

2 FROM HERE TO ATTEND JOB EQUALITY CONFERENCE

Charles Allen Thomas, president of Monsanto Chemical Co., and Joseph Fistere, president of the Mallinckrodt Chemical Works, are scheduled to participate Tuesday in a conference on equal job opportunity at Washington.

The conference, to be attended by 65 business and industrial leaders, was arranged by Vice President Nixon, chairman of President Eisenhower's Committee on Government contracts.

Purpose of the meeting, which will be closed to the press, is to exchange ideas on effective methods of achieving ulfimate elimination of discrimination in American industry. Nixon will hold a press conference at conclusion of the session.

RECEPTION FOR HENNINGS

A public reception for United States Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. will be held Tuesday at St. Louis County Democratic Headquarters, 7807 Forsyth boulevard, Clayton, from 4 to 6 p.m.

The reception is sponsored by the county Democratic committee, and will be open to the public generally. Hennings, who is serving his first term in the Senate, is expected to be a candidate for re-election next year.

Anti-Proton Find Does Not Mean Horrible New Bomb, Expert Says

Discovery, However, Is Basic to Understanding of Physical World, Prof. Robert D. Sard of Washington U. Explains.

The announcement last week that a team of four University of California scientists had produced a new particle called an "anti-proton" brings to an end a 20-year search for the subatomic particle, Robert D. Sard, professor of physics at Washington University, said yesterday.

The anti-proton is a negatively charged proton. In other words, it is the exact negative counterpart of the positively charged proton, which is the nucleus of the hydrogen atom and a basic building block in the nucleus of the atom of every element of nature.

The discovery was made with a $9,500,000 atom-smashing machine at Berkeley, Calif., called the bevatron, financed by the Atomic Energy Commission. Since Carl Anderson of the California Institute of Technology found a positron, or positive equivalent of the electron, in experiments with cosmic rays in 1932, scientists have been looking for the proton's opposite number, or the anti-proton.

Background of Research.

Here is how Sard, an expert in the study of the structure of matter, described the background of this research:

"In 1905 Albert Einstein predicted that energy could be transformed into matter, and vice versa.

"When there is enough energy available in one place at one time, it can be transformed into new atomic particles. So says the theory, and we've been able to confirm it.

"Whole new families of particles have been found. They range from hyperons, which are heavier than protons, to various kinds of mesons, which are lighter than protons. These are particles which are unstable."

They are produced, he said, by collisions of atomic particles, when enough energy is available.

"Then, once formed, they quickly disintegrate spontaneously—just like radium," he said.

Tremendous Energy.

The bevatron supplies the tremendous amount of energy needed to produce these short-lived particles in the laboratory.

In the machine, the kinetic energy of the fast-moving proton, as it bombards a copper atom and is slowed down or stopped by the resulting collision, produces a pair of brand-new particles — one a positive proton, the other a negative proton.

The energy required for this event is a staggering 5 billion electron volts, of which no other type of atom-smasher now in operation is capable.

A characteristic of the anti-proton is that it will combine with its opposite number, the positive proton, shortly after it comes into being. This combination results in the annihilation of both particles, producing either a pair of mesons, or radiation known as gamma rays.

In either case, the mutual annihilation of the proton and the anti-proton, each of which weighs some 1800 times more than an electron, results in the release of about 2 billion electron volts of energy.

No New Bomb.

Is this discovery, then, the key to a new and more horrible type of atomic bomb?

The answer, Sard said, is clearly, "No."

For this annihilation is of a different order than atomic fission or atomic fusion, where man is unlocking the vast storehouse of energy contained in matter. In the case of the anti-proton, which apparently occurs only rarely, at best, in nature, vast energy is required to make it in the laboratory. And the energy has to be produced in the first place, Sard pointed out.

"It's like heating water to make steam, and then getting the energy back from the steam to run an engine. You're getting back the energy you used to heat the water, in a different form," he said.

But although no bomb will result from the discoveries of the bevatron, they are of the greatest importance, Sard said. The study of the tiny particles which make up matter is basic for our understanding of the physical world.

In fact, if scientists had found the anti-proton could not be produced, they would have had to revise the whole of modern physical theory developed over the last 50 years, Sard added.

JEWISH FEDERATION WOMEN'S DIVISION'S ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Women's Division of the Jewish Federation of St. Louis will be held Monday, Oct. 31, at a noon luncheon at the Chase Club, Kingshighway and Lindell boulevard.

"Lace Collars," a musical dedicated to the women who devote their time and effort to civic and philanthropic causes, will be the feature of the program. It was written by Alma Kessler and is being directed by Maggie Speer.

The program will also include an address by Irvin Bettman Jr., president of the federation, and election and installation of officers and board members of the women's division.

BENEFIT FOR ORPHANS' HOME

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Lutheran Orphans' Home, 12325 Manchester road, Kirkwood, will serve its annual turkey dinner today from noon until 4:30 p.m. on the grounds of the home.

A country store will be open on the grounds, selling a variety of items. Proceeds of the dinner will go to the general treasury of the home.

BAPTIST CHILDREN'S HOME GETS KANSAS CITY OFFICE

The Missouri Baptist Children's Home, Pattonville, has established an extension office in downtown Kansas City to expedite its child care program in the western part of the state.

"The new office will serve as a center for on-the-spot care involving any child in need," it was explained by the Rev. Roald H. Sorensen, director of public relations for the children's home.

The Kansas City Office will be staffed with a case work supervisor, a case-worker, and full-time office secretary, the Rev. Mr. Sorensen said. There has been some difficulty in the past because of the distance factor, according to Edgar E. Blake, superintendent of the Pattonville institution. "They cannot come to us so we must go to them," he said.

Business Women's 'Boss Night.'

Members of the St. Louis chapter of the American Business Women's Association will hold their third annual "Boss Night" dinner at the Congress Hotel Thursday at 6:30 p.m.

AGNES MEYER RAKES G.O.P. 'RIGHT WING'

Says 'Penny Pinchers' Badgered President Into Harmful Economies.

TUCSON, Ariz., Oct. 22 (AP) —Mrs. Agnes Meyer, co-owner and co-editor of the Washington Post, said yesterday "budget-balancing, right wing" Republicans had constantly badgered President Eisenhower into a group of damaging "penny-pinching policies."

"The one thing which I as a Republican living in Washington can say for the leaders of this Administration is that they believe in the coldest arithmetic in every field," she said in an address to the annual convention of the Arizona Education Association. About 4000 teachers attended.

"They are determined to balance the budget even if they have to achieve it by ignoring the humane considerations that constitute the basic right of every American citizen," Mrs. Meyer said.

She said President Eisenhower was not involved in "these political purposes" and was, in fact, not identified merely as a Republican.

"He has been regarded as the President of all the people. Moreover, he tried valiantly to defend human rights at home and abroad. But he was constantly badgered by the budget-balancing, right-wing Republicans, not only in domestic but in foreign policies, when these policies called for heavy financial expenditures."

The power and purposes of this group, she said, were evident in "their isolationism, in our unjust, undemocratic security program, in the Dixon-Yates mess, in the undermining of our conservation program, but nowhere more so than in the maneuvers of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare."

She charged that Republicans in control of the party had learned during 20 years of supremacy "how to oppose the Government but not how to govern."

DISTRICT WORKSHOP ON SCHOOL NEEDS

Ferguson - Florissant Sessions to Prepare for White House Conference.

A White House conference on education in Missouri will be held by R-2 School District, comprising Ferguson and Florissant, tomorrow, Wednesday and Nov. 2, it was announced yesterday by L. S. Echols of Ferguson, chairman of the conference committee.

"Our meetings are a preliminary to the White House conference called by President Eisenhower last spring to be held late next month in Washington," Echols said. "Our meetings will point up the rapidly growing needs of a community in which the school population has trebled in the last 10 years and will double in another five years."

Workshop meetings will be held tomorrow night from 8 to 10 o'clock at the Lee Hamilton School in Ferguson and Wednesday during the same hours at De Smet School in Florissant. On Nev. 2 at 8 p.m., a general meeting will be held at Ferguson High School for the consolidation of recommendations to be taken to Washington.

Speaker at the general meeting will be F. R. McPhee of Milwaukee, co-ordinator of Midwestern States White House Conference committee.

Echols said the workshop meetings will take up such questions as what should our schools accomplish; in what ways can we organize our schools more efficiently and economically; what are our school building needs; how can we get enough good teachers and keep them, and other administrative problems.

HEAVY DEMAND BACK OF RISE IN NEWSPRINT PRICE

U.S. Publishers Wonder if Rest of Mills Will Join in $5-a-Ton Boost by One Firm.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (UP)—Publishers of this country's newspapers from little hamlets to metropolitan centers today awaited the answer to a $32,000,000 question—will there be a general increase in the price of newsprint?

The puzzler arose this week when one of Canada's largest manufacturers boosted the price of the printing paper by $5 a ton to $131, delivered in New York. As United States newspapers now consume around 6,400,000 tons of it a year, a general hike of that amount would add at least $32,000,000 to their annual operating costs.

St. Lawrence Corp., Montreal, announced the boost on Tuesday, explaining it "had gone beyond its ability to absorb increasing costs." As the week passed, other newsprint producers maintained silence on their plans.

Mills Prosperous.

It appeared that the Canadian newsprint industry, which provides 80 per cent of the product used by United States newspapers, may be facing its biggest controversy. In the past, Canadian publishers—though regretting increases—have shown sympathy with manufacturers' arguments that they needed money to meet higher costs.

This time, however, Canadian publishers do not appear to think the manufacturers, with several prosperous years behind them, have made out a case for higher prices now.

St. Lawrence Corp., incidentally, cannot boost its price unless there is a similar hike by one of the two other giants in the field, Canadian International Paper Co. or Consolidated Paper Corp. This arises from a tie-in price clause in St. Lawrence's contracts.

The president of the Montreal firm, P. M. Fox, asserted the concern must raise funds to step up production. The firm has spent $30,000,000 to increase newsprint and heavy wrapping paper output in recent years, and a new $9,000,000 expansion program has just been authorized, according to Fox.

Gray Market.

Canadian and United States newsprint mills have been operating at record levels but demand has been outrunning their supply. Consumption so far this year has surpassed the like period of 1954 by almost eight per cent. As a result of the tight supply situation, gray market premiums of $50 a ton or more are reported being paid by some newspapers.

Newsprint use usually follows the trends of general business, particularly as reflected in advertising. So far this year advertising lineage is up almost 10 per cent over the total for the same period last year, resulting in bigger papers. Circulation is higher in many cities.

The newspapers are moving into what is expected to be the heaviest fall advertising season they ever had with an average of only 33 days' supply of newsprint on hand, according to the American Newspaper Publishers Association. This is 10 days less than a year ago and 16 days less at the same time in 1953.

Heavy Demand.

Demand also is unusually strong for other types of paper and allied products, such as books and wrapping papers and boxboard. The National Association of Purchasing Agents puts it this way:

"If general business continues at its present rate, paper buyers can anticipate many headaches in the next three months.

Some paper companies have been so rushed with orders they have been forced to turn away new clients. Their prices have been firm to higher. Prices of both wood pulp and paper (exclusive of newsprint) rose by around 3 per cent in the first eight months of this year, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The United States paper industry is spending a record of almost one-half billion dollars this year on expansion, the Commerce Department reports. Some top producers expect the current boom in paper products to be a long term development, which may carry through any dip in the economy.

Richard C. Doane, president of International Paper, world's biggest paper maker says, "we can at least expect that demand for the products of our industry will continue growing at a rate faster than the growth of population."

While North American newsprint companies are in the midst of their greatest expansion program in many years, much of the new production will not be available until 1957 or 1958. Thus, the newsprint picture may remain tight for some time.

AIR FORCE TO SEEK EX-SERVICE MEN

Week's Drive Aims at Enlisting Veterans of Any Branch of Service.

A concerted effort will be made by Air Force recruiting officers in the St. Louis area this week to enlist men with prior service in any branch of the armed services.

Maj. Richard E. Dent, commander of the recruiting detachment responsible for large parts of Missouri and Illinois, said his men would be prepared to give the latest information to any veteran interested in returning to the Air Force or joining it for the first time.

He pointed out that a saving of $14,000 is made by the Government on each veteran who returns to service, for that is the cost of preliminary training to prepare an enlistee for a technical specialty.

Dent reminded that a former service man may re-enlist in the grade held at the time of discharge, even if he has been out of the service for as long as a year.

"The re-enlistment program has been gaining speed recently," he said, "and we expect it to gain even more in November and December."

AFRICAN KING'S RETURN BUFFER AGAINST REVOLT

Buganda's Ruler Is Believed Ready to Cooperate With British Now.

By GEORGE WELLER

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1955.

ROME, Oct. 22—With the recent spectacular return of the Uganda ruler to his native kingdom another protective zone against revolt is created in agitated East Africa.

Thirty-one-year-old "King Freddie," Frederick Mutesa II, is back in his capital at Kampala after being forcibly removed by Britain 24 months ago.

Two violent forces are contending for Africa's future: The Mau Maus of Kenya and the Moslem patriots of French Mediterranean Africa.

Between them lie the two zones of Sudan and Uganda both peacefully moving toward independence and away from violent revolt against the white man.

The last British and Egyptian troops are leaving Sudan within two weeks. In neighboring Uganda the return of the stubborn young Cambridge-educated ruller is believed to augur a period of smoother coexistence within the British Commonwealth after the trade and emergency measures.

Puts Aside Demands.

Mutesa II has temporarily shelved his demands for independence for the native kingdom of Buganda which is his private realm and heart of the agitation in the larger protectorate of Uganda.

But nearby in southern Sudumhzhere civil war has been raging. The fledgling government in Khartoum apparently set off the war by sending northern Moslem troops into the southern provinces, one-time reservoir of northern slave-trapping parties.

Hundreds of southern Sudanese have slipped over into Uganda with the full co-operation of the British authorities. In this way Uganda became the symbol of liberty and sectional independence for the southern Sudanese.

British Officers Moved.

Many British officers formerly stationed in southern Sudan have been transferred to Uganda and are operating from there to help their former subjects. Basil Duke, former native officer in Sudan, has been aiding the rebels personally across the border from Uganda, according to charges in the Sudanese press.

Egypt's ruler Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser has also accused Britain of planning to dismember southern Sudan to fatten Uganda and eventually bring southern Sudan with Uganda into a new East African combine.

Sudan and Uganda jointly control the headwaters of the Nile and thereby Egypt's fertility.

TEXAS DISPUTES LOUISIANA CLAIM TO AREA IN GULF

States in Conflict Over Ownership of Submerged Lands Where Borders Meet.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (UP)—Texas and Louisiana are engaged in a private feud over outer-continental shelf oil and gas leases which the Department of the Interior intends to ignore in forthcoming federal lease offers.

Up to now the disputes have related to areas claimed by the Federal Government and either Texas or Louisiana. Each state claimed seaward boundaries out to 10.5 miles or more, while the Federal Government claimed the state boundaries extended only three miles offshore.

The new inter-state controversy is: Where does the seaward boundary line between the two states lie? Does it go straight south into the Gulf of Mexico?

Up to President.

An Interior Department attorney said this problem must be settled eventually by the President. Texas claims the line should extend southeast into the gulf from the state's southeastern boundary. Louisiana wants the line to extend southwest into the gulf from its southwestern boundary.

This conflict leaves a sort of pie-wedge, claimed by both states, extending out into the gulf from the mouth of the Sabine river.

The department attorney said the Government probably will go ahead and offer leases for this area. But he said the leases would be offered in the area beyond the historic boundaries claimed by both states in order to prevent further conflict.

He explained the leases could be made beyond the state-claimed seaward boundaries and not cause any trouble.

Other Conflicts.

The administrative legislation set up by Congress in the Submerged Lands Act and the Outer-continental Shelf Lands Act has been a far from simple administrative matter for the Interior Department.

The dispute between Texas and Louisiana as to who gets what share of the Gulf of Mexico between their states is only one thing.

There still is no final Supreme Court decision on whether Louisiana's seaward boundary is three miles, as argued by the Federal Government, or 10.5 miles as claimed by the state.

As one Interior attorney put it, the Government has not even "tackled" Texas's claim with respect to its historic seaward boundary. Meanwhile this disputed area is not being offered for oil and gas leasing.

The department also said it has done some limited mapping off the coast of California, pending a Supreme Court decision on the physical location of the California coast line.

California claims certain coastal gulfs and bays as inland waters, but federal authorities insist they are open water.

GALA STEAMBOAT PARTY FOR HISTORICAL SOCIETY

FALL activities of the Missouri Historical Society and its annual membership drive got off to a good start last week with a Steamboat party at the Francis A. Meskers' Jamestown road home. A funicular car took the guests down hill to the boathouse (pilot house and smokestacks from an old river steamer), where box lunches and steamboat punch were served and informal entertainment was the order of the day. A highlight was an amusing speech by Mrs. Hiram Norcross Jr. "of Owl's Bend, Mo., where the Historical's collection include sawed-off shotguns and a picture of myself as Sorghum Queen in oughty-ought. When you all were founded in 1763 by Laclede and Gus Chouteau, great-gramp left the Frenchies at Ste. Genevieve and founded Owl's Bend. Come on down and get a welcome. After you pass the confluence of Jack's Fork and the Current you'll float through some slaunch-wise pilings. When you hit the next white water there she'll be. You can't miss her."

AFRICAN KING'S RETURN BUFFER AGAINST REVOLT

Buganda's Ruler Is Believed Ready to Cooperate With British Now.

By GEORGE WELLER

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1955.

ROME, Oct. 22—With the recent spectacular return of the Uganda ruler to his native kingdom another protective zone against revolt is created in agitated East Africa.

Thirty-one-year-old "King Freddie," Frederick Mutesa II, is back in his capital at Kampala after being forcibly removed by Britain 24 months ago.

Two violent forces are contending for Africa's future: The Mau Maus of Kenya and the Moslem patriots of French Mediterranean Africa.

Between them lie the two zones of Sudan and Uganda both peacefully moving toward independence and away from violent revolt against the white man.

The last British and Egyptian troops are leaving Sudan within two weeks. In neighboring Uganda the return of the stubborn young Cambridge-educated ruller is believed to augur a period of smoother coexistence within the British Commonwealth after the trade and emergency measures.

Puts Aside Demands.

Mutesa II has temporarily shelved his demands for independence for the native kingdom of Buganda which is his private realm and heart of the agitation in the larger protectorate of Uganda.

But nearby in southern Sudumhzhere civil war has been raging. The fledgling government in Khartoum apparently set off the war by sending northern Moslem troops into the southern provinces, one-time reservoir of northern slave-trapping parties.

Hundreds of southern Sudanese have slipped over into Uganda with the full co-operation of the British authorities. In this way Uganda became the symbol of liberty and sectional independence for the southern Sudanese.

British Officers Moved.

Many British officers formerly stationed in southern Sudan have been transferred to Uganda and are operating from there to help their former subjects. Basil Duke, former native officer in Sudan, has been aiding the rebels personally across the border from Uganda, according to charges in the Sudanese press.

Egypt's ruler Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser has also accused Britain of planning to dismember southern Sudan to fatten Uganda and eventually bring southern Sudan with Uganda into a new East African combine.

Sudan and Uganda jointly control the headwaters of the Nile and thereby Egypt's fertility.

TEXAS DISPUTES LOUISIANA CLAIM TO AREA IN GULF

States in Conflict Over Ownership of Submerged Lands Where Borders Meet.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (UP)—Texas and Louisiana are engaged in a private feud over outer-continental shelf oil and gas leases which the Department of the Interior intends to ignore in forthcoming federal lease offers.

Up to now the disputes have related to areas claimed by the Federal Government and either Texas or Louisiana. Each state claimed seaward boundaries out to 10.5 miles or more, while the Federal Government claimed the state boundaries extended only three miles offshore.

The new inter-state controversy is: Where does the seaward boundary line between the two states lie? Does it go straight south into the Gulf of Mexico?

Up to President.

An Interior Department attorney said this problem must be settled eventually by the President. Texas claims the line should extend southeast into the gulf from the state's southeastern boundary. Louisiana wants the line to extend southwest into the gulf from its southwestern boundary.

This conflict leaves a sort of pie-wedge, claimed by both states, extending out into the gulf from the mouth of the Sabine river.

The department attorney said the Government probably will go ahead and offer leases for this area. But he said the leases would be offered in the area beyond the historic boundaries claimed by both states in order to prevent further conflict.

He explained the leases could be made beyond the state-claimed seaward boundaries and not cause any trouble.

Other Conflicts.

The administrative legislation set up by Congress in the Submerged Lands Act and the Outer-continental Shelf Lands Act has been a far from simple administrative matter for the Interior Department.

The dispute between Texas and Louisiana as to who gets what share of the Gulf of Mexico between their states is only one thing.

There still is no final Supreme Court decision on whether Louisiana's seaward boundary is three miles, as argued by the Federal Government, or 10.5 miles as claimed by the state.

As one Interior attorney put it, the Government has not even "tackled" Texas's claim with respect to its historic seaward boundary. Meanwhile this disputed area is not being offered for oil and gas leasing.

The department also said it has done some limited mapping off the coast of California, pending a Supreme Court decision on the physical location of the California coast line.

California claims certain coastal gulfs and bays as inland waters, but federal authorities insist they are open water.

Mr. Cantey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Brevard Cantey of Columbia, S.C., had his brother, John Boykin Cantey, as best man.

Half an hour after the ceremony additional guests arrived for a reception. Mrs. Taussig, who returned only a few days ago from New York, where she has lived with her daughter for several years, wore a chocolate tan taffeta suit with a full skirt, and a small black hat and black accessories.

Yellow roses decorated other rooms of the house. They were arranged on the dining room table and were held in silver containers on the mantel.

Mr. Cantey and his bride will fly to the Virgin Islands on their honeymoon. They will live in Brooklyn Heights, N.Y.

The bride, a former debutante and maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball, was graduated from Mary Institute and attended Washington University. She has studied vocal music extensively and has appeared on the concert stage and in grand opera.

A Cruise on Inland Waterways

One of the popular excursion craft plying the inland waterways of Miami Beach on sightseeing voyages is seen above approaching the entrance to Indian Creek at the far side of Pancoast Lake.

Holiday Festivities Mark Transatlantic Sailings

Christmas Excursions Planned for Eve of Holiday Season on Many Famous Ships.

A real travel "discovery" for vacationists planning to visit Europe during the gay Christmas-New Year holidays are the Christmas excursion sailings which have been scheduled by most major transatlantic steamship lines this autumn. According to the European Travel Commission, at least 17 such voyages have been announced with liners calling at principal ports from Ireland to Greece.

These festive sailings on the eve of the holiday season (most of them will take place during the first half of December) offer the transatlantic traveler much of the fun of a winter cruise while en route to Europe. There is no increase, however, in low "Thrift Season" fares.

Most of the excursion sailings are personally conducted, with a qualified representative of the steamship company on board to supervise the merry round of shipboard activities. There are holiday parties and carol singing, deck games and prize contests, new Hollywood flims, and even (on most vessels), a surprise visit by Santa Claus somewhere in midocean with gifts for the younger passengers. Lounges and dining rooms are gay with wreaths and Christmas trees. In addition, passenger liners of Norway and Sweden usually carry illuminated Christmas trees high atop their masts where they remain, sparking with light, throughout the holiday season.

In the culinary department, the chefs of transatlantic liners really come into their own during the Christmas excusion sailings. From their kitchens come all sorts of seasonal treats . . . savory roasts, spicy Christmas cakes, brandled puddings and many other dishes popular in the Old Country and in the States at holiday time.

All of the sailings are timed so that passengers may reach their destinations in Europe well before Christmas Eve celebrations begin. They can then remain abroad as long as they wish, taking advantage of Europe's superb ski resorts, opera, theater and other wintertime attractions. Return voyages can be made at any convenient time later in the New Year.

Full details on all special Christmas sailings may be secured from your travel agent, or from the offices of the steamship companies themselves. Here, however, are some of the principal ones scheduled to leave from the Port of New York during the months ahead.

Work has been started on the $2,600,000 Central Building for Principia on its 388-acre campus, north of Clayton road and east of Lasky road in St. Louis county.

The building will be the largest of nine, planned to house the Lower and Upper School departments, pre-school through high school. It is designed to combine the functions of six buildings and will contain all classrooms and laboratories for Lower and Upper Schools; the libraries of the Lower and Upper Schools; social hall; dining rooms for both day and boarding students; kitchen; school store and storage rooms.

The girls' gymnasium and a swimming pool which will be used by girls and boys, will be connected to the Central Building.

The structure, measuring 1200 feet in length, will be of modified contemporary style, designed to follow the contour of the ground. It will be one story on the north and two where the ground slopes to the south. Exterior finish will be of a special size, grey-pink colored brick. Extensive use will be made of glass construction. The roof will be topped with brown and green gravel.

The building is designed to serve the needs of boarding and day students and adult groups meeting on campus for various purposes. Large rooms have been planned for multiple use.

The girls' gymnasium will have tables and benches which can be rolled out from under bleacher seats for noon use. Kitchen and storage are adjacent to gymnasium for this purpose.

The swimming pool will have a curved copper roof and glass walls at the ends.

Other buildings planned for construction are a girls' dormitory, boys' dormitory, field house for boys, chapel-auditorium, headmaster's residence, multiple housing unit for the faculty and corporation yard and maintenance buildings.

The $150,000 Principia preschool building, dedicated Oct. 9, was the first completed unit in the $5,000,000 project.

Architects for the Central Building are the firm of Risley & Gould, Los Angeles, Calif. The Dickie Construction Co. of St. Louis has the general contract.

Jewelry Company Opens Branch in Hampton Village

A branch store has been opened by Kiefer's Jewelers and Opticians at 38 Hampton Village Plaza as part of an expansion program begun last year with the modernization and enlarging of the company's main store at 5204 Gravois avenue.

Two-level show windows were designed to display diamonds, watches, jewelry, silver, china and crystal. Pink Roman brick form the bulkheads contrasting the white and green terrazzo foyer floor, in which the outline of a faceted diamond is suggested.

Interior decor is in muted shades of pink, lilac and grey. Lighting includes the use of direct and indirect systems and features "celestial"-type brass chandeliers for decorative effect. Latest scientific equipment for optical service has been installed. "Behind-the-scenes" areas include provision for on-the-spot repair services.

Design and planning were done by Kiefer's, with technical assistance by Don C. Musick Jr., Walter Koester and George McClinton of the Musick Construction Co. Don C. Musick Construction Co. was general contractor for the owners of Hampton Village.

Formal Opening Of Subdivision To Be Held Today

Fischer & Frichtel, Inc., a family team of two brothers and a brother-in-law, are opening Barrett Brae, their seventh subdivision and 1200th house, with a ribbon-cutting ceremony in Kirkwood at 3 p.m., with St. Louis county officials and officers of the firm participating.

The new 56-acre development is at Barrett Station road, just north of Big Bend boulevard and west of the Greenbriar Country Club grounds. The architect is Edward Tillman.

Plans are for 110 houses of contemporary design with three bedrooms and two baths. Some of the homes will be of split-level construction. Exterior finish will be of brick and redwood.

The basic design is similar to the plan which recently was selected for photographic display at the new National Association of Home Builders' headquarters in Washington, D.C. Fifty-six homes were selected from 400 presented to the exhibit. The selection was based on "outstanding new design and quality construction ideas."

Lindbergh Tract Bought by Investor

A three-acre tract on the east side of Lindbergh boulevard, just south of Page boulevard, on the Rock Island right-of-way, has been purchased by Jewel Duke from Edgar H. W. Graeler.

The property, fronting 500 feet on Lindbergh and 400 on the right-of-way, was bought as a long-range investment with tentative plans for development of the light industrial site under long-term lease.

All parties to the transaction were represented by Duke-Young, Inc.

Newsmen Make Tour of 'Bank Town'

Latest trends in bank modernization were observed firsthand by editors and staff representatives of some of the country's financial and news publications at a unique "Bank Town, U.S.A." press conference in St. Louis, Oct. 20 and 21. The meeting was sponsored by Bank Building and Equipment Corporation of America, currently engaged in 35 projects here in its headquarters city.

Extensive inspection tours and executive interviews were afforded at First National Bank in St. Louis, where "business as usual" is carried on in the midst of a multi-million dollar rehabilitation program; American Investment Co. in Clayton, an unusual, ultra-modern office building of inverted pyramid design, recently completed at an estimated cost of $1,500,000; and Manchester Bank, with provision for 11 drive-up windows featuring its half-million-dollar remodeling and expansion program.

Other financial sites visited were Jefferson Bank and Trust Co., a new edifice under construction; Farm and Home Savings and Loan Association, whose drastically renovated Victorian-style building is a downtown showplace; and Roosevelt Federal Savings and Loan, planning further expansion to accommodate business increase which followed recent modernization.

Among Bank Building Corporation's other architectural, contracting, decorating or furnishing assignments within a few square miles of its home office are American National Bank of St. Louis, Columbia Federal Savings and Loan, Hampton Bank, Jefferson Savings and Loan Association, Manufacturers Bank, Mercantile Trust Company, Chippewa Trust Company, Bank of St. Louis, Mound City Bank, St. Louis Union Trust Company, Southside National Bank, Southwest Bank of St. Louis, Tower Grove Bank and Trust Company, Brentwood Bank, Greater Belleville, Ill., Savings and Loan, St. Louis County National Bank, Chesterfield Bank, Kirkwood

Roy Wenzlick to Discuss Real Estate Economy At National Realty Meet

The outlook for real estate prices, mortgage funds, and interest rates will be projected at the forty-eighth convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards in New York City, Nov. 6-10.

This annual meeting of the largest trade association in the real estate field is expected to attract 5000 persons from all parts of the country.

Some of the fundamentals of real estate economy will be presented by two leading economists and analysts, James C. Downs Jr., Chicago, author and president of a research organization, and Roy Wenzlick, St. Louis, editor and publisher of market analyses.

Both will give their appraisals of the state of real estate at a session of N.A.R.E.B.'s Society of Real Estate Counselors.

Besides discussions by industry and Government leaders on all phases of real estate, N.A.R.E.B. will adopt its policy statement for 1956 and elect new officers.

Wenzlick

Latest developments in N.A.R.E.B.'s Build America Better program, industry core of the bold new concept of urban renewal being advanced by the Federal Government, will be discussed, and new efforts planned. Philip LaFollette, former Governor of Wisconsin, will be one of the top speakers on this subject.

The reviving interest in cooperative housing will be emphasized at a session on "Cooperatives—Their Organization and Operating Practices." Among the points to be considered will be the recent changes in Section 213 of the federal law governing the Federal Housing Administration insurance of co-op mortgages. Participating in this will be C. Franklin Daniels, FHA co-operative housing adviser.

Another interesting meeting, covering the prospects for the mortgage market, will feature as speakers J. Stanley Baughman, president of the Federal National Mortgage Association; Arthur W. Viner, executive secretary for the Voluntary Home Mortgage Credit Program; Miles Colean, Washington, D.C., housing consultant and economist; and Arthur J. Bassett, vice president of the Detroit Trust Co.

"The Outlook for Long-Term Interest Rates" will be the subject of an address by Roy L. Reierson, vice-president of the Bankers Trust Company, New York, at another session.

Other speakers for the convention include Representative Bruce R. Alger (Rep.), Texas; Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, former Army Chief of Staff; John Jay Hopkins, president of the General Dynamics Corporation and winner of the Industrialist of the Year Award; A. Boyd Campbell, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; Horace Julliard, Geneva, Switzerland, president of the International Real Estate Federation; Clarence J. Myers, president of the New York Life Insurance Company; and Patrick B. McGinnis, president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad.

Affiliated institutes and councils of N.A.R.E.B. also will conduct their annual meetings in conjunction with the convention, and most of them will elect 1956 officers.

Jobbers Lease

The Maas & Steffan Co., fur jobbers, headed by Edwin C. Steffan, has leased the five-story and basement property at 800-806 Spruce street from the Washington University Corporation for warehousing and finishing of furs. The building has 17,820 square feet of space, sprinkler protection, commercial steam heat, is served by a Terminal Railroad switch. The company was forced to move from 1504 Pine by the new Plaza development.

Building Plan Approved for Young Israel

The design and site plan for the proposed new Educational and Religious Center for Young Israel of St. Louis have been approved by the City Planning Commission and the City Council of University City, and plans are under way by the architect, Adolph H. Felder, for construction of the initial phase of the project by next fall.

The building is to be erected at the southwest corner of Mt. Olive and Groby road. It will front on Groby road, with access to a parking lot from Mt. Olive and Groby.

The completed development will include an educational wing composed of classrooms, offices, a small chapel and related facilities, and a religious wing composed of a Synagogue and assembly hall.

There will be provisions for youth activities as well as daily and Sunday Hebrew schools. Facilities will be provided for adult Hebrew culture groups as well as for youth groups ranging from juniors to the collegiate level.

Plans include a kitchen and food serving facilities. The building, of fireproof construction, will be air-conditioned and will be designed for the best obtainable acoustics.

Young Israel of St. Louis is the local branch of the National Council of Young Israel, with headquarters in New York, which consists of more than seventy synagogue branches throughout the United States and Canada, as well as branches in Israel. The newest branch was recently organized in Rotterdam, Holland.

The first Young Israel Synagogue was established in 1912 in the lower East Side of New York City. It was the aim of the founders to create a social environment in which a synthesis between traditional Judaism and the American way of life could be worked out.

In 1924 the various branches formed the "Council of Young Israel and Young Israel Synagogue Organizations" which was to become in 1945 the National Council of Young Israel. The

Good Plan Is Needed For Plants

By ELEANOR B. McCLURE
Post-Dispatch Garden Writer.

A disappointing garden usually represents a double loss—loss of the original investment in plants that must be replaced and loss of valuable years of growing time. It is disheartening to have to uproot sizable trees and shrubs and start all over again with smaller plants.

Some of those disappointments can often be prevented by more careful buying and thoughtful planning. Many home owners have the mistaken idea that it is quite easy to create a garden by putting an attractive plant here and another one there and filling the space between them with whatever happens to be handy. As a matter of fact, it is far more difficult to design a satisfactory planting than it is to select suitable furnishings for a room in a house.

When buying a piece of furniture we usually ask, "Is it useful or decorative? Is it in harmony with the other furniture and the design of the room? Is it durable?" And similarly, in choosing a tree or shrub for the garden, we might ask, "Is it useful or decorative? Will it harmonize with other plants in the garden? Is it in keeping with the architecture of the house? Is it hardy?"

Unfortunately, though, in dealing with plants there are other considerations. We must also be reasonably sure that the tree or shrub will grow happily in the spot alloted to it. We ought to know how it is going to look in winter. Most important of all, we should know its growing habits, so as to be able to visualize its dimensions, width, depth and height as it approaches maturity.

When we acquire a green carpet for the living room, we have reasonable assurance that it will remain green for all 12 months of the year. And when we buy a small coffee table, we know that it is not going to grow until it is bigger than a grand piano. We have no such assurance when we invest in a plant. This variable factor adds zest to our gardening, and sometimes adds difficulties, too.

Happily these difficulties can be minimized if the gardener is willing to spend a few hours with paper and pencil and make an adequate planting plant. A good plan, drawn to scale, is an invaluable aid in locating trees, shrubs and flower beds. Furthermore, it lessens the temptation to over-buy, and hence to over-plant.

The first step in designing the garden is to make a map of the grounds that will show the house, walks, drives, existing trees and other features that are to be retained. This task can be greatly simplified if one person takes the measurements and another records them on the chart. A large sheet of corrugated board is excellent for the purpose, as it makes a fairly good writing surface and is light enough to be handled with ease.

The garden quite properly begins with the house. When planning a back yard garden, for example, we would start first of all with the line—and it'st usally a straight line, thank goodness!—representing the back of the house. A scale of one-fourth inch to one foot is usually satisfactory, unless the area is quite large, in which event a one-eighth-inch scale might be better. From the base line representing the back wall of the house it is not too hard to project lines of boundaries, walks and drive.

The two corners of the house may be used in pinpointing the location of certain trees and shrubs. By measuring carefully from these two known points to a tree, for example, it is easy to mark the site of the tree at the point where the two lines intersect.

After the existing features have been entered on the map, the proposed new plantings and other changes may be added and drawn to scale. First of all, there will probably be a terrace or some other level area to make the transition from the house to the garden. This is the logical place for an outdoor living room, which is naturally much more convenient when placed close to the house. Its size and shape will depend on such factors as architecture of the house, variations in grade, and the budget of time (and money) that can be devoted to the project.

Obviously a spacious terrace is more usable than one that is narrow or cramped. Sometimes it is possible to include a nearby shade tree in the terrace plan. If space permits, there may also be flower beds, for there is a definite trend nowadays toward "terrace gardens."

Beyond the terrace there probably will be a lawn area, enclosed either by a fence or by a screen planting of shrubs and trees. Such enclosures have a double function, affording privacy and at the same time forming an attractive background for various garden features. Indeed, the background itself may be quite decorative—and this is particularly important in the limited space of the city garden.

When the sitting area, lawn and boundaries have been mapped out, other plantings and additional features may be drawn to scape. In keeping with the modern idea that the garden is not merely to be

Glamorized Roof Sweep Adds Economy to Design Of 'The House of the Week'

By DAVID G. BAREUTHER

There's a new look to the split level house—and a new way to build it.

The roof is pitched to cover all levels of the house in a streamlined sweep from a single gable. This gives the living room a high studio ceiling.

All rooms are arranged to fit a perfect rectangular plan—the most economical form of construction. By eliminating costly roof valleys and jogs in the outer walls, further economy is achieved and the way is opened for glamor.

White marble chips cover the roof, adding insulation by their reflection of heat rays. Vertical redwood planks and flush plywood siding of Philippine mahogany provide a distinctive facing. Sliding windows add horizontal accents.

The result is a unified split-level design far removed from the customary hybrid of a one-story wing hooked to a two-story house. Long, smartly modern lines are combined with the rustic air of a farmhouse to blend this dwelling with any countryside.

The split-level house has become one of the most popular styles of modern dwellings. There are various reasons.

1. It provides more house for your money — extra rooms and garage being incorporated under a comparatively small roof area.

2. It combines many of the features of the so-called ranch house with the established advantages of a two-story home—living rooms can be spacious and open, while bedrooms are removed above the street level.

3. It is more economical to build than a one-story house, requiring less excavation and foundation work for the amount of floor space provided. This is a feature not often exploited to its utmost in the design of split-level homes.

The house of the week, Design T-57 by Samuel Paul, A.I.A., shown on this page, features a number of new economies in the construction of a split-level house. It includes nine rooms, two bathrooms, extra lavatory, built-in garage, yet this house covers only 1379 square feet—the usual area of a much smaller house without garage.

Although there are three distinct levels, there is not a full flight of stairs in the house. Bedrooms and bathrooms are removed half a flight above the living room-dining room-kitchen level. A spacious playroom, a laundry, extra lavatory and garage are half a flight down from the living room and kitchen.

The playroom, laundry and garage are located under the bedroom part of the house. A cellar is optional. The heating plant can be readily accommodated in a crawl space, or a large cellar can be created.

Hidden economy is achieved in careful planning for plumbing lines. Bathrooms and kitchen adjoin. Directly below the bathrooms are the laundry and extra lavatory. This saves the needless running of pipes and drains to remote parts of the house.

The placing of the utility room under a front corner of the living room permits the heating unit to use a flue in the same chimney that serves the fireplace. This chimney can be readily enlarged to accommodate a third flue if an outdoor barbecue fireplace is desired on the terrace.

The terrace, shown on the plan but not on the sketch, is hidden by a blind redwood wall continuing the sweeping roof line. The architect suggests a quarry tile pavement for the terrace.

This house is planned for easy living. Open planning of living room, dining room and kitchen calls for only one small screen-like partition. Light from the large window wall in the front of the living room streams in to meet light from a spacious picture window in the dining room. A door to the terrace adds more light. Merely a snack bar or row of cabinets is needed to separate dining room from kitchen.

A corner sink in the kitchen is located midway between refrigerator and range in the most efficient arrangement. The kitchen is ample enough for a breakfast table and four chairs.

A study with a folding partition makes this house flexible for three or four-bedroom use.

Growing children, gardening hobbies and sports are envisaged in this plan by an outside entrance from the rear terrace to the playroom, where a lavatory is adjacent. This makes the laundry useful as the proverbial mud room of a farmhouse—a place to slick up before going upstairs.

In rainy weather the car is driven into the built-in garage and the house is entered through the playroom.

Although split-level houses had their origin on hillsides, this House of the Week is designed for a minimum of grading with the land sloping away from the house in all directions.

Construction specifications for this house include many practical suggestions. The architect recommends a poured-concrete foundation throughout, except in areas of superior drainage where concrete block masonry will suffice.

Insulation of the mineral wool type is favored under the roof. Although reflective aluminum foil insulation of the accordian type would prove efficient here, it is probable that wool batts or blankets would be used in the sidewalls and could be continued expediently under the roof.

However, a vented space between insulation and roof boards is specified, with louver openings under the eaves. These vent superheated air.

Either hot water or circulating warm air heat would be acceptable. In the case of hot water heat, a radiant coil embedded in the den floor is suggested, since this floor will be on unexcavated ground. If warm air heat is preferred, perimeter heating of the den is recommended. This involves ducts and registers around the four walls.

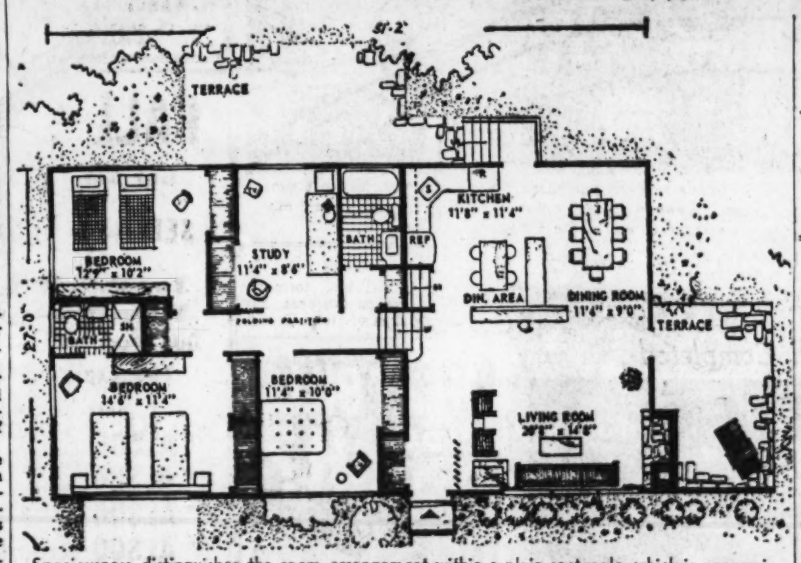
Garage ceiling under the bedroom part of the house is insulated the same as the roof. The wall between garage and den also is insulated.

With sound construction, the House of the Week should defy obsolescence for years to come — its simplicity of design is freed from passing fads.

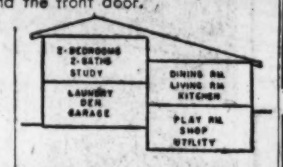
A study plan for this home (T-57) may be had for 35c by addressing the BUILDING EDITOR of the ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH, ROOM 602, 1111 OLIVE ST., ST. LOUIS (1), MO. You can take this study plan to your mortgage lender or builder to get rough estimates of construction costs, after which working blueprints and specification sheets may be had direct from the architect if you decide to use the plan for your home.

A New Look for the Split-Level Plan

Smart, modern and homey, this four-level house features a front of vertical redwood siding with flush Philippine mahogany plywood around the front door.



Spaciousness distinguishes the room arrangement within a plain rectangle, which is economical to build. The design is by Samuel Paul, A.I.A.



How this split-level house fits together, each part being half a flight removed from the other.

Signs Long-Term Lease of Space at 3524 Washington

The Maytag Co. of Newton, Ia., manufacturers of home laundry equipment, gas ranges and freezers, has taken a long-term lease of the first floor at 3524 Washington avenue for a display room and district sales office.

Extensive alterations will be made to the building before Maytag takes occupancy, according to J. W. Sargent, regional manager. At present the company is at 917 South Grand.

Seidel Coal and Coke Co. owns the building and is remodeling the second floor for use as its general executive offices. The coal and coke company had maintained headquarters in the next-door building, which recently was sold to the St. Louis Baptist Mission Board.

The Dubinsky Realty Co. negotiated the lease for all parties.

Expansion Is Started for Methodists

New construction and modernization of existing facilities is under way at the University Methodist Church, 6901 Washington avenue in University City, it was announced last week by the Rev. Jesse E. Thomas, minister.

Vollmar Bros. Construction Co. holds the $175,000 general contract for the addition of a two-story and basement educational wing and other improvements.

The new wing, which will square off the northwest corner of the building, will add approximately 7500 square feet of floor space to the church when it is completed early next Spring. It will make available two study rooms, a choir room, three nursery rooms, a kitchen, two kindergarten rooms and a college class room.

An entrance vestibule, being constructed on the northeast corner of the building, will house a stairway connecting all three floors. The existing stairway will be removed to add more room to present educational facilities. Much of the old facing material, such as the stone in copings, lintels and sills, will be used on the vestibule, to tie in the architecture of the new corner with that of the remainder of the front elevation.

Since economy of construction is almost as important a factor as durability and permanence, light-colored brick will be used on the educational wing. This will blend with the existing stone structure, rather than match it perfectly, and save substantially on construction costs without sacrificing strength.

A narrow, winding stair, along the old west wall, is being removed. The resulting space will serve as corridors into the new educational wing. A new stair will be erected along the west wall of the wing.

Much of the general contract will be used to modernize present church areas. Minor alterations are necessary in the furnace room to accommodate additional heating requirements. On the first floor, Vollmar Bros. is partitioning a 15- by 40-foot area out of a large single class room, to be converted into the church office and pastor study. The latter will involve extensive millwork for built-in cabinets, bookshelves and files.

The main ladies rest room will be relocated into part of the area now occupied by the study and church office, with the remainder being converted to a general purpose area. An unused room, now functioning as the construction office, will become a sanctuary storage area, with plumbing and built-in cabinets.

Second floor improvements will include the installation of a kitchen, with new skylights and exhaust fans.

The Rev. J. E. Thomas, minister since 1951, reports that all church activity is continuing uninterrupted as construction progresses.

P. John Hoerner & Associates were retained as architects for the modernization program.

Bag Concern In Rebuilt Quarters

Reconstruction and modernization of a building destroyed by fire in July 1954 have been completed for the National Bag Co. at 914-18 North First street. The firm continued in business in part of the structure throughout the rebuilding.

The building, which contains approximately 12,000 square feet of floor space, is of one-story brick and cement construction with a stucco front. Offices are air-conditioned.

The company, which deals in burlap, cotton and paper bags and allied products, has occupied the site for 36 years. Plans are for future expansion on property, also owned by the firm, south of its quarters.

Joe Spiegelglass & Son were the general contractors.

BUTTERCUP'S RELATIVE

Good Summer-to-Fall Filler Flower Is Spider

A good summer-to-fall "filler" for the flower bed is an attractive annual, the spider flower, or Cleome spinosa, which grows to a height of four or five feet and produces showy blooms in pink or white. It is easy to grow and, once established, it self-sows abundantly.

Designed by Bernard McMahon, architect, the store has been opened on two sides with 14-foot plate glass panels set in gold anodized aluminum mullions. The entire interior is done in red oak paneling accented with ornamental iron. An innovation is the dropped lighting over the cases and the rolling displays in the windows which can be interchanged.

Good Plan

looked at but is to be lived in, provision should be made for hobbies and recreation. There should be a play area for small children, as well as game courts for adolscents and adults. A sunny plot with space for a work center should be set aside for the hobby gardener who collects roses, irises or dahlias.

Finally, don't forget the flower arranger! There's nothing like a productive cutting garden, and if you find space for it on your plan, the chances are that you'll have a cutting garden when the plan materializes.

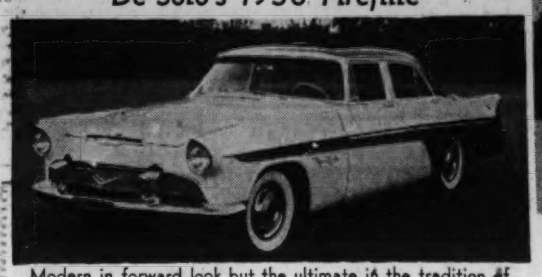
De Soto's 1956 Fireflite



Modern in forward look but the ultimate in the tradition of elegance is the new 1956 De Soto Fireflite four-door sedan shown here. Highlights include all-new front and rear ends, lush color-keyed interiors in brocades, damasks, leather, faille and other decorator materials. New perforated mesh grille with built-in parking lights and a turreted, three-tiered taillight asembly are among some of the changes in design and engineering.

Packard Adds Hardtop to '56 Line

This Packard Caribbean hardtop features long, graceful lines and distinctive three-tone exterior coloring. All Packard Caribbean models are powered by a 374-cubic inch displacement V-8 engine with 310 h.p. The torque rating, 405 foot pounds at 2,800 rpm, is said to be the highest in history for an American automobile. Packard points out that it is torque, not horsepower, which creates tractive force for the rear wheels of the car for alert get-aways from standing starts and safe passing ability on highways.

1956 Plymouth Belvedere

Belvedere four-door sedan is one of 15 attractive models in Plymouth's 1956 line of cars. Aerodynamic styling, push button driving and powerful new Hy-Fire 277 engine are among outstanding features. Safety door latches and other safe driving items are standard equipment.

Variety Chain Opens New Store

The new store contains 25,000 sq. ft. and is a Junior Department store operation. It is air-conditioned and fronts approximately 100 feet on Forsyth.

The lease is for 20 years and the store is the newest addition to the Neisner chain.

The Neisner lease and construction of the building were negotiated by the Glick Real Estate Co.

Auto Buying Habits Show Big Change

DETROIT (UP)—The change in buying habits of American motorists has been almost as big a surprise this year as the record number of cars being sold.

At one time the biggest selling models were the lowest-priced, stripped-down cars.

But throughout the 1955 model year, motorists were ignoring the cheapest buys. They were snapping up the more-expensive lines even though they bought cars in the low-priced field.

In addition, the public was tacking on to the price the luxury items like power steering, power brakes and automatic transmissions and were buying the top power packages.

At times during the year, the demand for the best has caught the automobile industry stocked with not enough of the higher-priced models and higher-priced accessories.

This trend in buying perhaps has been overlooked by many persons in their questioning whether the automobile boom was a solid one or was being built too much by selling pressures and easy credit.

More Luxury Buying.

The automobile industry itself is adjusting its aim toward this upswing in luxury-buying. The industry has found the public isn't satisfied merely with a new car anymore, but also wants the special types of cars, such as station wagons, hard-top convertibles.

Pontiac, for example, which devoted a third of its production this year to hard-top styles, is scheduling them for two-thirds of its 1956 production run.

Station wagons similarly are being boosted by the auto makers in their 1956 production schedules.

The cheapest lines of cars, stripped-down without all the fancy chrome, just aren't attracting buyers.

Few Business Coupes.

For example, two-door sedans and business coupes which at one time attracted 53 percent of all car buyers, aren't even being sold to a third of car buyers now and business coupes are becoming all but extinct, according to a survey by the Ward's Automotive Reports.

But even the people still buying the cheaper two-door sedan lines are showing the luxury trend in their buying, Ward's found.

Of the 675,470 two-door sedans sold by four producers surveyed by Ward's, only 113,017 were the standard cars, the stripped-down versions without fancy trim. The rest bought de luxe and super-de luxe models.

This change in buying habits is one of the biggest surprises of the automobile boom, indicating the public not only is eager for new cars but also for something pretty fancy.

Leases Warehouse

The Parts Warehouse Co., headed by Russell W. Nixon, has leased the one-story building of 7200 square feet at 3318-20 Washington avenue from Mayme Miller of Poplar Bluff, Mo., for use as a distributing branch for several nationally known brands of automotive parts and accessories. The build- has just been vacated by the General Tire Co., which has completed a new building at Grand boulevard and Bell avenue.

Missourian Wins $2500 in National Firestone Contest

Mrs. John L. Batten Sr., Naylor, Mo., is winner of $2500 in a nation-wide $100,000 contest sponsored by the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., according to C. L. Friddle, Firestone sales manager for the St. Louis district.

The contest was conducted through Firestone dealers and stores during the summer. Last Monday night, on the "Voice of Firestone" coast-to-coast simulcast, it was announced that the prize winners had been selected. The merchandising staff of the Reuben H. Donnelly Corp. in Chicago determined the winners.

As winner of sixth place, Mrs. Batten was eligible to receive an automobile or her choice of the company's check for $2500. Mrs. Batten filed her entry at the Don Hutchinson Service Station, the Firestone dealer in Naylor. She is the mother of two children, Mary Elizabeth, 11, and John L. Jr., 10. Mr. Batten is a farmer at Naylor.

TALK ABOUT COVERING TERRITORY . . .

you'll look a long way before you'll find a better salesman than a POST-DISPATCH WANT AD

Yes, indeed, gentlemen, the want ad is tailor-made for you. Small voice of the mighty press, its influence ends only where newspapers are unknown.

And why is the want ad made especially for you? It's because some persons think that advertising is for stores and businesses alone, and aren't aware that the man on the street has an advertising medium all his own.

Just think, for less than a dollar a day you can be in business. Where can you hire a salesman who will reach so many persons, and do a selling job for you for as little as 94c* a day?

That's penetrating the remote corners for a mighty small sum, that's working for your benefit, that's fine combing the multitude for a buyer.

Try it! The want ad has worked for millions and there's no job too big or too small, no mission so meager that it won't get to work for you now. Just name it and place your want ad now!

New Subdivision On East Side Opens

Ridgewood, a 200-acre subdivision with 450 lots, has been opened by the O'Brien Development Co., Inc., in Caseyville township, just north of U.S. Highway 50 and approximately six miles east of East St. Louis, Ill. Access to the development is from Highway 50 to Bunkum road to Circle drive.

Streets are to be curvilinear with curbs and gutters. The tract, some parts of which are heavily wooded, is divided by natural barriers which will be utilized to form various price range areas, each with its own name.

A display house has been opened in a section currently used for lower priced homes. An area for higher bracket homes is being developed according to plans of the Architectural Control Committee of the O'Brien company.

WIDELY PLANTED

Thomas Jefferson was so enamored of the plant, Scotch Broom, that whenever he traveled in Virginia he scattered its seeds. The plant, technically called Cystisus, is now widely planted in this country, according to the American Association of Nurserymen, from Virginia to Massachusetts and on the West Coast. It has sweet-pea-like yellow or white flowers in clusters.

FHA Sets New Landscaping Requirements

By ROBERT F. MORISON

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UP)—The Federal Housing Administration is setting up minimum requirements for builders who landscape new homes financed with FHA-insured mortgages.

At present, FHA has certain general rules but complaints about poor quality sod and lack of attention to drainage prompted the formation of an industry committee to work out firmer basic recommendations to be adopted as requirements for loan approval.

Problems of drainage, lawns, landscaping, driveways, sidewalks and steps are included.

FHA Commissioner Norman P. Mason explained that "when allowance is made in insured mortgages for lawn and planting it is important that FHA establish standards by which to measure the quality of materials and workmanship."

An FHA official said that any requirements adopted will be aimed at eliminating "misunderstandings" arising from the rather vague, general standards now prevailing.

Greater Protection.

Any new regulations are not expected to upset builders' plans. They would offer greater protection to buyers who finance their home purchases with FHA-insured mortgages and whose sales contracts include landscaping.

Present requirements "must be interpreted by individual builders," an official explained, leaving to their discretion the type of materials and the quality of workmanship.

Further, FHA hopes to eliminate leaky basements by requiring all builders of FHA-insured homes to submit for prior approval the elevation of the first floor in relation to the street level.

This move is now required only in cases where builders think some difficulty may develop.

Difficulties have arisen when the ordinary, non-submitted case develops a wet basement, or poor drainage in general, because grading was not properly planned and carried out.

Problems arising from driveways, walks and steps have arisen because they were too wide, too narrow, or too steep, or built with too much curvature.

Good Quality A Must.

FHA made it clear it won't lay down hard and fast requirements regarding the use of a particular sod or shrub but will permit local supply conditions to prevail. However, it was stressed that FHA will insist on use of good quality materials.

Building industry officials say more attention is given now than in previous years to grading for the best drainage and to the laying of good sod lawns.

Landscaping, one official said, is a "fairly important factor in selling a house." And, in today's highly competitive home building market, any good selling point is vital, he added.

If a builder does a good job in landscaping in the first place, he explained, it helps achieve a "better community relationship," or harmony, in the residential area.

FHA officials expect the staff study to be finished by mid-November. The agency will, if it is thought necessary, incorporate into FHA regulations whatever recommendations it considers useful.

Three St. Louisans Elected at Savings And Loan Meeting

The forty-sixth annual meeting of the Missouri Savings and Loan League in Springfield, Mo., elected Earl Edwards, of the Macon Building & Loan Association, president for the coming year, T. Victor Jeffries, executive manager of the League, reports.

Joseph Urban of Cass Federal Savings & Loan Association of St. Louis was elected vice president and Sheldon H. Stock of Unity Savings & Loan Association, St. Louis, was re-elected treasurer. Andy Kuenneke of the Jefferson Savings & Loan Association of St. Louis was elected chairman of the board.

The new board of directors voted to have the 1956 convention in Kansas City, Mo., in September.

A. D. Theobald of Peoria, Ill., stated at the convention that the Savings and Loan industry made 40 per cent of the home loans last year, and that the national average of home owners is at an all time high.

Renews Lease

The Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. has renewed its lease of 8000 square feet of warehouse space onthe second floor at 3960 Duncan avenue, Griffith and Groves Real Estate Co., leasing agent, reports. The lessor is the R. A. Dubuque Supply Co., which occupies the remaining 45,000 square feet in the fireproof building, which formerly was the Jack Daniels distillery.

General solicitation in the 1955 Boy Scout finance campaign to obtain $30,000 will begin tomorrow and continue through Wednesday in 52 communities where Scouting is not supported by a Community Chest or United Fund.

Units in the 52 areas are under jurisdiction of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council and are in 11 eastern Missouri counties near St. Louis.

Campaign goal of $30,000 was set by estimating it will cost $10.50 for each member in the coming fiscal year and multiplying the total outlying membership by the estimated per capita cost, a Scout official said.

Sale of tickets for the 1955 Boy Scout Circus will be continued until the event closes a three-day engagement beginning Nov. 17 at the Arena. The circus, "Scouting is Fun," will be presented in three nightly performances at 7:30 o'clock.

Price of general admission tickets is 75 cents. Box seats will be available at the Arena ticket office on performance nights. There will be no reserved seats.

Eagle Scouts of the council, who reside in the Third Congressional District, may obtain information about attending United States Military academies from United States Representative Leonor K. Sullivan, (Dem. Mo.).

Mrs. Sullivan has announced several appointments will be available to the Army, Navy and Air Force academies. Candidates are required to be residents of the Third Congressional District and be 17 to 22 years old. They also must be high school graduates. Mrs. Sullivan's telephone number is MAin 1-8100, Extension 500.

An overnight encampment for Explorer Scouts of Midland District will be held next Friday at Beaumont Scout Reservation, U.S. Highway 66 and Antire road, St. Louis county. Activities, which will include a six-mile hike, will begin at 7 a.m. Friday.

Unit reservations can be obtained from Milton Weaver, district executive, at 505 Chemical building, the council office.

Council Grove District will hold election of officers for next year at a meeting at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the offices of the Stock & Son Realty Co., 5001 Bircher boulevard.

Election of officers for Ozark Trails District will be at 7:45 p.m. Thursday at the Centenary Methodist Church in Bonne Terre, Mo.

Regular monthly meeting of the council's executive board will be at 12:15 p.m. Tuesday at the Noonday Club, 319 North Fourth street.

Eagle rank, Scouting's highest advancement honor, will be given to Jerry McKee, a member of Scout Troop 85, in a ceremony at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Sutton School, 3431 Cambridge avenue, Maplewood.

Eagle badges were awarded six scouts in ceremonies held last week. They included Thomas Conrads, William Smith III, Robert Kaemmerlen, Richard Weber, Thomas Barnes and Frederick C. Gain.

ROSE FRANKEN

I'll always remember...

THE HUNCH THAT PAID OFF

by Rose Franken

NOVELIST, magazine writer and playwright Rose Franken, best known for her "Claudia" stories, has just had her latest novel, Intimate Story, published by Doubleday & Co.

Most people scoff at following hunches. So did I — before I realized that no matter how idiotic it seemed at the time, blind obedience to an impulse has often worked out to be right. I can't say that I have had a perfect score, but for the most part it really has.

There was one day in February, 1942, that I shall never forget because it was the time that I acted most like a complete idiot in following a hunch.

The day began with a light fall of snow near Old Lyme, Conn., where my husband, Bill, and I were running our 1,000-acre farm in between writing stories. Over breakfast, we listened to the radio interspersing music with post-Pearl Harbor news and warnings to motorists to avoid driving in the blizzard that was blanketing New England.

There was nothing immediate to worry about. Bill was driving over to the state university at Storrs to get some farming advice, and later in the day we expected my oldest son, Paul, to drive down from Quincy, Mass., where he was stationed as an Army lieutenant after having enlisted upon graduation from college.

I am a worrier, so I was a little hesitant about letting Bill drive to Storrs; but he laughed at me and went to get into his heavy clothes. "I'm worried about Paul," I called to him. Bill came clumping in in his heavy boots. "If you have nothing better to do than worry, go ahead," he said. "Paul knows how to take care of himself." With that, he went outside to get his car from the garage.

Then Came an Impulse

I looked out. The wind was whipping the snow into small drifts across the road and in the corners of the barnyard. The phone rang. It was Paul. "Don't worry, Mother," his voice came over the wire. "I'll leave about 4:00 this afternoon and be down tonight." But as I put the phone down, an overpowering impulse to drive up to Paul — over 100 miles away — came over me.

Bill came in to kiss me goodbye. "I won't be here when you get back," I heard myself saying. "You'll find something for your lunch. I'm going to Quincy." Bill blinked. "Why?" he asked incredulously. Then he called me all sorts of a lunatic. "I ought to divorce anybody as crazy as you," he said. "Those hunches! Well, I know I can't stop you and I can't let you go alone. Come on."

We drove through one of the worst storms I have ever seen in my life, with the snow so thick that at times it blotted out the road. "Why am I doing this?" I asked Bill. "Because you're a loon," he snapped. It was pitch black and we were half frozen when we got to Quincy. A soldier went to find Paul.

Paul came from his quarters. "What are you doing here?" he yelled. "I told you I'd be down. I was just getting ready to leave!" Bill pointed to me: "Your Mother . . ."

We started to talk. Then a soldier handed Paul a message. He said shortly, "We're alerted. Leaves are canceled."

We spent 15 minutes with him and drove back alone. Bill didn't talk. "I wish I were as crazy as you," he finally said as we reached home. "It takes a lot of courage."

We didn't see Paul again for five years. A few days later, he shipped out — one of the first sent to New Guinea. ■

ANYTHING COMES!

If nobody else wants it, this man gets it—usually, that is

by DICK EMMONS

Possibly you don't know the proverb, He who accepts graciously will be given much. I happen to know it because I just made it up. I am dedicating it to my wife, Helen, a girl who is in personal competition with the city dump.

The other night I came home from the office in my usual state of exhaustion, reached out to the girl for her sympathetic kiss and tripped over an unseen object.

"What's this?" I asked with forced interest, picking myself up.

"That? Why, a pedestal for a birdbath, of course," Helen said cheerily. "Nancy Frohm was going to throw it away, but then at the last minute she asked if we could use it."

"Use it!" I said. "Boy, oh, boy! We've been desperate for a birdbath pedestal around here for years!"

"That's what I thought," Helen nodded solemnly. "Remember the time the Denningers gave me the lid to their trash can because Fred ran over the can and they were going to buy a new one? Well, there you have the birdbath. Just solder it to the pedestal and the birds will never know the difference."

"Well, maybe some of the brighter birds . . ." I let my voice trail off, wondering idly where Helen's willing acceptance of discarded items would lead us.

The very next day it led me downtown in an attempt to buy a bookend to match one given her by Amy Fitzgerald. When I got home, I was in no mood for pleasantries.

"Find it?" Helen asked pleasantly.

"Find it?" I snarled. "It's a common style. But I learned something that may interest you. You can't buy one bookend. You have to pay for two. You can eat the second one or hide it in the attic or throw it away, but you still pay for two!"

"Three bookends are better than one," Helen said softly. "Someday somebody will give me the fourth."

I groaned. "What I'm trying to say is that you've got to stop accepting these things. No civilized home has to put up with three matching bookends!"

"Yes, dear," Helen said.

In the days that followed I began to hope that my brief lecture had struck its mark. Only the old, tired objects greeted me each night as I straggled in.

"I haven't seen any new, tired objects around lately," I remarked just last Friday. "Dare I assume that this condition is permanent? Or have our friends stopped offering us their castoffs?"

"Well —" Helen eyed me with what I took to be doubt. "You do want me to turn them down, don't you?"

"Absolutely," I said, "Always. On every occasion. If they don't want it, it's not good enough for us."

A Lesson Well Learned

Helen brightened. "Thank goodness. Those were the very words I said to Janice this morning when she came over to ask if you'd be interested in buying Phil's golf clubs for some ridiculous price like $25. He's giving the game up."

"Phil's matched irons," I breathed, "and the set of woods he bought last spring. Was that what you let slip through your pretty fingers?"

"I guess so," Helen yawned. "Anyway, Janice called later and told me she'd gotten a lot more money from somebody else."

I shook my head, dazed at the unreliability of women. Then I sat down stiffly, staring vacantly into space. Like a bookend. ■

I TRAVELED 16,000 MILES IN AFRICA

Here's how an American college graduate, with a minimum of cash and a clever idea,

THE AUTHOR, a 28-year-old New Yorker, wound up his career at Cornell University with a Master of Science degree, practically no cash and an irresistible desire to see the world. He "promoted" enough money to get across the Atlantic and back, then lit out for Africa via France and the Mediterranean. Now back in America, he currently is doing graduate work at the University of Michigan.

by MURRAY MELBIN

On November 24, 1953, I landed in Oran with my 70-pound rucksack on my back. I started south into Africa on a trail that led haphazardly across mountains and deserts, jungles and savannas, rivers and swamps. The map at right shows my route through 24 countries.

I traveled by camel, airplane, mule, bicycle, car, truck, ocean steamer, riverboat, dugout canoe, motorcycle and railroad — plus 600 miles on foot, wearing out two pairs of shoes in the process. I met Tuareg desert tribesmen, witch doctors, Mau Mau, pygmies, cliff dwellers and saucer-lipped native women. Sometimes I fasted for days, sometimes I feasted on land snails, monkey meat and crocodile steaks.

One year after I left Oran, I wound up in Alexandria, Egypt (where I climaxed the trip with a bout of malaria). I had covered 16,000 miles at a cash outlay of exactly $27.61.

I did it with my little, second-hand, $47 camera — the kind that snaps a picture and hands over a print 60 seconds later. It had struck me that with such quick prints I could bargain for transportation and lodging. And I was right. (I also took along a 35-mm. camera and 30 rolls of film.)

Here are bargains I got for my 60-second pictures: a 725-mile airlift from Nairobi, Kenya, to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia — value $80; a 1,272-mile airlift from Asmara, Eritrea, to Cairo, Egypt — value $120; a bus ride from Cairo to Alexandria, plus two hand-engraved copper trays — value $150; a three-day stay at the exclusive Safari House in Arusha, Tanganyika — value $18.30; four rare thorn carvings from Nigeria — value $12.

And here are moments that stick in my memory:

THRILL RIDE: At Oran I hitched a ride on a big six-wheeled truck loaded with grain, bicycles and wines, bound for Colomb Bechar, an oasis on the northern edge of the Sahara. Heading south at dusk on a dirt track across the Atlas Mountains, we had just cleared the crest of a pass and started downhill when the air brakes conked out.

When we hit the first hairpin turn, the truck started to skid. Smoke curled from under the dashboard and our lights went out. To see the road, the driver had to lean out and steer with one hand.

At the next turn he skidded the truck to cut down our speed, then hurtled on as we hit the straightaway. He did it again . . . again. There came a turn where the truck skidded toward the edge of the cliff, then for a second stopped completely. In that second I flung myself out of the cab, somehow spotted a watermelon-sized rock and shoved it under the rear wheels. The SKEPTIC: This saucer-lipped belle of the Belgian Congo agreed to pose if Melbin would give her a gift. When she saw the snapshot (above) she said: "Not my picture. You paint picture before you come here, then bring it in that box. I not want picture. I want leg of buffalo for meat." But after much coaxing she accepted the photo.

bargained his way through 24 countries

TRADE: In return for his picture, this Ivory Coast trader drove the author 941 miles through the Sahara in his car.

truck inched forward, rock and all. Then it stopped.

The driver crawled out of the smoking cab and sank to the ground beside me. We silently shook hands. Eventually he got the air-brake system working again and we drove on toward Colomb Beehar.

MAGICIAN'S HELPER: The day I arrived at the oasis, the whole village was talking about Kassagi, a famous Tunisian magician who had come to give a show. Later that day I found myself sitting next to him in a cafe.

In broken French I said: "I have heard, sir, that you are a magician."

Without a word Kassagi flicked his right hand. A ball appeared between his fingers, then two, then one again. Smilingly he showed me his empty palms.

"If you will come with me into the sunlight," I said, "I will show you a different kind of magic." Outside I snapped his picture, and during the 60 seconds it developed I kept talking to him in my halting French. Then I whipped out his photograph. Staring at it open-mouthed for a moment, Kassagi promptly invited me to join his act that night. He had rented the cafe for his show, and at the climax of the performance he introduced me as a guest magician from America. My trick, he said, was le photographie-express, the fast photograph.

I snapped a picture of a young Arab boy seated in a chair onstage, peeled it off one minute later and held it up for all to see. The cafe rang with shouts of el hamdullah! — Praise be to God! Kassagi was so delighted with my performance that he paid for my board and room for the next three days.

RED CARPET: An open-hearted host was Chief Ogiozughanmwen of the ancient Nigerian village of Benin. My Polaroid picture of him left him speechless with surprise. When he recovered, he had servants prepare sleeping quarters for the "big stranger." Although these included a bed with spotless sheets covered by mosquito netting, the Chief apologized for not being able to do better for such a VIP guest.

Every meal was a feast, and there were enormous quantities of everything. There was ground nut soup, corned beef in palm soup, boiled yams, fufu (a dish of pounded plantain and highly spiced sauce), goose eggs, antelope meat, chicken, roast bananas, papaya and beer. We sat solemnly facing each other on straw mats. A small boy cooled me with a leather fan waved from a respectful distance, and a corps of servants knelt whenever I took a drink.

DR. MELBIN, I PRESUME: In a Belgian Congo village I watched the ritual of the second-burial ceremony. It was being held for the wife of the tribal chief, who had died two years before. Now it was necessary to bury her spirit, so that it would not wander about the forest, making trouble.

The men of the tribe were sitting in a group around an elder, who was chanting a eulogy. At intervals they would respond in chorus. I sat down quietly among the mourners, who at first paid no attention to me whatever. The mosquitoes began to bite. I dug into my bag for insect repellent and put it on my face and hands. Soon several mourners noticed that the insects were leaving me alone.

Even though the burial ceremony was still going on, an old man got up and came over to me. He saluted, showed me a large festering sore on his finger and indicated that he wanted some of my "medicine." I tried vainly to explain that this medicine would do him no good; then, to get rid of him, I made an "applicator" out of a sliver of palm-leaf stem and daubed the repellent on the man's sore. I gave him the wet stick. He smelled it, nodded and saluted again.

I had evidently been elected Medicine Man on the spot, for in another few minutes about a dozen tribesmen had formed a line, quietly waiting to be treated. They were afflicted with an assortment of sores, carbuncles, cuts and infections. In my best professional manner, I carefully examined each case and used a fresh palm twig applicator on every patient. Business boomed at my impromptu open-air clinic for about half an hour. Then I ran out of patients.

FAIR EXCHANGE: In Bulawayo, Southern Rhodesia, I walked into the office of the local newspaper and told the editor how I had got there. Then I showed him my hole-ridden shoes. I had "spares" — moccasins — but I needed stout shoes to walk on. Could I trade a pair for the story of my trip so far? He said yes — and I still have the clipping to prove it.

LUXURY: In Tanganyika I met George Dove, a white hunter who was about to take three Australians to the Serengeti Plains on a sightseeing safari. It was costing them $300 apiece for the week's trip, but I offered Dove his picture for a chance to go along.

He smiled incredulously and said: "You Yanks are crazy. Tell you what, though. I'll take you along if you give my clients pictures of themselves."

I did, and we set out in an open station wagon. We saw more than 30,000 head of magnificent wild game at close range — a leopard, spitting and snarling in the grass five feet away, antelope covering 40 feet in a single, graceful leap, lions closing in on a wildebeest for their evening meal. With two cookboys busy, we feasted like diners in a plush city restaurant.

FLIES BY DAY: At one point in Tanganyika I was crossing an immense plain alone. There wasn't a sign of another living being — nothing but a limitless waste of scrubby trees and tall grass.

I soon found out why humans avoid this section of East Africa. It is the lair of the deadly tsetse fly, carrier of sleeping sickness. Black and about the size of honey bees, the flies cluster on leafless bushes alongside a trail and attack anything that moves.

There were only a few at first. Then they were on me in a buzzing swarm, stinging like a thousand red-hot needles. Flailing my arms to fight them off, I started to run. The sun beat down and sweat ran into my eyes in burning rivulets. I gasped for breath. I tried to run faster, tore up handfuls of grass to beat off the flies — in vain.

Finally, in sheer desperation, I flung down my pack and raced for an open clearing. There, dizzy and panting, I stood still. And there the flies suddenly left me.

When I got my breath, I cautiously retrieved my pack and dashed on. Instantly the flies closed in. But now, over a small rise, I spied a clump of trees beside a road. In the shade was a group of natives, apparently waiting for a truck to pick them up. I ran to them — and collapsed.

WITCHCRAFT: In lower Nigeria I visited a witch doctor. Natives there believe implicitly in "juju," the power of evil spirits. Even whites in Africa say: "I don't necessarily believe it, but there are things I can't explain."

The witch doctor gave me palm wine, first tasting it to show it wasn't poisoned. Then he showed me a wooden head with 200 porcupine quills stuck in it. With this magic, he said, you could make your enemy many miles away feel the pain of the needles.

Then, moistening his hands, he touched my head and invoked a multiple blessing: Honored ancestors, good health, my house untouched, my children protected. As I am unmarried and have no children, I shall have to wait and see about the fourth blessing.

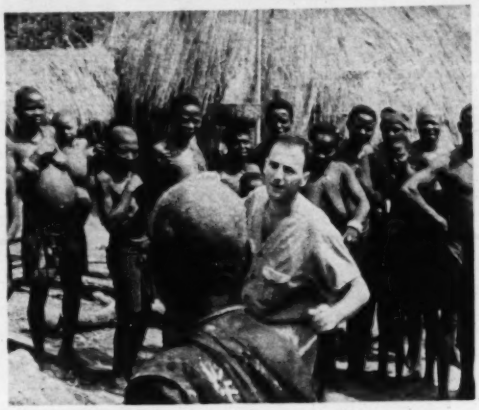
MELBIN'S TREK THROUGH AFRICA

His route traversed 24 countries: Algeria, French Sudan, Upper Volta, Gold Coast, Togo, Dahomey, Nigeria, Cameroons, Tchad, Ubangi-Chari, Belgian Congo, Angola, both the Rhodesias, Mozambique, Nyasaland, Tanganyika, Ruanda-Urundi, Uganda, Kenya, Ethiopia, Eritrea, Sudan and finally Egypt.

TIMBUKTU: Using a time exposure, Melbin snaps himself by a mud house in the "middle of nowhere" — deep in the desert wastes of the French Sudan.



GUEST ARTIST: At a tribal ceremony in a Nigerian village, the drum rhythms move Melbin to join the dancers. "It was poor dancing," the author reports frankly, "but when I finished they cheered."

TELEGRAM: Pounding a slit hollow log, a native flashes word that a white man is coming. One such message preceded Melbin for a full 12 miles.

MELBIN UNCORKED MOSQUITO CHASER, BECAME A CONGO MEDICINE MAN

CLOSEST SHAVE: With camera cocked, I crept close to the shore of Lake Edward in Uganda, where hippopotamuses flocked by the hundreds. I happened to glance over my shoulder. About 300 yards away, headed straight toward me, was a huge black elephant.

Turning, I hurried to where I had left my pack. I was pretty sure the elephant hadn't seen me, but I didn't know what he would do if he had. I kept running toward the road a quarter of a mile away.

Suddenly, directly ahead, was another elephant — and we were heading straight for each other. Off to the right behind this one I saw three more. Again I turned, only to find I was headed back toward the lake and the hippos. I was trapped.

I tested for wind direction with a wetted finger and found it was blowing directly between the first elephant and the second group of four. There was no other way to go. As I sprinted forward, downwind, the second group stopped and sniffed suspiciously.

My pack bounced like a pile driver on my back and I thought my heart would burst. Gasping for breath I reached the road, then looked back. The five elephants had joined forces, but the wind had been in my favor: all five were ambling peacefully toward the river bank.

SURPRISE: "I don't think you'll get anything out of them. They're a tough outfit, but you can try."

In Cairo, where I was trying to get a free bus ride to Alexandria, a friendly Egyptian was talking to me about the Societé des Autobus de Routes du Desert. Trading with the natives in the hinterlands, he pointed out, was one thing; but bargaining with the cost-conscious director of a modern bus company in Cairo was quite another. I decided to give it a try.

Armed with a photo of a street vendor serving drinks to his line's passengers, I called on Monsieur Kfoury, the director. He listened impassively to my story but finally agreed to accept the picture in lieu of fare. When I mentioned I would like to shop in Cairo for some souvenirs, he assigned one of his Arabic-speaking aides to help me bargain.

Although it meant spending more money than I had planned, I let the aide bargain for two hand-engraved copper trays. Just as I was about to pay, my companion said: "Put your money away. These are a gift from the company."

LAST STOP: I arrived home in New York in December 1954. Having already worn out the shoes I had promoted in Southern Rhodesia, I slogged home through the snow in my moccasins.

If you have the urge to make a trip like mine, let me offer some advice. Plan your itinerary for half the time you actually allow yourself. Then you will be able to take leisurely side trips.

Learn as much as you can about the areas beforehand from books and by talking to people who have been there. The best maps are Bartholomew's and Michelin. The most important items in your rucksack will be your canteen, sewing kit, Boy Scout knife and first-aid kit. A sleeping bag made of a sewn-up sheet will give you clean, lightweight comfort.

Don't take containers; wrap breakable items in clothing. Things I took and later got rid of included a mirror, cooking gear, books and emergency rations. If you have any doubts about your day-to-day need for an item, don't take it; you'll find it when you need it. Keep clean-shaven for the sake of making good impressions and for your own morale.

In some localities I found people suspicious of me because some rucksack-toting hitch-hiker had passed through before and had soured them with his arrogance and lack of manners. You must, above all, be considerate and courteous. If a friendly, open attitude doesn't come naturally to you, don't go.

Actually, it would be wise to carry more than $27. But for getting along on a shoestring, the camera-bargain plan is the best I know. ■

WARNING: Like a U. S. "deer crossing" sign, this alerts Nigerian drivers. Says Melbin of photo: "Here is a typical, footsore Yank in Africa."

LAST LOOK: Winding up his 16,000-mile jaunt in Egypt, Melbin follows in the tracks of thousands of other tourists, views the Sphinx of Giza.

Facts and figures on a fabulous film . . .

INSIDE 'GUYS and DOLLS'

by LLOYD SHEARER PARADE WEST COAST CORRESPONDENT

HOLLYWOOD.
Last year, when producer Samuel Goldwyn bought the screen rights to the Broadway smash hit, Guys and Dolls, he gave the top price ever paid for a film property: $1,000,000. The production has been pretty unorthodox ever since.

First, Goldwyn signed Joseph L. Mankiewicz, a four-time Academy Award winner who never had handled a musical comedy, to write the screenplay and direct Guys and Dolls.

Then, for the romantic leads, he hired Marlon Brando (at $200,000), who never had sung or danced professionally, and Jean Simmons (at $100,000), a British-born dramatic actress. Marlon was cast as gambler Sky Masterson, so named in the picture because of his willingness to bet on anything; Jean got the role of Sgt. Sarah Brown of the Save-a-Soul Mission, young, pretty and dedicated to her work. Goldwyn further announced that both stars would do their own singing. Said Brando:

"My voice sounds like the mating call of a dying yak, but if Mr. Goldwyn has the gall to put it on the screen I'm willing to try it."

For three months thereafter, Marlon studied under Leon Cepparo, the vocal coach who had instructed him for his Shakespeare debut in Julius Caesar. As a result, moviegoers will be pleasantly surprised by Brando's rich baritone in his principal number, Luck Be a Lady Tonight.

Although Marlon long has been known as "a difficult character" in Hollywood, he balked at just one thing in Guys and Dolls: fan-magazine stories or pictures. Otherwise, nothing — script, direction, rehearsals, other actors — seemed to bother him. "Throughout the entire production," Mankiewicz asserts, "Marlon was an angel."

JEAN SIMMONS reveals unexpected talent in Havana night-club sequence. Inspired by Cuban cocktails (and Marlon Brando, l.), she dances sultrily, sings If I Were a Bell.

Others who admired Brando were the normally skeptical backstage crew. "He was extremely considerate of everyone's feelings," one electrician told me. "He never pulled rank."

Unfortunately, this was not always true of Frank Sinatra. As Nathan Detroit, a gambler whose projected marriage to Miss Adelaide (Vivian Blaine) has been deferred 14 years by his prior loyalty to his floating crap game, Sinatra gives a standout performance in Guys and Dolls. But Frank is a born scrapper. Once he believes right is on his side, he will take on anyone or anything. During the course of this production he took on two formidable foes, Sam Goldwyn and television's famous emcee, Ed Sullivan.

It began with Sullivan's shrewd attempt to procure for his TV show a half-hour preview of Guys and Dolls. Sullivan offered Goldwyn $32,000, hoping no doubt that Sam would prevail on the film's stars to contribute their talents in the spirit of sales promotion.

When Sinatra heard of this, he reacted violently: Sullivan, he claimed, had "tried

THE STORY OF 'GUYS AND DOLLS'

Based on characters and a story by the late Damon Runyon, the picture closely follows the tremendously successful stage musical of the same title. The scene is New York. Gambler Nathan Detroit is engaged to Miss Adelaide, a night-club dancer who greatly wishes to be married but objects to Nathan's running a floating crap game. To get money for a place to hold the game, Nathan bets another gambler, Sky Masterson, that he cannot persuade a pretty mission lassie, Sarah Brown, to go to Havana with him. Sky does it; then, having fallen in love with Sarah, denies his success and pays off on his bet. Despite complications, everything works out and both couples get married at high noon in Times Square.

FRANK SINATRA on the set: his outside arguments didn't keep him from giving one of the best performances of his career to put pressure on top studio officials to get me to appear for free on Toast of the Town. . . . I get $25,000 for a personal appearance, and Sullivan offered only $32,000 for the entire package."

Sullivan promptly wrote to the Screen Actors Guild, saying that to date his show had paid out $5,000,000 to performers and that he had approached Goldwyn, not Sinatra, on the Guys and Dolls project. He also reprinted the entire letter in a paid trade-paper advertisement. Sinatra then rebutted with a full-page advertisement in Variety: "Dear Ed, You're sick. Frankie . . . P.S. Sick, sick, sick."

Although this exchange of advertisements nettled practically all the top echelon concerned with the picture — and produced no TV preview — it had scant effect upon Sinatra's work. Vivian Blaine, the only top name retained from the original Broadway cast, says, "Frank was very easy to work with, largely because we established a kind of instantaneous rapport. It was the kind of thing I had with Sam Levene, who played the Nathan Detroit part in the stage show. And I never thought I'd find it again. But Frank is such a darn' good professional that it was a cinch working with him."

In the film Frank sings four numbers beautifully. Only one, Adelaide, is a solo. The others are Sue Me, which he sings with Vivian Blaine, and The Oldest Established and Guys and Dolls, sung with Stubby Kaye, Johnny Silver and a chorus.

WHAT'S 'DOLL' IN ARABIC?

Because the title Guys and Dolls means little or nothing to foreign moviegoers, Loew's International, which is distributing the film overseas, had to translate it into different languages. This created problems, particularly with the word "doll," which has more than one meaning even in English. Anyway, here's what came out:

In Germany, Guys and Dolls becomes Schwere Jungen — Leichte Maedchen, or Tough Guys — Light-hearted Girls.

In France: Blanches Colombes et Villains Messieurs, or White Doves and Tough Guys.

In Spain: Ellos y Ellas, literally Hes and Shes.

In Arabic, the title reads This Woman is Mine; in Swedish, Angels of Broadway; in Siamese, Made for Each Other; and in Hebrew, The Boys and the Attractive, Easy-going Girls — a title, it is safe to say, that will fit no theater marquee in the world.

Altogether, there are 18 songs (by Frank Loesser) and dances (by Michael Kidd) in the film. All but three songs were in the original Broadway score. The newcomers are Pet Me, Poppa (which replaces A Bushel and a Peck), the abovementioned Adelaide and A Woman in Love, a duet by Brando and Simmons. Since the picture runs 2¾ hours, three good numbers were cut from the score: My Time of Day, More I Cannot Wish You and Marry the Man Today.

The most effective vocalist in the picture is Vivian Blaine, who vents her emotional frustration in two hilarious numbers: Take Back Your Mink and Adelaide's Lament.

A native of Newark, N. J., where she was christened Vivian Stapleton, the perky blonde has been an integral part of Guys and Dolls since it opened on Broadway five years ago. After 1,200 Broadway performances as Miss Adelaide, Vivian played the same part on the road and in London. When Sam Goldwyn caught the show abroad, he confided to his wife that Vivian was "the one member of the cast we've got to get." Result: she steals the show.

After the film's completion in Hollywood this past July, Vivian and two other original-cast members — Sam Levene and Bob Alda — joined forces again at the Royal Nevada Hotel in Las Vegas, where an abbreviated version of Guys and Dolls currently is playing to the tourists and week-end gamblers. Meanwhile the picture will be opening soon in New York and Chicago, then around the country. From all appearances, it will return producer Goldwyn's investment — about $5,500,000 altogether — with interest. ■

New Life for Old

Teamwork in Portland, Me., stops

PORTLAND, ME.

Just south of this city's bustling business district, long-time residents now paint their picket fences and putter in flower beds with undisguised neighborhood pride. As recently as five years ago, no one bothered. But now, as the pictures at left show, yesterday's tumbledown houses rear straight and stalwart, gleaming in bright new paint, and a new spirit hangs over the 20-block neighborhood.

For this is the showcase of one of the nation's more vigorous campaigns to stamp out slums before they get started — and an example worth copying in your city. Eye-catching as they are, the splashes of new paint are only frosting on the cake. The more drastic changes — stout new stairways, modern fixtures, an almost hygienic cleanliness — lie behind those once-crumbling walls. The program's success can be measured only in terms of health, safety and community pride.

Neighborhoods

slums before they get started

Portland's war on slums has been a community project, first to last. It began in 1948, when the Portland Press-Herald and Evening Express shocked local readers with vivid photos and stories of decay amounting almost to squalor. The papers' steady drumfire led to formation of a 14-member Citizens' Housing Committee. The group plumped strongly for a program of neighborhood face-lifting.

Then City Hall's young, aggressive team of Dr. Edward Colby, health director, and Gordon E. (Pete) Martin, housing supervisor, drafted a housing code with teeth and enforced it with vigor. But the final push needed to put the program across came from residents themselves. Within a week after the code was passed by the City Council, homeowners were streaming to Martin's office to find out how they could comply with it.

Just what is the owner's (or the tenant's) role? When his area is chosen for rehabilitation (the program began with six blocks, now covers 20), he is invited to a meeting of residents and city officials. Dr. Colby and Martin outline the inspection law, explain its rock-bottom standards, then urge property owners to ignore the minimums and renovate from top to bottom.

A few days after the meeting, Martin's inspectors invade the area armed with flashlights, detailed forms and an extra quantity of politeness. Since community cooperation is so important, the men are trained to inspect at the owner's convenience and to be as accommodating as possible. (Once, a home-owner refused to admit an inspector until he sang an Irish song. The inspector obliged with I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen.) The house is combed from foundation to attic, with particular attention to structure, sanitation and ventilation.

Later, an owner may receive an official okay — or an order telling him to repair anything from a crack in the wall to a sewage system. If he fails to comply, the city is empowered to take him to court, or even to shutter the building as unfit for occupancy.

But most owners are eager to fall in line. Sometimes, when repairs are expensive, Martin's agreeable men allow owners to spread the work over a long period. Occasionally they run afoul of an independent cuss who refuses to be told to remodel; he complies with the law and then does a thorough job a year or so later — just to show it's his own idea.

CITY'S PART of bargain with residents includes straightening curbs (above), repaving streets and replacing sidewalks.

How can your city band together to stamp out the glacierlike creep of slums? Here and there, cities already have chalked up success with programs of "urban renewal"; and a national organization, ACTION (American Council To Improve Our Neighborhoods, Box 462, Radio City Station, New York 20, N.Y.), stands ready, with information and trained consultants, to help your city get started. For as Portland has learned, the battle against decay benefits everyone. The results are counted in reduced disease, reduced delinquency and a shot-in-the-arm for civic self-respect. ■

HIGH-FLYING HIGH-SCHOOLERS

These Florida students stage their very own circus

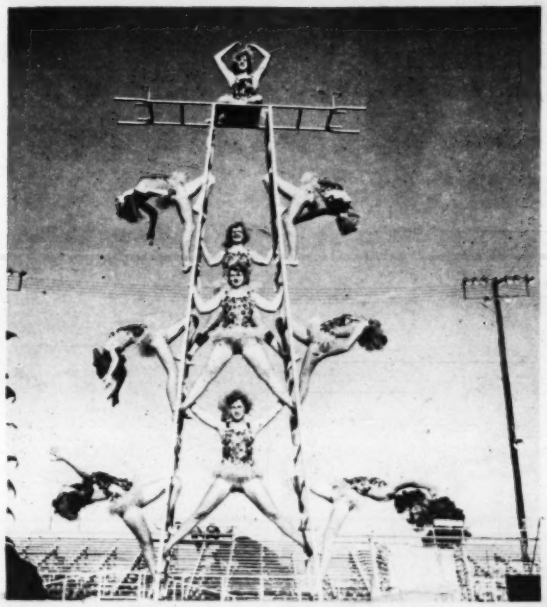
SARASOTA, FLA.

Ever since they were born, the teen-aged daredevils in these pictures have been circus minded. Here in the winter quarters of "The Greatest Show on Earth," they rub elbows with aerialists and animal trainers every day.

So when Bill Rutland—then athletic director at Sarasota High School—first dreamed up a student circus six years ago, the idea went over with a bang. The first show was held indoors, on a borrowed $600 and hand-me-down equipment. Since then, the circus has prospered, now owns all its own rigging, ponies, concession stands, even shows a profit of more than $3,000 a year.

More than 200 children (most in high school but some as young as 6) take part, selected from more than 500 who try out each year. The kids care for the animals, rig high wires, strike the tents. Rehearsals begin indoors in September, move outdoors in January. Performances run four days in the spring.

Surprisingly, only a handful (three this year) of performers come from circus families. But the circus is a big thing to these kids; one girl's family moved here from Montgomery, Ala., just so she could perform in an aerial act. And students still talk about the time a football star told the coach he was quitting. He said football practice was interfering with his circus work. ■



ROMAN-LADDER act shows the precision of these high-school performers. Several of them have gone on to regular circuses.

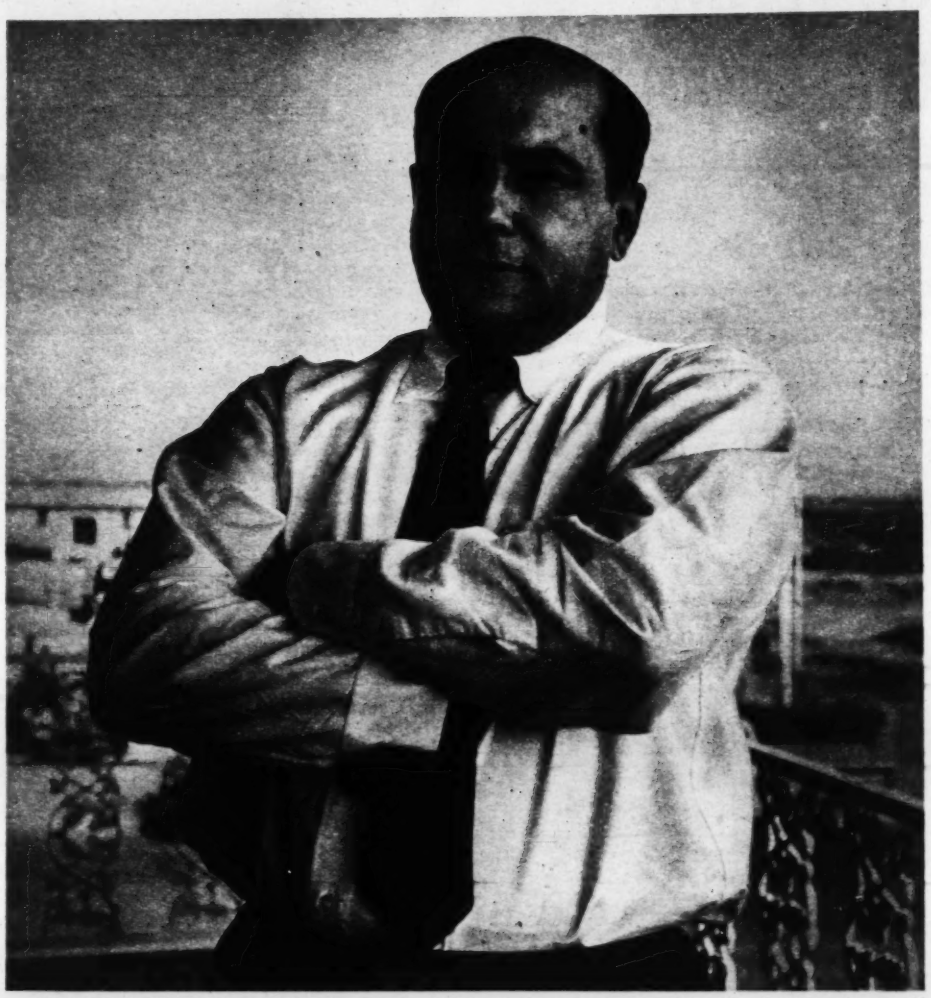
AMERICAN FAMILIES IN A BOOM YEAR—No. 4



DYNAMIC TEXAN Barney Holland poses on his office terrace. He designed the office building himself.

ONE MILLIONAIRE'S FAMILY:

Their bet is Prosperity

FORT WORTH, TEX.

by SID ROSS and ED KIESTER

Barney Holland, the balding, blocky Texan above, could be called a symbol of the flush postwar years. He returned here from the Navy in 1946 with $4,000 saved; since then, he has pyramided his net worth to well over a million dollars, mostly in oil, trucks, tires and ranch land.

Barney is 35 and the archetype of the new millionaire, the modern Midas whose golden touch consists of an unshakable belief that the boom will go right on booming. (Barney's own optimism runs so deep that he once owed $70,000 on a $300-a-month salary.) With the economy at new heights in 1955, Barney and his breed of new tycoon are enjoying the best year on their books and see no reason to hedge their bets.

Aside from this resemblance around the bank account, however, Barney looks blessed little like a millionaire, the much-caricatured Texas species or any other. He doesn't flash his wealth; his income, for tax purposes, is limited rigidly to $25,000 a year. He doesn't bluster; he is simple and straightforward. He doesn't drive a Cadillac, preferring a 1950 Buick, and, although he owns a 2,000-acre ranch, he never rides a horse.

Nor is his home life pretentious. Priscilla, his pretty blonde wife, suffers along without a mink coat, and his four lively children (Lindsay, 8; Barney, 6; Joe, 4; Ellen, 2½) romp around a green-shuttered $20,000 house which, while comfortable enough, is hardly luxurious. The family has one servant, a maid-of-all-work named Flora, whose wages are paid by Priscilla's father, a New York bank president. They have no TV set, no hi-fi system (although both Hollands love classical music) and no automatic washer — this last because Barney sat down and figured out that it was more economical to take clothes to the laundromat.

A millionaire who computes the cost of a washer may sound like a nickel-nurser, but what this really reflects is an unbounded capacity for study, which Barney turns loose on every project, from the purchase of a washer to the sale of 200,000 gallons of gasoline. His favorite reading consists of economics, finance and banking textbooks. Two or three evenings a week, he pulls out an armchair study board, a souvenir of his days at Princeton, and covers yards of paper with figures on business deals. His knowledge of the tax laws, for example, would do credit to T. Coleman Andrews, Mr. Income Tax himself. In Barney's realm, nothing is left to chance.

Around Fort Worth, Barney has somewhat the reputation of a reckless plunger. He considers this unfair. "What nobody ever sees is the amount of work I do over this study board," he says. "I figure every angle and stack all the facts and figures in the back of my head. When I'm set for something, it may seem hazardous to them, but not to me."

SIX HOLLANDS pose before Early American home. Children (left to right) are Ellen, 2½; Joe, 4; Barney, 6, and Lindsay, 8. Lindsay is in third grade, Barney in first.

bridled optimism, Barney has built up a small but substantial empire, most of it interlocking. His biggest firm, the Barney Holland Oil Co., wholesales Conoco gasoline, oil and accessories; its best customers are the 50-odd service stations Barney himself controls. (The company also owns a number of business properties, mostly leased out to automobile dealers.)

This gasoline is transported from a Holland-owned depot to Holland-owned stations via Holland-owned trucks of the Heart of Texas Trucking Co. (The arrangement sprang from Barney's homework: by paying Heart of Texas twice the going rate for transportation, Barney Holland Oil keeps out of a higher income-tax bracket — and the money comes back to the same place.) Likewise, the Holland chain of service stations buys tires from the Barney Holland Tire Co.

Then there are the lesser satellites — the Triangle Transport Co., another trucking firm, and Westport, Inc., a real-estate outfit in which Barney owns a one-fifth interest. He also owns some $15,000 in bank stock — "although I like to keep control of my own money" — and keeps as a kind of cushion some $3,500 in sound mining stock, which his mother bought for him with his Navy pay.

In Barney's eye, the Lick Skillet Ranch at Idabel, Okla., in the Red River Valley, crowns his galaxy. Once, Barney considered ranching for a living; today, what salary he draws above his $25,000 (the trucking firm pays him a token $125 a month, the tire firm nothing) is siphoned into the ranch. Barney is building up his herds of Black Angus cattle (he now has 300 head) and plans to add sheep. Judging by land prices in the neighborhood, the ranch alone is worth roughly $1,000,000.

But the Lick Skillet is more than an investment: it wraps up business, pleasure and future. Barney, still hard at work and busier than millionaires who live on their dividends, uses the ranch as a retreat (it has neither radio nor telephone); the kids consider it almost a fairyland. Barney fishes, hunts, walks around surveying his land and thinks out business problems without pressure. Often he fills the house with guests — many of them his employes, for he believes in sharing his fortune with them.

Barney tries hard to build up an esprit de corps among his workers. "I know very well that I get more loyalty if they have a stake in the profits," he says. Part of this "profit-sharing" system is a substantial Christmas bonus. Barney also gives his men a chance to enter business for themselves. "That's the best pension plan I could give them," he declares.

Recently, one employe launched plans for a new shopping center — on land Barney found and bought for him. A service station in the center will buy Barney Holland Oil Co. products, and this is enough return for the boss.

It's not too many years since Barney himself was scraping by on $250 a month. True, his father (also named Barney) had an established business in the oil firm, but Barney started at the bottom as a truck driver and "general flunky." His first move after discharge was to marry Priscilla Bradford, a Smith College graduate whom he had met at Princeton on a football week end; they set up housekeeping in an $80-a-month garage apartment with some hand-me-down furniture. The thing the Hollands remember best about those days was the way diet followed the day of the week — Tuesday was beans day, Wednesday spaghetti day and so on.

Barney immediately turned his searching mind loose on his dad's business. Within a year he had a sweeping plan for reorganization. It got a cold shoulder, to say the least. "It looked like here was

The future never looked rosier to optimistic Barney and his family

Two-year-old Ellen swings at ball (center) as children play lively croquet

Junior telling older people how to do things," Barney recalls. "They didn't welcome any outside static." His project was allowed to die quietly.

Thwarted there, Barney's restless mind looked elsewhere. In 1948 he dipped into his savings for $800 and bought a service-station lease. He sold the inventory for $500, leased the station at a profit of $50 a month. Thus, for $300, he had upped his income $50 a month. A few months later he added a second station for $9,000. He borrowed $6,000 of the money; payments were $100, rent was $125, so he profited $25 more a month.

About this time, Priscilla objected. He was raiding the savings for highly speculative ventures, she felt. Barney marshaled his facts, took out his lap board and showed her mathematically that no risk was involved. She has been his convinced booster ever since.

His father was less easily swayed, so more and more Barney turned to private real-estate operations. He sold his house at a $10,000 profit, bought a farm, traded it as down payment on the ranch, added to his network of service stations. Finally, in 1949, he quit his father's business.

His career on his own lasted roughly three months. Then his father's business associate fell ill, and Barney was asked to come back. "I agreed on two conditions," Barney says. "One, that I be accepted as an equal, not a junior, and two, that my salary be limited to $300 a month. I didn't want to lean on anybody. I wanted to prove I had the goods."

Barney got more than equal status; his dad gave him a free hand. The old plan for reorganization was dusted off, brought up to date and put to work. After much consultation (and many nights over the study board), the company changed its status from Conoco's agent to an oil wholesaler handling Conoco products. The string of gas stations was expanded. More property was purchased. Rental income zoomed from $2,000 to $40,000 a year. Sales jumped from 200,000 to 400,000 gallons a month. By 1952, Barney had spent more than a quarter of a million dollars to expand.

Millionaire Barney is still spending — and he is still a whirlwind, with little time for fun by everyday standards. "Today," Barney says, "Conoco sales in Fort Worth are the highest per capita of any large city in the U.S., and 75 per cent of these sales are due to the Barney Holland Oil Co." In addition to quarterbacking this sales campaign, Barney has taken time out for such projects as designing a new office building for the company (on the strength of a year of architecture in college) and running for City Council as an independent. (He won a two-year term, and is busily heckling his fellow councilmen to spend more to improve the city.)

The Hollands have few evenings to spend over the chess board, one of their favorite recreations. Reading is another pet, but Barney has little time for the Book-of-the-Month Club. (The Hollands have separate libraries; Barney runs to economics texts and new fiction, Priscilla's to history and biography.)

Then there are the social demands. The Hollands move in the more rarefied circles of Fort Worth society. Barney springs from a revered Texas family: an ancestor was the legendary Col. James Bowie, and an uncle was Frank Hawks, the famed flier, who used to bring Will Rogers to dinner at the Holland home. ("I remember sitting on the bed listening to him tell stories," Barney says. "He was funny as hell.") Priscilla, with a Park Ave. and New Canaan, Conn., background, is likewise society-bred, and the Hollands are seen often in Fort Worth's best places — the River Crest Country Club, the Ridgley Club, the Colonial Club.

"We know everybody all right," Barney admits. He himself, however, is not much for socializing; though amiable enough, he has to be almost dragooned into dressing up. As a result, he often stays home with the study board while Priscilla goes to concerts or to the theater in Dallas with friends.

BARNEY WORKS over business accounts at home. He removes tie only on ranch (right) game with mother in backyard.

Occasionally, the Hollands will hold a small, formal cocktail party, usually inviting seven to 10 couples — hardly millionaire-type high living.

With Flora to handle the housework, Priscilla divides her days between the children and volunteer work. She is active in the League of Women Voters, the Junior League and the women's auxiliary of All Saints Episcopal Church. Summers, when Lindsay and Barney aren't in school, she shepherds the children to a swimming pool or the zoo in her Ford station wagon.

Barney shies away from bringing up the children, leaving it mostly to Priscilla, and confesses openly that he's "a little afraid" of them. "I like them when they're well-behaved," he says, "but otherwise they're kind of hard to take." Barney has never changed diapers or walked the floor with any of the children.

This is not due to a lack of devotion, by his standards. "When Priscilla takes the kids to Sunday School, and I lie in bed, don't think I'm asleep," he says. "I'm reading the want ads or figuring out some deal in my head. Sure, I could be playing with the kids — but what if I came up with cancer or something, then what am I doing for my kids?"

Family affairs are marked "hers," just as business is marked "his." Priscilla gets an allowance of $750 a month, which covers the mortgage payment ($107), the utilities ($70) and home maintenance and repairs ($46) as well as food ($215), clothing ($81) and entertainment ($58). What's left usually goes into the family savings account, although Priscilla sometimes takes a flier in business herself. She owns a gasoline truck in her own name — and rents it to Heart of Texas Trucking Co.

Barney's one extravagance is antique collecting; he has a closet full of Dresden and Meissen china and the walls are sprinkled with Currier & Ives prints. Both enjoy travel, but since Barney doesn't like to be away from the office for more than three or four days, their trips are limited to short hops to Mexico or New Orleans. Most of their leisure is spent at the ranch.

Barney has extensive plans for the ranch. For one thing, he hopes to initiate an "assembly line" steer-feeding system, under which cattlemen would send him steers to be fed and then pay him a fee for the weight they have gained. He also plans to begin raising sheep. And his companies are not marking time, either.

"Maybe I'll make five million or 10 million, I don't know," Barney says. "Whatever it is, money is just a by-product. I'm having fun in what I'm doing — the way other people play bridge. Opportunity is still very much alive in this country. I've got a lot of hope for the future."

Priscilla also has hope for the future. "I'd like to build a new house and have more things and live with a little more dash and give better parties and do more things socially," she says. "I want the children to have the finest education possible and get a good start in life. But I won't push Barney to get any of these things."

Barney, of course, is a man who needs no pushing. Plans already are in motion for the house; the Hollands own a two-acre tract on a bluff overlooking the Trinity River. The Hollands will build their Early American dream house after the children get a little older and after they sell their present home — "at a profit, of course."

The Hollands speak of tomorrow as though it were already here — as well it might be. Barney's optimism has never let him down before, and he sees not a chance that it will in the future. In his view, the boom will go snowballing on and on, and he is willing to back up his belief with dollars and cents. He and his kind of new millionaire have cashed in most on postwar prosperity. They also are among those who made it possible. ■

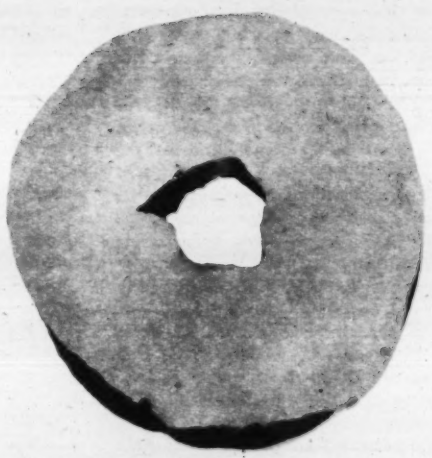
doughnuts and punch

Cornstalks, pumpkins, black cats and witches, ghostly apparitions silhouetted against the cold glare of the hunter's moon — it all adds up to Halloween for the truly young and the young-at-heart. But when the scary fun is over everyone will be hungry. So be ready with fluffy doughnuts and plenty of punch.

RAISED ORANGE DOUGHNUTS

- 1 package dry active yeast or 1 cake compressed yeast
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1¼ cups orange juice, lukewarm
- 2 tablespoons grated orange peel
- 4½ cups sifted enriched flour
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1 egg, beaten
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted and cooled

Add yeast and sugar to lukewarm orange juice; let stand 5 minutes; stir until yeast is thoroughly dissolved. Add grated orange peel and 1½ cups of the flour; beat well. Cover and let rise in a warm place (80° to 85° F.) about 1 hour. Add sugar gradually to beaten egg and beat until light; stir in salt and melted butter. Add to yeast mixture; beat until smooth. Add enough of the remaining flour to make a soft dough. Turn dough on lightly floured board and knead until smooth and elastic. Place in oiled bowl; turn once to bring greased side up. Cover and let rise in warm place until double in bulk (about 1½ hours). Roll dough on lightly floured board to ¼" thickness. Cut with 3" floured doughnut cutter. Let rise again until double in bulk (about 1 hour). Fry in deep fat heated to 350° F. until golden brown, turning once. Drain on absorbent paper. Frost if desired. Makes about 36 doughnuts.



HOT SPICED CITRUS PUNCH

- 1 cup sugar
- 2 cups water
- 1 teaspoon whole cloves
- 1 3-inch piece stick cinnamon
- 4 cups strong tea
- 2 cans (6 ounces each) frozen concentrated orange juice, reconstituted
- 1 can (6 ounces) frozen concentrated grapefruit juice, reconstituted
- Orange slices

Combine sugar, water, cloves and cinnamon in saucepan; simmer 10 minutes; strain. Add to tea and fruit juice. Reheat and serve hot. Place additional cloves in orange slices; float on top of punch. Makes 15 cups.

ONE GIRL'S PROBLEM: Watch TV or go out on a date?

Advice to Teenagers

About half of the letters I receive from readers request personal answers. This is impossible, but I will reply to as many as I can in this column.

Q. I am a boy of 17, a senior in high school. My problem is this: My parents are so old-fashioned that they make me stay at home every night of the week. My mother says I may start seeing girls when I reach 25. — K. L., Middlesboro, Ky.

A. Your parents are not being realistic. It is perfectly normal for a boy of 17 to want to date, and parents who try to stop this natural process usually find that their children deceive them in the matter. Perhaps some older member of your family, your clergyman or teacher could talk to your parents tactfully about it.

Q. I am 14 and I like boys, but I like TV, too. I do not know whether to go out on dates or watch TV. — M. M., Knoxville, Tenn.

A. While there is any doubt about it, better watch TV.

Q. There is a boy in my community who continually asks to date me, even though I refuse him each time. He is a nice boy, and I wouldn't want to lose him as a friend by hurting his feelings. How can I make him understand? Also, my face turns red when anyone tells me I'm pretty. Please tell me how to overcome this shyness. — C. S., Greenville, S. C.

A. It is always a girl's privilege to refuse to go out with a boy, and she need not make elaborate excuses. Perhaps you are not really being firm enough with this boy, since you are worried about losing him as a friend.

Perhaps if you accept the fact that you are pretty and attractive, you will also accept the compliments that go with it. Express your thanks modestly and try to return the compliment at a suitable moment.

Q. I like a boy who likes me but we live quite a distance from each other. Could I ask him to write? — B. J. C., Syracuse, N. Y.

A. Yes, you may ask him to write, and it would be polite of him to say that he will — even if he knows in his heart that he may never get around to it. If he's honest, you may get this kind of answer: "I'd like to write and I'll try. But you know how it is — there's homework and sports. But if you don't hear, it won't be because I'm not thinking of you."

Q. There is a boy of 17 here who is very conceited. All he does is talk about himself. Is there any way to break up his conversation? — A. B., Medford, Mass.

A. Often, the boy who acts this way is secretly concerned about himself. He may think he's too short or too tall, too homely or too slow to compete on a normal level with other boys. Give him what approval you can for the things he does well and perhaps it will help him to overcome this fault.

Q. I am soon to be 14. My mother and father will not let me run in the streets till all hours of the night like the rest of the kids, and they make fun of me because of that. In fact, if I do anything my friends don't like, they tell me about it or give me the impression I am not wanted. — S. D., Muncy, Pa.

A. Very often the girl or boy who is teased a lot, somehow needs the teasing and does things to incite it. See if that isn't so in your case. And try not to be too sensitive. Some people know that they should not be sharply critical of others, but at your age it's natural to speak out when their contemporaries do something that they don't approve of. You're probably the same way.

In any case, I can sense from your letter that you are not really displeased that your parents won't let you run in the streets until all hours of the night.

DOCTORS FIND EFFECTIVE TREATMENT FOR

Broken, Splitting Fingernails

Medical journal reports 7 out of 10 women improved fragile "impossible to manicure" nails by adding KNOX Gelatine to their daily diet!

At last, here is help for the many women who are ashamed of their hands because of unattractive, fragile fingernails! Read these important findings reported in a leading medical journal:

In a recent research project, doctors gave Knox Gelatine to a group of housewives who for some time (in many cases, years) had been annoyed with broken, splitting, chipping nails.

In all cases definite improvement occurred in one month. In three months 7 out of 10 of the women noted that their nails had stopped splitting and could be manicured to a full point!

Fingernails like those referred to above often reflect underlying health conditions such as a lack of some of the important food elements in your diet. Research has proved that Knox Gelatine contains the necessary elements to keep fingernails strong and healthy. Do as many people do who take Knox every day . . . simply mix an envelope of Knox Unflavored Gelatine in water, your favorite fruit juice or bouillon. Complete directions in every package. Ask for Knox Gelatine in the 32-envelope Economy Diet size.

GRAVOIS—ITS NEW TRAFFIC PATTERN

TRAFFIC FLOWS SWIFTLY AND SMOOTHLY on Gravois avenue since the reversible lane system was instituted to handle heavy rush hour movement of vehicles. In the gathering gloom of an autumn evening, the camera sees tell-tale trails of light left by fast-moving machines in this view toward the southwest from Devolsey street. Streaks of red are etched by taillights of westbound cars, while headlights of eastbound vehicles paint yellow-white patterns. Red lines predominate because four of Gravois' six lanes are for westbound traffic at this time of the day; in the morning rush hour, eastbound traffic takes over four lanes.

An innovation for St. Louis, the reversible lanes are working to the satisfaction of Traffic Commissioner Charles E. Gonter. At the height of the evening rush, a test car moved from the Twelfth-Gravois intersection to Chippewa and Gravois in six minutes, a two-mile trip that formerly took up to 20 minutes. Opening of the Third Street Interregional Highway, which terminates at Twelfth and Gravois, has thrown an even bigger load on the overburdened thoroughfare. Construction of the proposed Ozark Expressway through South St. Louis would relieve Gravois and speed traffic to and from south and southwest sections of the city as well as county areas beyond. "We're moving traffic to the city limits pretty well now," Gonter said. "From that point on it's up to the county."

This photo was made by intermittent time exposures, which accounts for the abrupt start and termination of some of the light streaks. Two blocks distant, a cluster of neon lights marks the Gravois-Jefferson intersection. Gravois disappears over a hill at Arsenal street. Spires of St. Francis de Sales Church at Ohio avenue are silhouetted against the dimly lit sky.

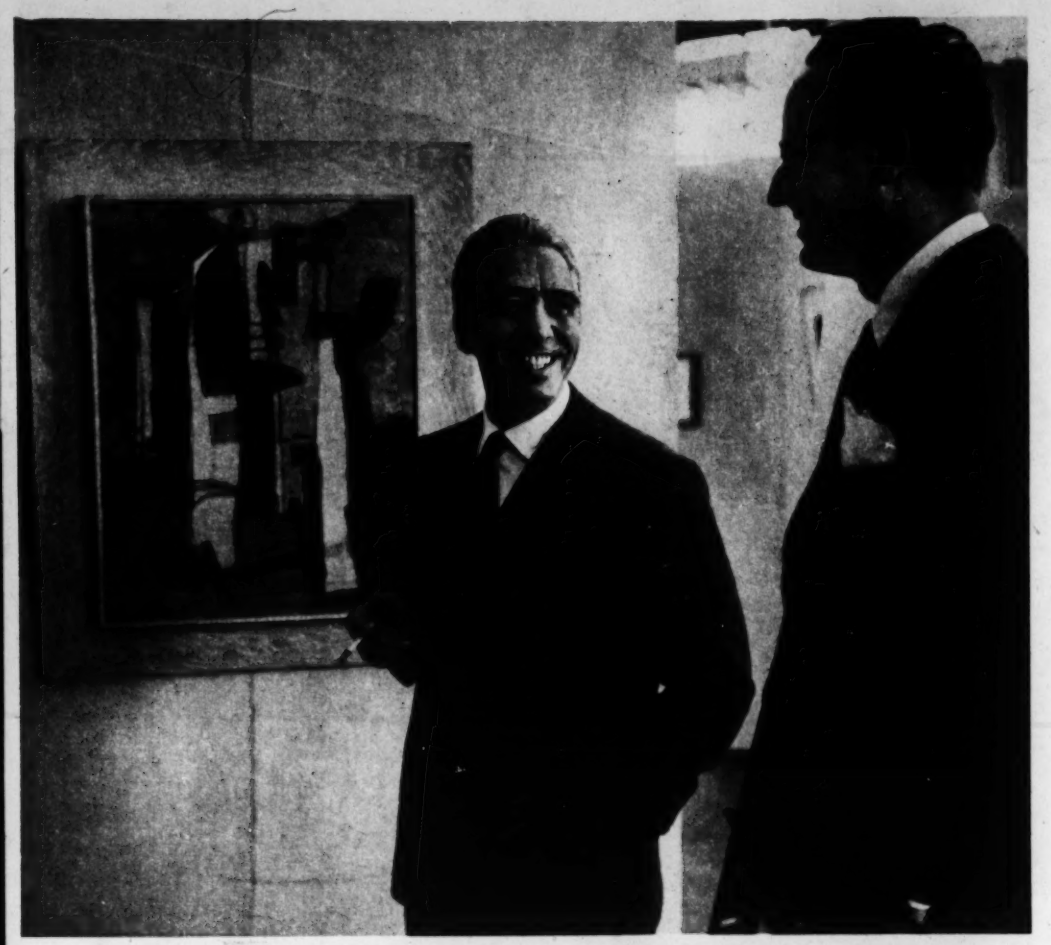
Standing before his "Green Composition" at Washington University exhibition, Afro discusses it with Mrs. William A. Bernoudy, his hostess during his St. Louis visit. She and her architect husband own the painting, which Mrs. Bernoudy bought at a Swiss exhibit.



Frederick Hartt, acting chairman of the University's Department of Art and Archeology, studies Afro's "Cupola Verde" with its creator.

RISING STAR

Afro, Celebrated Italian Artist, Visits Washington U.

On tour of easels in advanced painting class, Afro stops at several to offer suggestions. In photo above, he comments on a portrait which Joy Marcus, of Dayton, Ohio, has begun. Artist-teacher Fred Conway listens at left. In photo left, below, Afro comments in Italian on painting by Leonel Gongora of Colombia, who replies in Spanish. Right, below, he analyzes problems in a still life by Tran Gordley of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, with Hartt interpreting. Afro's last name, which he never uses, is Basaldella.

Siegfried Reinhardt, St. Louis painter and instructor at the Fine Arts School, listens to an Afro delineation of what has gone wrong with a student's design.

Afro and Patrick J. Kelleher, curator of European art at William Rockhill Nelson Gallery, Kansas City, renew an acquaintance begun in Europe.

By GEORGE McCUE of the PICTURES Staff

A RISING STAR AMONG ARTISTS of postwar Italy—and a visitor to St. Louis last week—is a painter named Afro, who first came into international prominence only five years ago and has since added steadily to his fame. Afro, a native of Udine, in the country north of Venice, grew up in Italy's recent Dark Age. He was born in 1912, lived his childhood against the background of World War I, began studying painting during the Mussolini regime when artists were regimented pawns of the fascist state.

In that period Afro's paintings, like those of his contemporaries, were largely, by official decree, recreations of Renaissance style and subject matter. A mural he executed in this manner at his home town won a prize, but was destroyed by officials because it was not "in the fascist point of view."

After the war, Afro's painting went through a rapid evolutionary course. He experimented with cubism and other innovations of the early part of this century. Then, as Italian art belatedly came into its new Renaissance, he moved on into his present highly personal style. This takes a form frequently described by critics as "evocative," and by the painter himself as "a poetic correspondent of reality"—of the idea of things rather than their appearances.

The viewer finds in Afro's canvases abstract forms, color that is rich but often muted, and space represented only through shadowy semi-transparent tones through which background outlines are only suggested. Many of the paintings have titles that apply to a specific image. In the words of Kenneth E. Hudson, dean of the School of Fine Arts of Washington University, the artist then "expresses by abstract means the emotional qualities of what is experienced rather than the facts. His states of feeling are readily shared by the observer."

Afro was in St. Louis last week as guest of the School of Fine Arts. A dozen or so of his paintings are now on exhibit at the University's Givens Hall, and nine others are featured in a City Art Museum show. His visit followed service as a judge at the Pittsburgh International Exhibition of Contemporary Painting at Carnegie Institute.

Afro put in several hours a day in the University studios, working with students, comparing notes with the artist-teachers.

Photos by JACK GOULD of the PICTURES Staff

Dean Hudson and his guest before an Afro titled "Cronaca" (Chronicle). Afro exhibited in America in 1950, followed the show with a long Western tour. Americans who first saw his work in Europe and later in this country are among his strongest advocates.

Buying New Slippers, Dancers Flex Their Feet, Balance, Rise 'On Point'

A typical sight at the dance shoe store located on the second floor of a building in Manhattan's show business area. Having kicked off her street shoes, Rose Marie Stafford accepts a salesman's outstretched hand for balance as she tries a pivot in a new pair of ballet slippers. It doesn't matter that the left slipper is untied. Rose Marie is a student at the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo School of Ballet.

The customer, Diane Lockwood Goering, and a gesturing salesman seem to be performing a ballet duet. Mrs. Goering is a ballet teacher on Long Island. Most dancers test shoes on paper as she is doing so as not to soil them. Displayed against top wall in background are leotards and ballet tutus.

A member of the ballet chorus of Radio City Music Hall, Madeleine Lejeune, holds on to a shelf for support as she tests the feel of a custom-made ballet slipper. Such slippers have a hard box at the toe and a special soft construction in the arch that enables the wearer to put a fraction more bend in her dancing. Many dancers aren't happy with stock toe shoes, order them especially made.

By PAUL BERG
of the PICTURES Staff

DANCERS HAVE STYLE, whether they are performing on stage before an audience or merely buying dance shoes in a store. Trying on new ballet slippers, they will gracefully extend a leg to see how the trim, pink satin shoes look. They will flex their feet, arch them, turn them, wiggle them to get the feel of comfort and fit. And finally, if they are toe dancers, they will rise "on point," daintily balancing themselves with the help of a firm-footed salesman.

One of New York City's busiest dance shoe stores is Capezio, located at Broadway and 49th street, in the center of the theatrical district. Up the flight of stairs to the second-floor shop bound dancers of all kinds—chorus line dancers from Radio City Music Hall, night-club dancers, ballerinas from ballet companies, modern dancers and tap dancers, character dancers and acrobatic dancers. Many are students, some premiere danseuses. Some have rushed over during a rehearsal break of a musical show, others nervously prepare for an audition.

A few of Capezio's salesmen have been with the shoe company for 20 years and more. They have watched dancers grow from their first waddling lessons to polished performers. The business started in 1887, when Salvatore Capezio opened a shoe repair shop across the street from the Metropolitan Opera House. He soon was spending most of his time making new shoes for the Met singers and dancers. His success as a dancer's cobbler was assured in 1910, when the great ballerina, Anna Pavlova, had Capezio make her toe shoes.

In leotard and black opera hose that she is purchasing, Yonah Richmond considers a pair of soft ballet slippers. She does character dancing with the Polish Dance Theatre and teaches at the Ballet Arts School.

With one moccasin and wool sock removed, Johanna Carothers tests a ballet slipper. At night she dances in the floor show of the Bal Tabarin restaurant to earn money to study during the day at the Ballet Theatre School. Lead dancers may wear out beyond repair a pair of toe shoes in two or three performances.

Irma Grant looks over her shoulder to examine a thong sandal. She dances with the Hamilton Trio, a modern jazz dance group. Many women customers invariably carry oversize handbags, like the one Irma has placed on the floor, or round hatboxes to accommodate such accoutrements as costumes, leotards, shoes and make-up.

CRANE ON THE LOOSE

St. Louis Zoo Fugitive Leads Keepers a Chase, Then Flaps Home

1. The crowned crane, shortly after a flying escape from its inclosure, strolls stiff-legged across walk as keepers warily approach. Woman on bench and another spectator, casually leaning against a tree, watch start of the chase.

2. Bird Curator Bill Conway moves in to make an unsuccessful attempt at apprehension. The bird, about four feet tall from toe to crown, made a sharp right turn, took off up a grassy slope.

3. The bystander, in dark suit, has joined crew of four in the bird chase. Woman on bench turns to watch as the bird leaves the ground in a short spurt between trees.

4. With wings extended, the crane hops and flaps into the lead as a net is brought into play by Bird Keeper Burton Curtis. Conway brings up the rear.

5. With both feet off the ground, Conway takes lead from the crane as he sprints to head off the flying bird. Crane is soaring, its long neck stretched out in front and stilt-like legs trailing behind. Its plumage blends with foliage of the trees.

Photos by George Harris

6. After a chase of four or five minutes, the crane flies back into its pen. Its excursion had taken it not more than 100 yards from crane valley.

7. The crane's wing is clipped to insure its staying put in the outdoor pen for the last few days of autumn weather before it and other tropical birds are shooed inside for the winter. Conway clips — a painless operation for the bird — while Curtis holds the ruffled but unharmed fowl.

By JOHN STIPE of the PICTURES Staff

WHEN WARM WEATHER comes in the spring, the St. Louis Zoo's crowned cranes, along with other tropical birds, are moved from their winter quarters in the bird house to the low-fenced inclosures of crane valley, in the center of the zoo area. To keep the birds inside the roofless pens, bird curators resort to an old farmer's trick of clipping one wing of each bird.

Recently, unrelated circumstances gave one of the zoo's 11 crowned cranes a brief interlude of freedom. The adventurous crane's clipped wing had grown during the summer.. A strong wind was blowing. A group of children, rather noisily touring the zoo, apparently excited the crane. It took off over the fence. With wing feathers still abbreviated, the bird's flying was made possible only by the gusty wind — somewhat like a glider riding currents of air.

George Harris, a professional photographer of St. Louis, chanced to be at the zoo with a camera when the escaper made its break. He recorded the freedom, chase and return to confinement.

The crowned crane, a native of Africa, gets its name from the gold-colored top of plumage which crowns a black and white body, tinged with purple. The tall bird walks on stilt-like legs through tall grass while searching for insects and the plant buds and seeds on which it feeds.

SAAR BASIN ISSUES

Poster-Plastered Fence Sums Up For Referendum

Supporters and opponents of the proposal to Europeanize the Saar have their say on a poster-covered wall in Saarbruecken. The Neins (Noes) and the Jas (Yesses) appear pretty evenly divided here in number, but recently the pro-German parties of the Saar have built up strong opposition to the plan. Proposal, which is being voted on today, would put the rich basin under a commissioner — who could not be German, French or Saarlander — to be named by the Western European Union. The tiny Saar territory has an area of 1000 square miles, a population of 1,000,000. For some years it has been an area of dispute between Germany and France. It is important for its vast coal mines, on which its iron and steel industry depends. At present it is semi-autonomous, with its economy closely tied to France.

A TRUCK HITS A TRAIN

Runaway Lumber Rig Knocks Nine Cars Off Track, Causes Six Deaths

Hauling a load of lumber, Trucker Claude Brandt topped a rise in his tractor-trailer rig, started down a steep, half-mile-long hill into the Monongahela Valley community of West Newton, Pennsylvania. Apparently his brakes failed. The truck careened downhill out of control and rammed into the second car of a freight train that was moving through the center of town. Nine of the freight cars were derailed, and they plowed into two stores. Six persons were killed, two others were injured. Photo shows concrete block building knocked down by the impact, and a freight car upended on top of another one.

A crane truck—moved in to begin untangling wreckage—sits across track on which the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad train was traveling en route from Cumberland, Maryland, to Chicago. A six-year-old girl, Sheryl Ross, was killed in a fruit shop at left. The shop's owner, Jacob Casale, 50 years old, was also killed. Damaged hardware store is at right in photo.

Wrecker truck, in background, has chain connected to wreckage of demolished truck. One of the wheels, stripped of its tire, lies in foreground. Driver of the truck was one of those killed.

Smashed freight car is wedged into the first floor of hardware store, whose outer wall has been shattered. A fire broke out in the train wreckage near a car carrying explosives, but firemen quickly extinguished it. West Newton is 33 miles east of Pittsburgh.

INDIA FLOOD VICTIMS

Marooned by flood waters, members of a family of the Indian village of Ghonda, near Delhi, await evacuation outside their mud hut. Ghonda was one of the places inundated when brackish waters of the Jumna River were fed by unexpected rains that fell from the Punjab north to the Himalayas. North of Delhi, in the Punjab and other states, the out-of-season floods poured over hundreds of thousands of acres, bringing what officials described as the heaviest financial loss in the history of that region. Streets in Delhi and New Delhi were jammed with evacuees, many driving cattle. Prime Minister Nehru toured flooded areas, described the flood as the worst in North India in modern history.

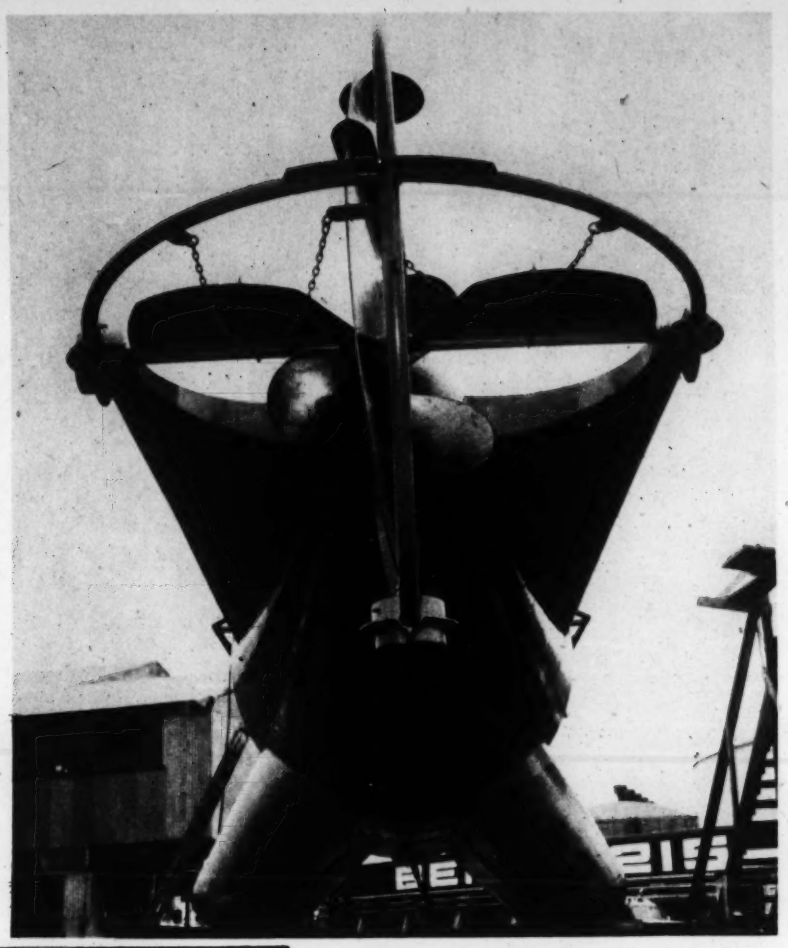
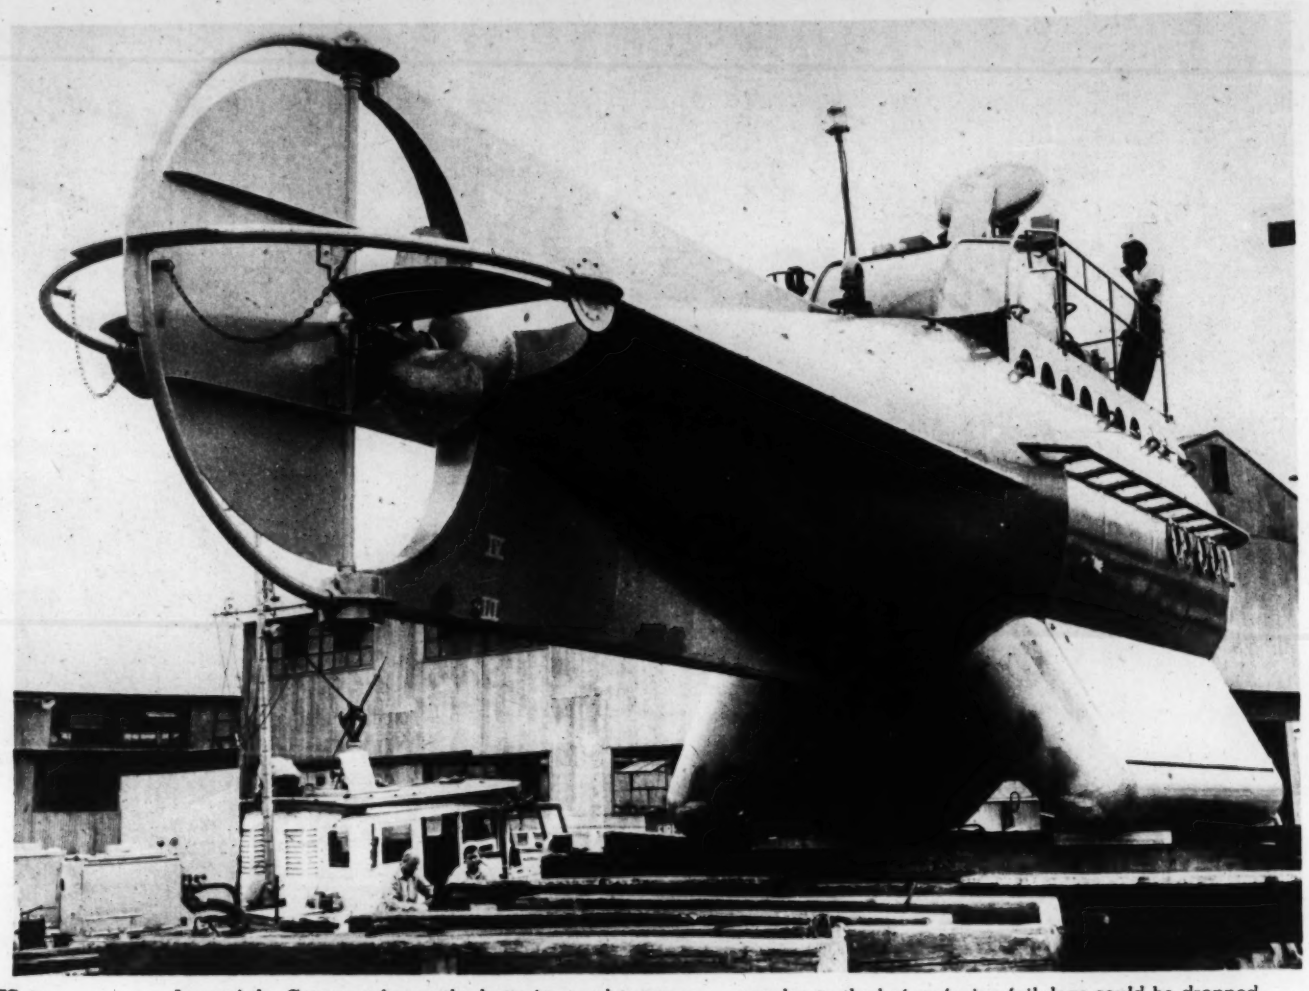
DESIGN FOR DEPTH DIVING

Californian Invents Submarine for Exploring, Photographing Ocean Bottom



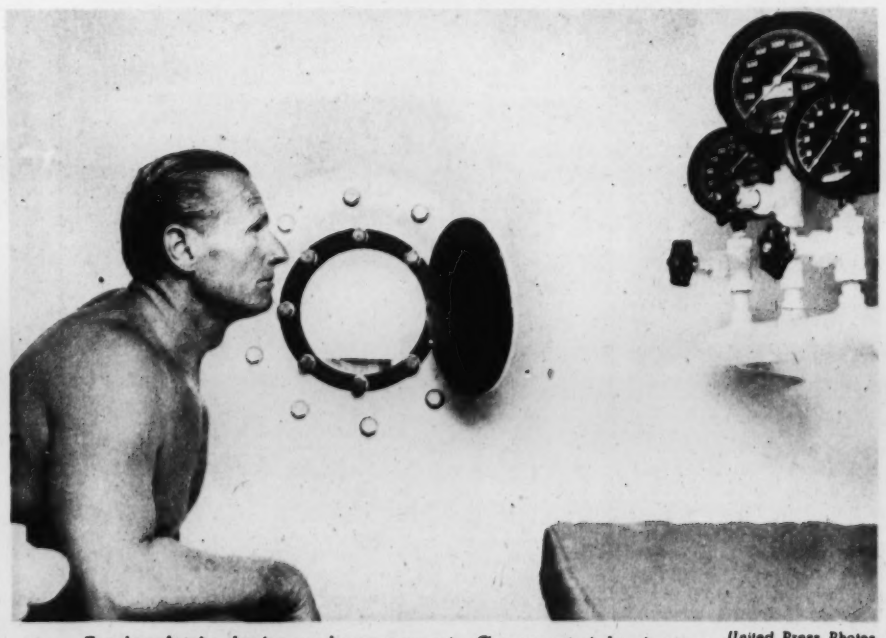


After view of the Cetacean shows its screw and vertical and horizontal rudders. Screw and rudders are protected by half circles of steel. Present diving record, which the Cetacean hopes to best, is 13,163 feet. It was set last year by two French naval officers off the coast of West Africa.

Legs of the Cetacean house the batteries used to power motor while craft is submerged. As a safety measure, the legs can be detached from inside the hull. Should regular method of surfacing fail, legs could be dropped, causing the submarine to float to the surface. Craft has forward deck for use when traveling on surface.

A SUBMARINE IN WHICH THE DESIGNER HOPES to set a new record for depth of undersea descent and to make photographs of marine life at great depths has been invented by Edmond Martine of San Pedro, California. The 50-ton experimental submarine, named Cetacean—meaning whale-like—is powered by a diesel engine for traveling on the water's surface. Underwater, a 65-horsepower electric motor takes over. The hull of the craft is of double-walled steel, with a honeycomb of steel bracing between the inner and outer wall to withstand the tremendous water pressure encountered at great depths. Observation and photography will be done from seven portholes, each a foot in diameter and with glass eight inches thick. Four lights, each of 1000 candlepower, will be used for underwater illumination.

Engineer Zane McKoskey leans against guard rail atop the craft as Designer Edmond Martine (center) and Diver-Photographer Fred Zendar climb ladder to join him. These three men will make up the Cetacean's crew.



Zendar checks the forward camera port. Gauges at right give depth pressure when descending. Porthole cover can be locked down when porthole is not being used for camera work.

REBUILDING IN EUROPE

London, Berlin Repair Their Damage From Fire and Bombs

Construction equipment and scaffolding are evidence that Saint George's Cathedral is rising from ruins in Southwark, a borough of London. View is of nave looking from the cathedral's west door. The Gothic cathedral, seat of the Catholic Bishop of Southwark, was badly wrecked by bombs and fire in 1941, 100 years after its cornerstone was laid. Building's design was by the famous nineteenth century architect Augustus Welby Northmore Pugin.

The passing of time brings continuing disappearance of World War II scars of London and Berlin. Here, surrounded by scaffolding, is London's Saint Clement Danes Church, which is being rebuilt. Two "spidermen" can be seen working at top of the new building. Destroyed in the great London fire of 1940, the new church will be rededicated to the Royal Air Force. Farther down the Strand, at left are the Law Courts. In distance at right is domed Saint Paul's Church.

New business buildings line streets as reconstruction progresses in the Kurfurstendamm area of the British sector of Berlin. Street car tracks were removed to provide parking space in middle of the two-lane boulevard seen at center of photograph. Still standing as a charred reminder of devastating air raids is the tower of Memorial Church (Gedachtniskirche). Photograph was taken from roof of a recently completed 13-story office building.

"Ah, my ladies, 'tis wonderful the things you can do with Mazola Oil"

Thank you, Arthur Godfrey, for illustrating so well what we want to say about golden Mazola Oil. For, 'tis true indeed, that Mazola is the best all-purpose oil money can buy.

You can fry the low-calorie way with Mazola ...bake with it (no bother with digging out solid shortenings)... and use it to make all kinds of wonderful salad dressings. See directions on label.

In fact, Mazola Oil is so good, it can make the difference between ordinary cooking and reputation builders. Really! And that's because Mazola is the only leading oil made from golden corn.

Next time your cooking calls for shortening or oil, just try Mazola. We promise you'll see the difference in downright goodness right away.

So keep a bottle of Mazola on your shelf within easy, easy reach... for frying... baking... salads!

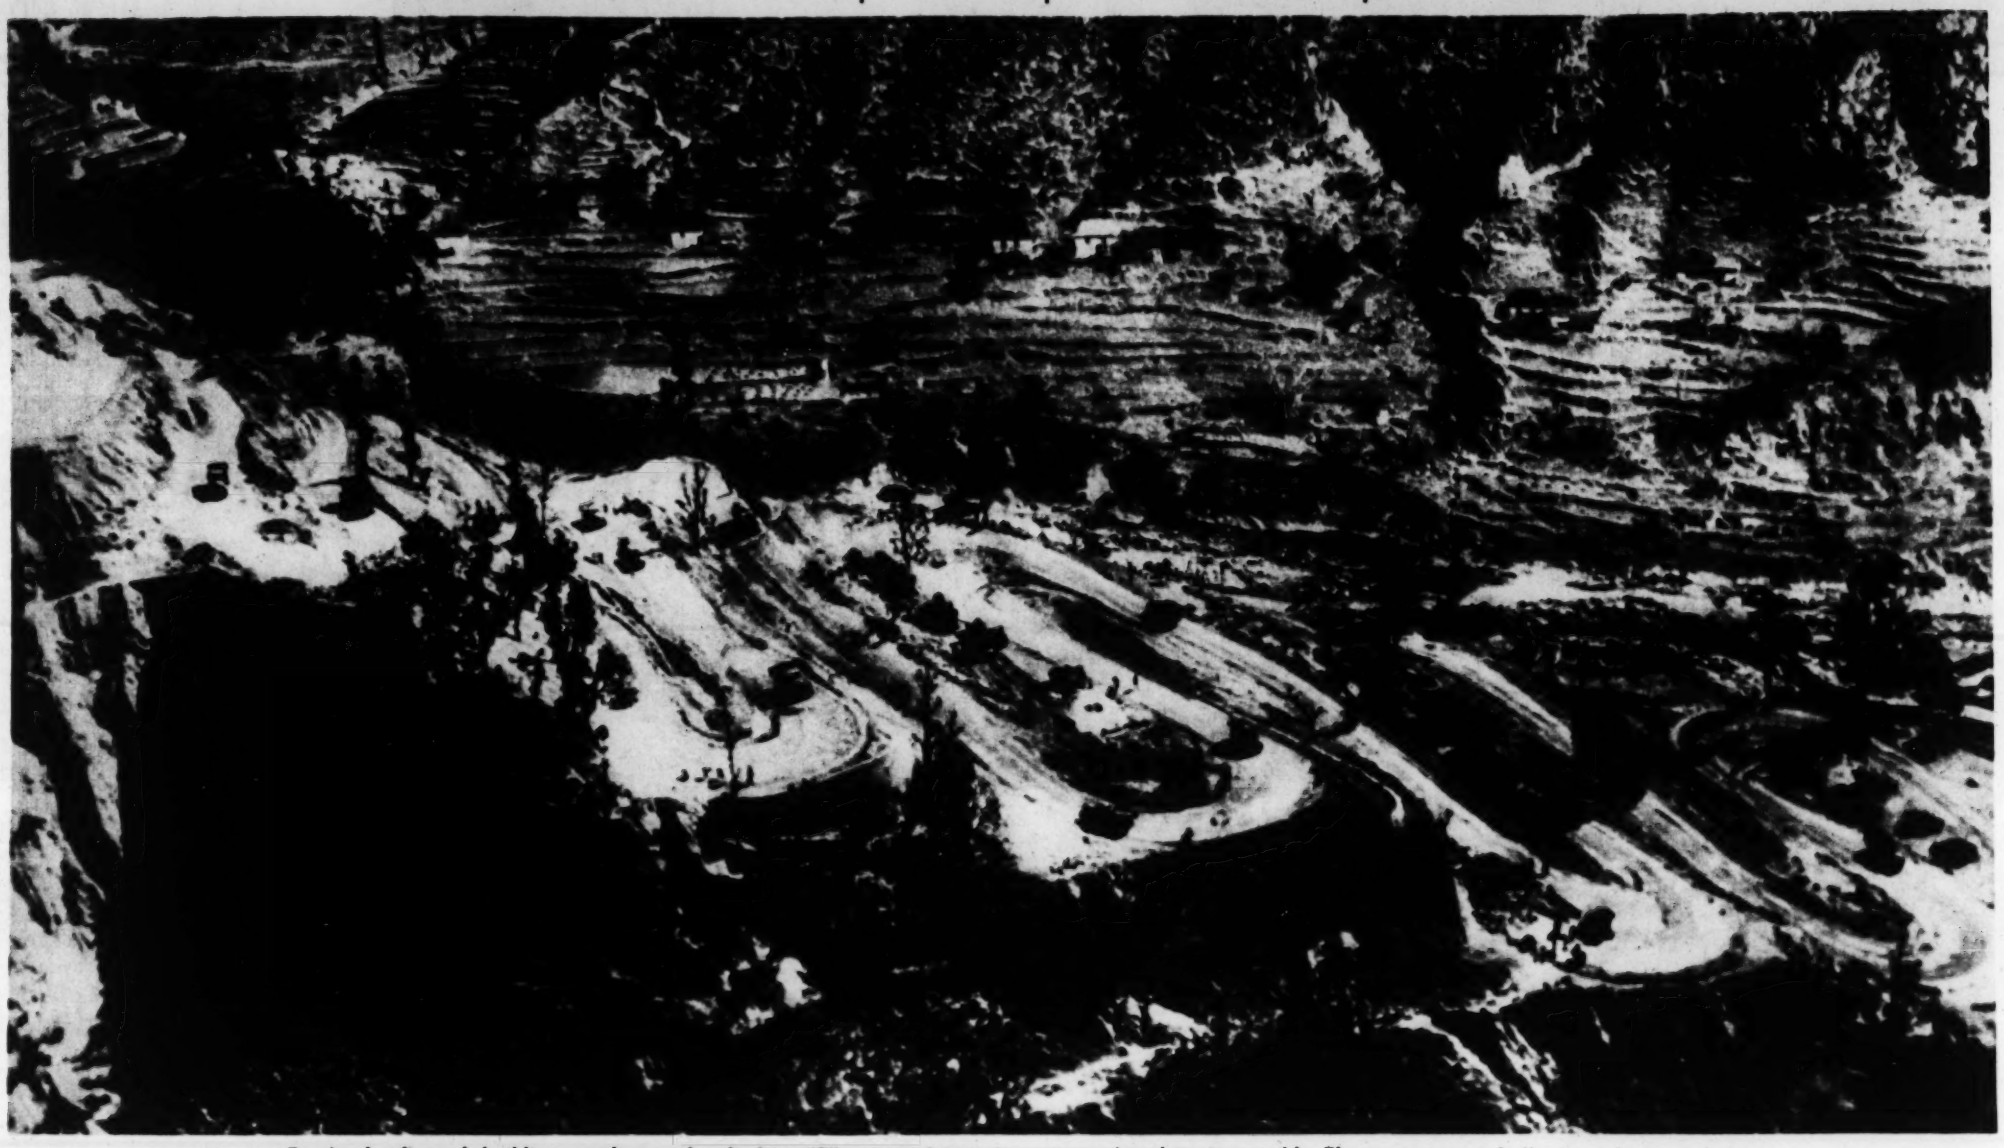
HIGHWAY IN THE HIMALAYAS

A Mountainside Is Carved Into Steps With Hairpin Turns on New Nepal-to-India Route



Trucks shuttle road-building supplies up the climbing "S" curves of a road being constructed into Nepal. The small country, about the size of Florida, lies between India and Tibet in the mighty Himalaya Mountains. Nepal had shut itself off from the outside world for centuries. Some of its men fought around the globe as mercenaries—the famous Gurkhas. But for the most part, Nepalese knew nothing of their neighbors, stayed at home tilling every arable acre of soil. Until 1947 foreigners, with a few exceptions, were barred from Nepal. After World War II, however, Nepal came under influences of a changing world. The country as a buffer state between India and Tibet, which is controlled by Communist China, asked for and received agricultural and technical assistance from member countries of the United Nations. Late in 1953 the first highway connecting Nepal's capital, Katmandu, with India was opened. Nepal now has close economic and defense ties with India. The road shown above, which is being hacked out over the mountains by Indian engineers, will serve as another all-weather link between India and Nepal when the 79-mile-long strip is completed in 1956.

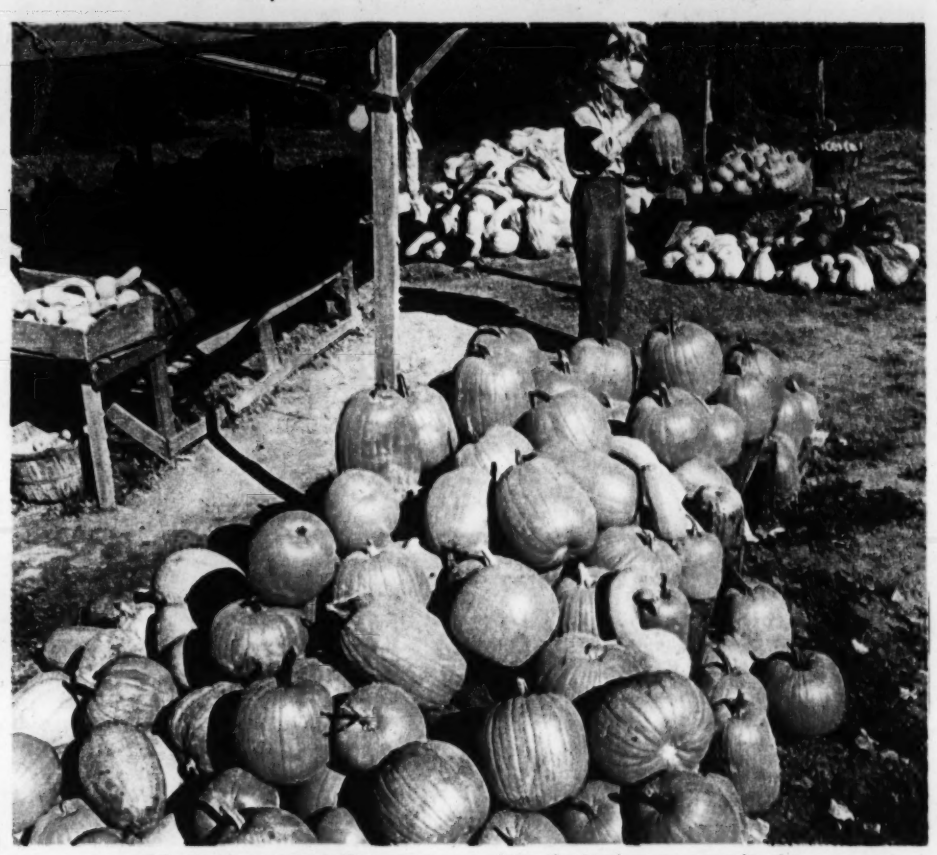
The Pumpkin Harvest Ushers in Fall's Colors

Pumpkins and jugs of cider garnish the counter of a roadside stand. Hanging from the ceiling are bunches of garlic and brightly colored corn, while acorn squash, cabbages, turnips and other vegetables are in background.

In colorful profusion, pumpkins, squash and assorted vegetables of varied hues are decoratively displayed amid flowers, bales of straw, and a shock of corn stalks to give a rustic touch.



A heap of orange-yellow sugar pumpkins, the kind many consider the best for pies — and goblin heads — is the eye-catching offering of this stand. Winter squash are piled up in the background.

SINCE THE FIRST THANKSGIVING the pumpkin, like the turkey, has been a traditional American symbol of bountiful harvests and holiday feasting. Along with bright-hued foliage, it is an integral part of the autumn landscape, its colorful rotundity associated with frosty mornings and fields of shocked corn.

For most residents of the St. Louis area, the pumpkin becomes a familiar sight in the days before Halloween, when it appears in heaped-up quantity on the numerous vegetable stands of St. Louis County. It is offered now as much for potential Halloween jack-o'-lantern heads as for pies. But these pumpkins, mostly raised in the Missouri River and Creve Coeur Lake bottoms, remain on display for many weeks to tempt passers-by with visions of golden pies for Thanksgiving and later holidays.

These photographs were made at stands on Olive Street road and along Highway 40.

Photos by ARTHUR WITMAN of the PICTURES Staff

The deep color of sugar pumpkins and lighter hues of field pumpkins provide a striking contrast when piled together. Pumpkins mature in early fall, vary in color from pale, waxy yellow to deep orange.

Of the same genus (cucurbita) as the pumpkin, the green striped cushaw is frequently seen, along with pumpkins, on county stands. It is a large crookneck winter squash, is sometimes referred to as a pumpkin.

Matrimonial Cakes, a Canadian Delicacy

1. Making filling for matrimonial cakes, Miss Riou drops the dates into boiling water, then adds sugar. Mixture is cooked until thick. Vanilla and nuts are added and filling is cooled.

2. Flour is sifted into a bowl. It is combined with brown sugar, rolled oats, salt and soda. Butter is rubbed into the mixture until it becomes crumbly.

3. A large baking pan previously greased is spread with half the cake mixture. Date filling is carefully spread on top of this.

By MERNA LAZIER

IN PARTS OF CANADA, a delicacy often served at weddings and other special occasions is a homey treat called matrimonial cakes. Miss Denise Riou, a registered nurse of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, now studying at St. Louis University, prepares the cakes for friends here as they are made in her home community. The date filling, spread between two layers of a rich cake mixture, gives a pleasantly moist quality and helps to keep the cakes edible for a long time.

Miss Riou begins by making the filling. The dates, sugar and water are boiled together, with frequent stirring, for about 15 minutes or until mixture thickens. Flavoring and nuts are added and filling is allowed to cool. To make the cake, flour, oats, soda, sugar and salt are combined and then butter is rubbed in thoroughly with the hands until mixture is crumbly. Half of this is spread and patted down in a large baking pan approximately 9-by-13 inches and 2½ inches deep. Date filling is spread on top of this and remainder of crumbs are spread on top and patted down as was done for the bottom layer. Cake is baked in a 350-degree oven for 35 to 40 minutes, or until golden brown. Too light a baking will result in a crumbly cake. After cake has cooled, it is cut into square or oblong pieces of any desired size. Pieces, individually wrapped in foil paper, make an interesting box of cakes for gifts. Amounts given will make about 40 to 50 generous size cakes.

INGREDIENTS: For the cake—two and one-fourth cups sifted flour, one and one-half cups brown sugar, two and one-half cups plus two tablespoons rolled oats, three-fourths teaspoon salt, one and one-half teaspoons baking soda and one and one-eighth cups butter or margarine. For the filling—two and one-half cups pitted dates, two and one-half cups boiling water, one-half cup plus two tablespoons sugar, one cup chopped English walnuts and one teaspoon vanilla.

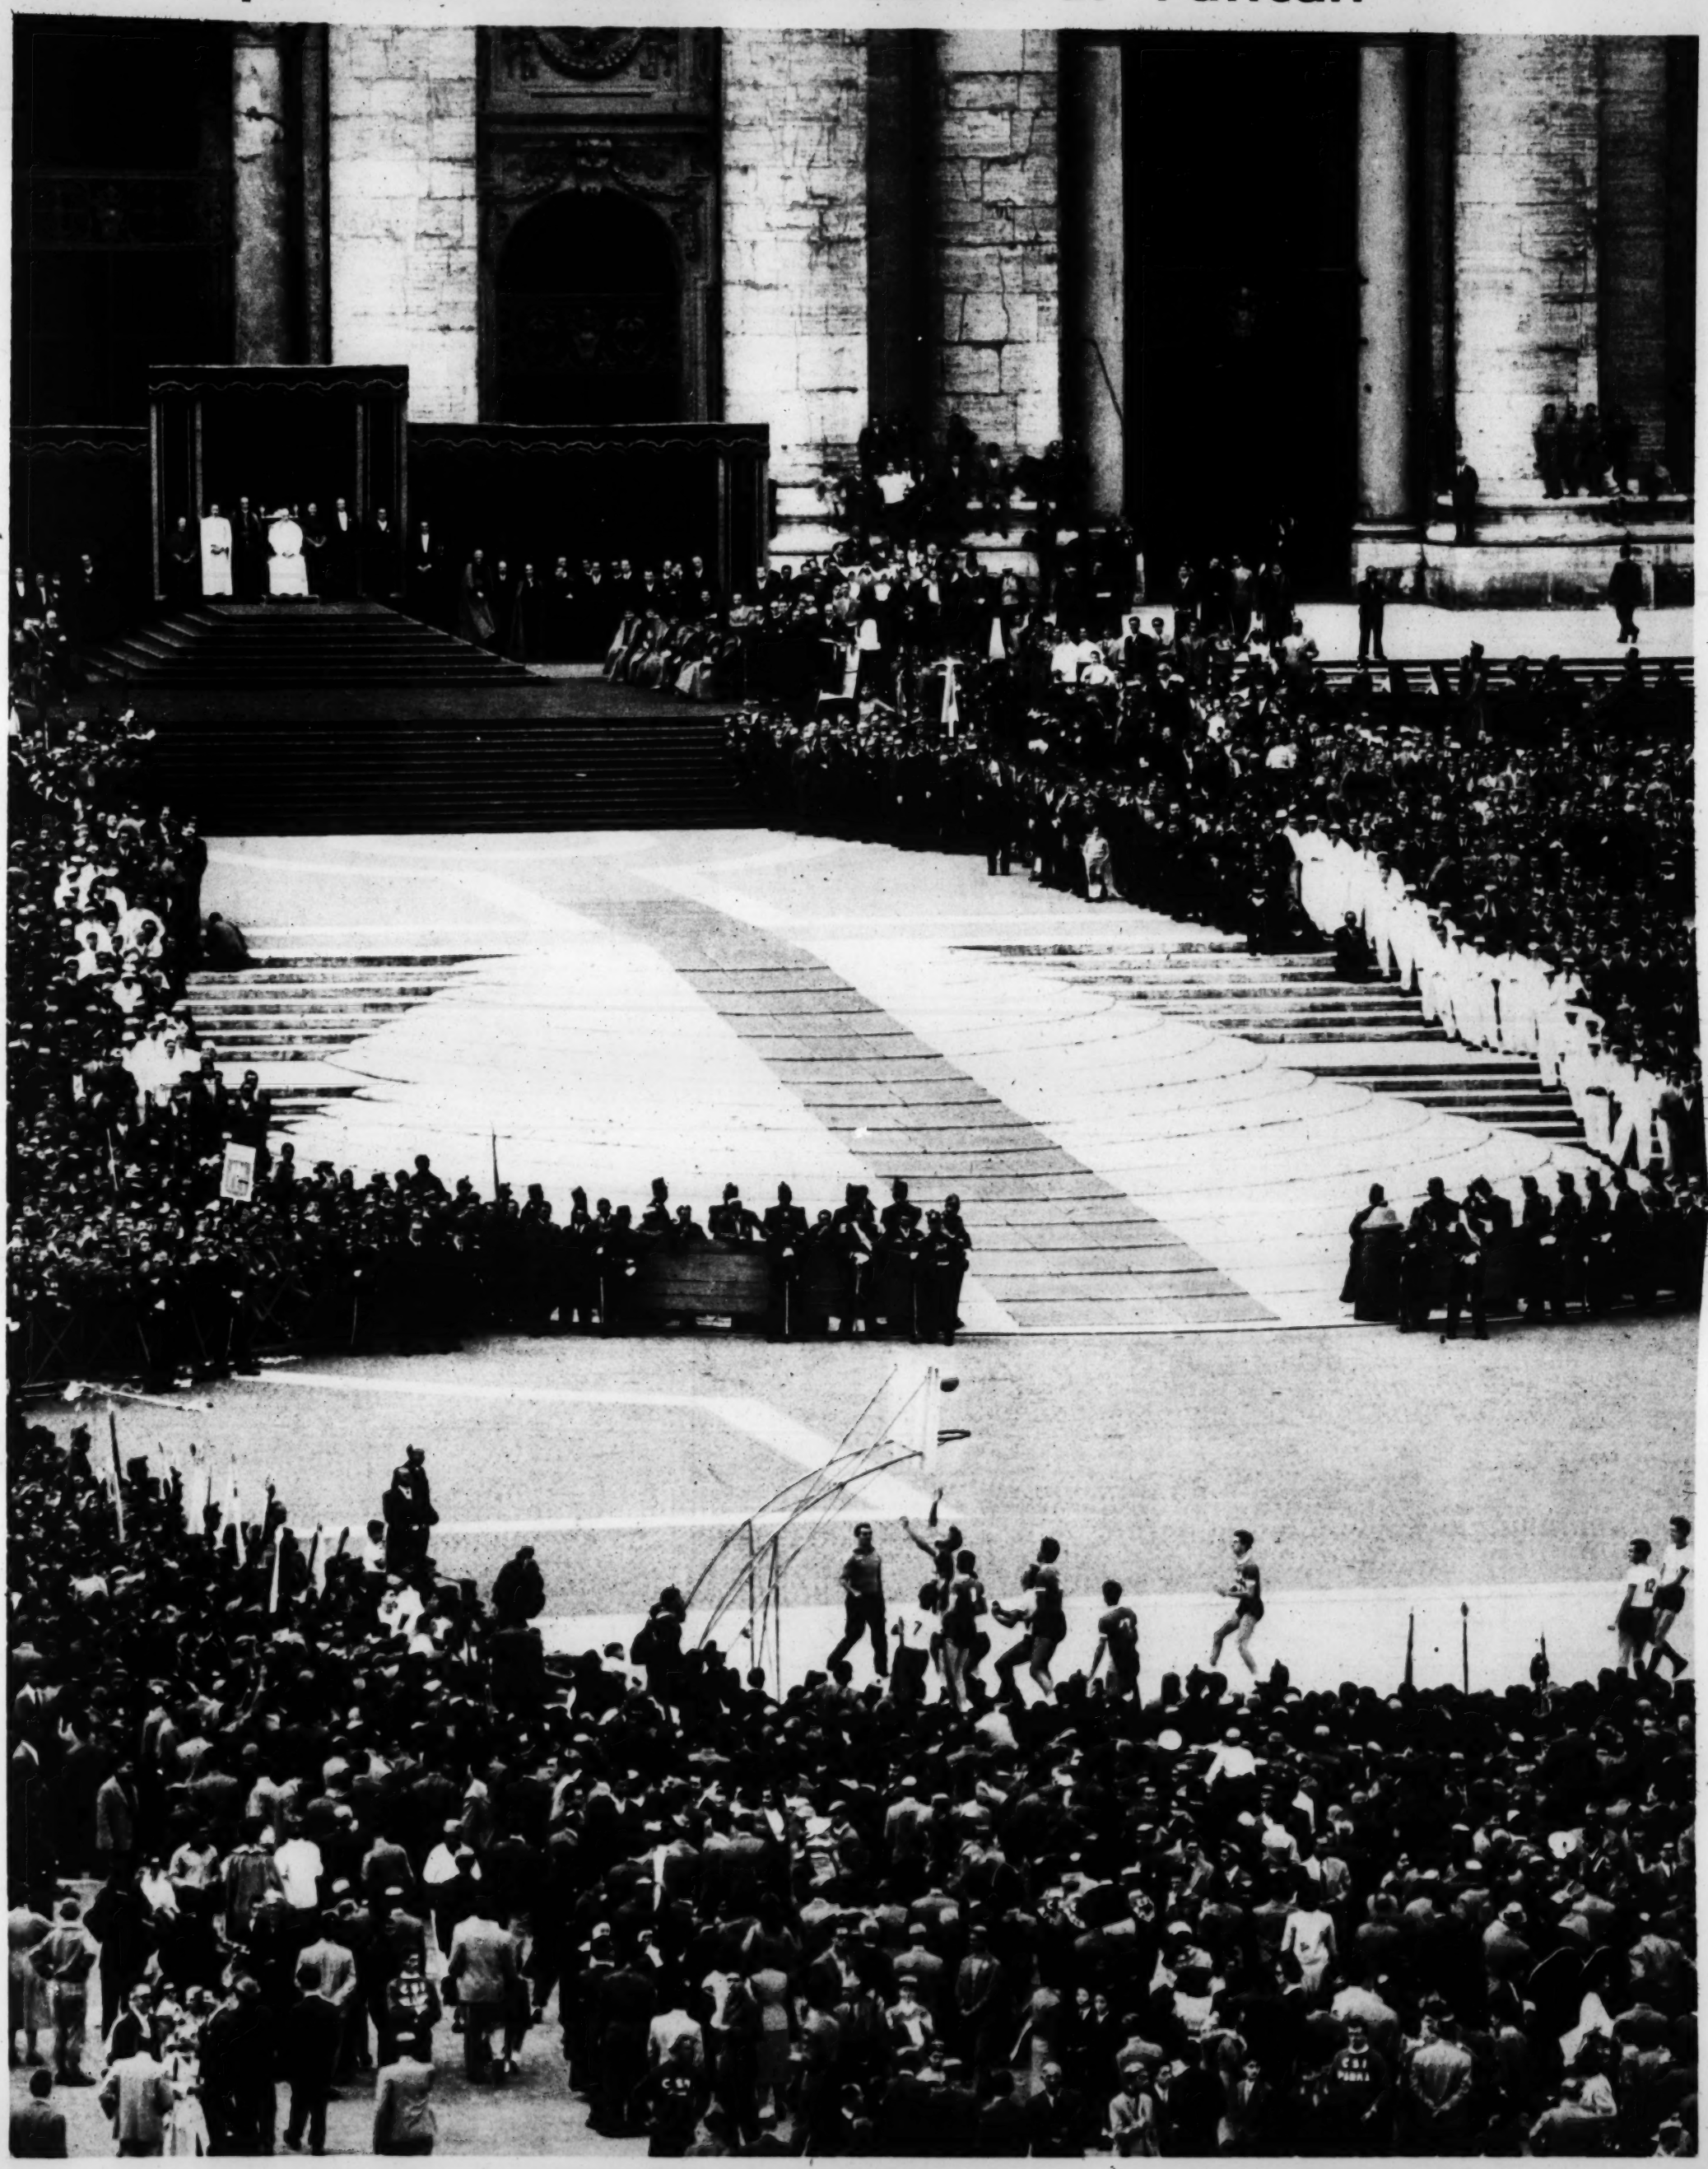
The Pope Sees Basketball Game at Vatican



Dwarfed by the imposing facade of St. Peter's Basilica in Vatican City, Pope Pius XII, dressed in white, sits on dais on the cathedral steps watching a basketball game between Italian teams. The contest was the first athletic event to take place in St. Peter's Square since carnival games were staged there under the Renaissance popes. The unusual spectacle was part of a sports program in the piazza in which thousands of young athletes participated; the brief basketball game, played on a portable court, followed mass calisthenics and gymnastics. Earlier, Pope Pius delivered a 25-minute address on the ethics of sport before the crowd of 150,000 persons in the huge piazza. In the audience were 80,000 uniformed athletes who had gathered in Rome for the tenth anniversary of the church-affiliated Italian Sports Center. The 79-year-old Pontiff, who was desperately ill 10 months ago, spent two hours outdoors and obviously enjoyed himself. He applauded the gymnastic exercises and congratulated the captain of the Rome basketball team which defeated a team from Pesaro. Basketball, becoming increasingly popular in Italy, was not entirely new to the Pope. A few years ago he saw a demonstration by the Harlem Globetrotters at his summer residence, Castel Gandolfo, in the Apennines near Rome.

WINTER RESORT STYLES

Dresses For Day or Evening Shown by Florida Designers

Dresses and ensembles that avoid glitter, yet stress glamour for informal day or evening wear at warm-climate winter resorts or for cruising are being presented by Florida designers. The pink-and-white striped cotton dress above has a lingerie touch in its wraparound, bow-tied skirt worn over a tiered organdy underskirt. The dress is suitable for daytime as well as evening wear.

A two-piece ensemble that bares the midriff, back and shoulders. There is a patriotic note in the red and white stripes and gold stars on slim white skirt and top. Outfit is designed for day or evening.

After-dark luxury is reflected in a dress of black-on-black satin brocade that falls into a flattering sheath. Demi-sleeved and self-belted, the dress has a square neckline that is lower in back than in the front.

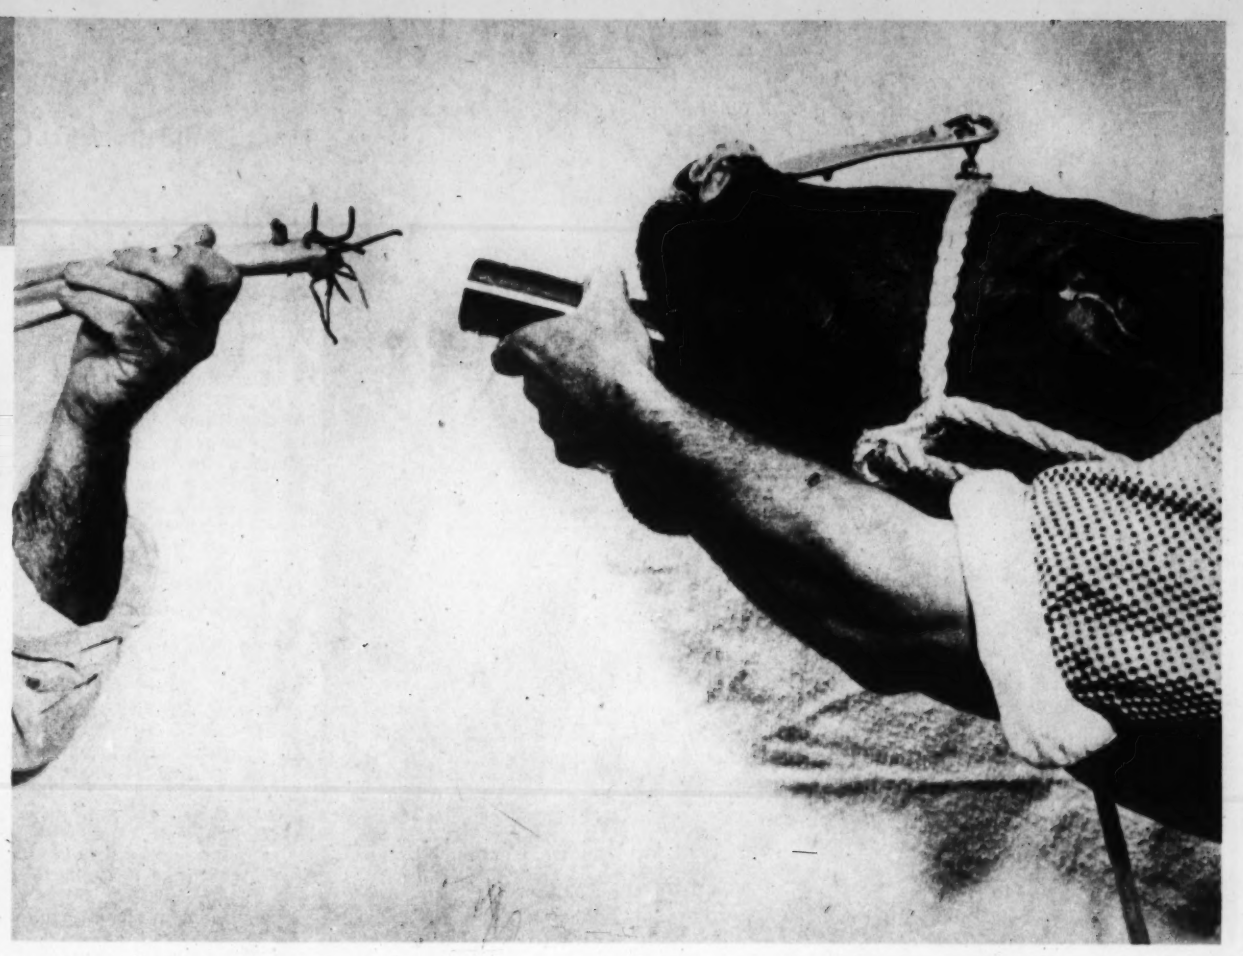
The Indian sari has been modified for this cocktail dress. One shoulder is bared and the flowing panel is arrested by a narrow gold belt of kid. The material is white gold and turquoise silk.

A full-skirted resort dress of deep brown and aqua floral cotton print for evenings. A slim rhinestone buckle, the garment's single touch of glitter, highlights the "wrapped" effect of the high waistline.

United Press Photos

Again the sari provides inspiration for a tropical fashion with an exotic Eastern air. The strapless, slim-fitted dress has a flying panel that can be worn as a stole, headdress or train. Red cotton material is printed with gold thread.

A MAGNET CURES COW'S INDIGESTION



When one of Farmer Dale Spangler's cows began ailing, he called Dr. James A. Muffly to his Mifflinburg, Pennsylvania, farm. The veterinarian, suspecting the trouble might be too much hardware in one of the animal's stomachs, brought along an electronic detector and an electromagnetic device of his own invention. In photo at left, Dr. Muffly uses the detector to confirm his diagnosis as Farmer Spangler holds the patient. Above, an electromagnetic rod, which had been inserted into the cow's stomach through a tube forced down its throat, is withdrawn with an array of nails and wire adhering to the end. Relieved of the indigestible metal tidbits, which were swallowed with feed, the animal recovered from its stomach trouble.

What makes Potato Salad taste its creamy best?

Hellmann's WHOLE-EGG MAYONNAISE!

It's so easy to give your potato salad that old time flavor goodness. Just be sure you blend it with Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise. It's the smoother, creamier mayonnaise because whole eggs—whites, yolks, even extra yolks—are whipped in. It blends so easily, flatters the natural good flavor of everything you use with it. Try this real potato salad—and see.

REAL POTATO SALAD

Boil 8 medium-size potatoes until tender. Peel, slice or dice while hot. Add small onion, chopped, 2 tsp. salt, ⅛ tsp. pepper, dash chervil (optional).

Combine 2 tbs. vinegar, 2 tbs. hot water, ⅓ cup real whole-egg mayonnaise. Combine with warm potatoes. Let cool.

Mix in ½ cup chopped green pepper, ¼ cup chopped pimiento, ½ cup diced celery, ½ cup smoother, richer real whole-egg mayonnaise. Chill. Serves 6... deliciously!

P.S. A perfect salad to make in advance... it keeps so fresh and moist.

To bring out the Whole Flavor use Real Whole-Egg Mayonnaise... creamy smooth

GERMANS RETURN

Military and Civilian Prisoners Reach Home After Release by Soviets

One of the oldest among the returning prisoners of war, 72-year-old Hieronimus Werm, holds a bouquet as he listens to a speech of welcome at the Camp Friedland reception center. An East German train took the repatriates to the border with West Germany, where relatives, friends and West German officials met them with busses for the trip to Camp Friedland.

Hans Baur, first person to profess first-hand knowledge of Hitler's death, talks to newsmen at Camp Friedland. Baur said that in 1946 the Russians took him back to Berlin to identify Hitler's body, which Captain Baur reported was burned beyond recognition. "But," he added, "I know that Hitler died."

AS THE OUTCOME OF A PRISONER EXCHANGE agreed on between the Soviet Union and West Germany, several thousand West Germans have returned to their homeland. They comprised a large contingent of military prisoners of war, including generals and other top rank officers, and hundreds of civilians.

Two of the returnees brought new confirmation of the death of Adolf Hitler by suicide in a Berlin air raid shelter in 1945. One was former Flight Captain Hans Baur, Hitler's personal pilot. He said that on April 30, 1945, "Hitler said goodby to me and then shot himself" although Baur himself did not witness the actual shooting. The other, Heinz Linge, Hitler's valet, said he had carried Hitler's body out of the bunker, helped pour gasoline over it and watched it burn.

The West German returnees have been received with bands, cheers, flowers and welcoming crowds that included relatives of many missing soldiers who hoped these men would turn up. Some of the relatives held up signs bearing the names, pictures, and addresses of the missing.

International News Photos

An elderly German couple and their returned son embrace on meeting at Camp Friedland. The Russians had agreed to release more than 9000 Germans held in Russia. Of that number 5000 were believed to be West Germans, the rest were East Germans. The Soviet Union and East Germany had also made an exchange agreement on prisoners.

Business buildings of Norwalk, Connecticut, stand with entire walls washed away on the side that faced the Norwalk River (left foreground). Norwalk, which escaped the August flood, was hurt more than any city in the six states when the river rose about 20 feet. Damage was estimated at $5,000,000 in Norwalk alone. Nearly a dozen factories were knocked out and about 1000 persons were temporarily jobless.

ANOTHER FLOOD HITS NORTHEAST

A ROARING gale last weekend lashed the East Coast from Maine to Hatteras. The coastal strip, more than a thousand miles long, was struck by drenching rain, in some places as much as 10 inches in 48 hours, by abnormally high tides and by wind gusts up to 70 miles an hour. Its was one of the worst storms, other than hurricanes, to hit the Eastern Seaboard in recent years. Floods left 42 persons dead or missing in six Northeastern states; damage to property was in the millions, but well under that caused by the floods that rolled over parts of the same six states last August 19 in the wake of Hurricane Diane. Connecticut, which bore the brunt of the August floods, was again the state hardest hit. There were 22 deaths in Connecticut.

A traffic tower on Main street of Danbury, Connecticut, is surrounded by water as a heavy truck slowly moves down White street, in search of flood victims. Damage in Danbury was estimated 10 times greater than that caused when the Still River went out of its banks in August. It was the worst flood since 1869 for the industrial city of 32,000 population. Most of the city was without electricity for three days.

BOOM OIL TOWN SALON

Jane Wyman, as Modiste, and Charlton Heston in Film "Lucy Gallant"

1. Just before World War II, Lucy Gallant (Jane Wyman) is riding a night train through Texas. Her train is stalled by high water near a booming oil town, New City. A rancher, Casey Cole (Charlton Heston), is happy to escort Lucy and her numerous pieces of luggage off the train and into town. He finds a room for her in a boarding house.

2. Lucy, low on funds, rents a tent and sells her wardrobe to the women of the town for a big profit. Among her first customers are Irma Wilson (Mary Field) and her daughter, Laura (Gloria Talbott), who tries on a party dress in the make-shift store. Lucy, excited over the results of her business venture, borrows money to open a modern dress shop in the mushrooming oil town. She names her store Lucy Gallant.

3. Casey comes home after serving in the war, finds that Lucy, whom he has often thought of during his years in the army, is a prospering businesswoman. He strikes oil on his ranch, but Lucy loses all her wealth when her store burns to the ground.

4. Lucy's friends tell her she should forget business, marry Casey, have a family. Lucy, still ambitious, builds a new store even more pretentious than her original shop—not knowing that it is Casey who, even though he wants her as his wife, has approved her loan at the bank. She has as a store manager Jim Wardman (Tom Helmore).

5. As Lucy is about to open her new store, she learns that Wardman has connived to ease her out as head of the firm and to take over himself. Unless a large payment is made to the bank, Wardman will win control. Undaunted, Lucy has a gala opening attended by Governor Allan Shivers of Texas (played by himself) who sits beside Lucy at the opening fashion show. Casey learns of Lucy's predicament and makes the store payment. Lucy finds that after all she does want to become Mrs. Casey Cole.

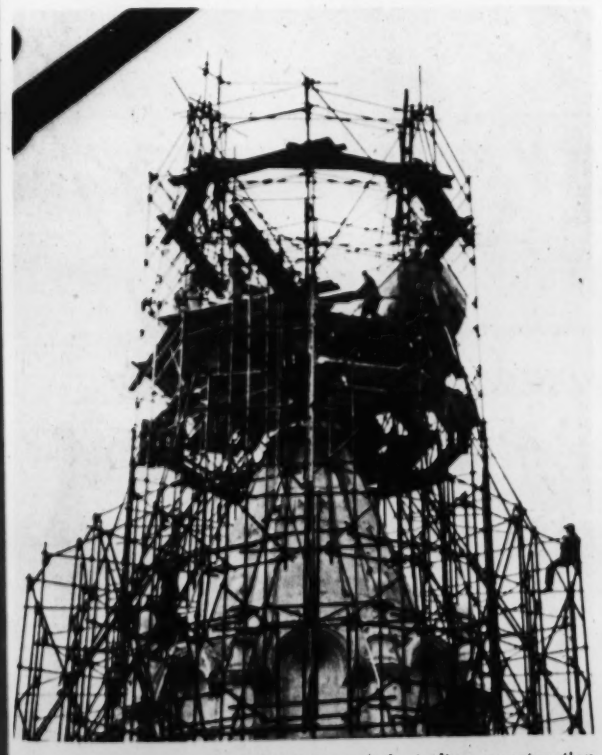
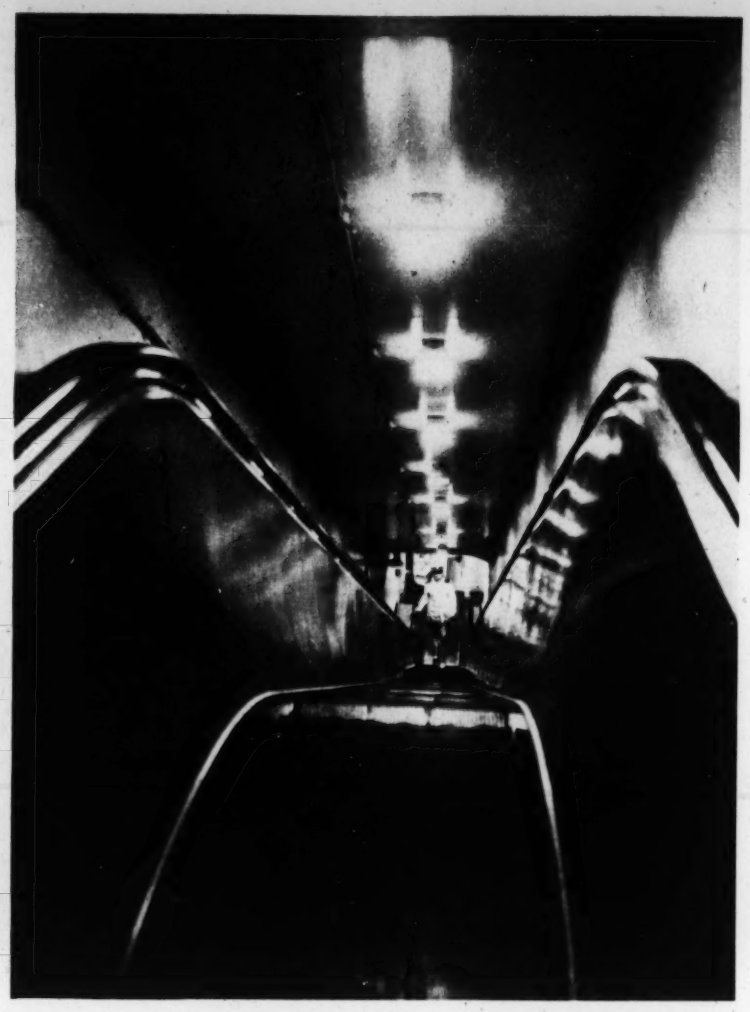
PATTERNS

High in the vaulted dome of the Grand Palais in Paris the overhead lights are mounted on background panels that seem to float in space. Their daytime purpose is to break up the rigid lines of overhead steelwork by interposing free-form patterns that serve to lower the ceiling. The lighting system has been installed for the annual Paris auto show. Its network, seen here only in part, extends a distance of more than 280 feet, contains 21,000 feet of fluorescent tubing.

United Press Photos



A network of steel girders and circling construction platforms temporarily imprisons stately profile of the famous cupola of Santa Maria del Fiore, "the Duomo" of Florence, Italy. Top of the cathedral is being strengthened following discovery that the huge ball and cross which have surmounted the cupola for centuries were in danger of toppling and crashing through the cathedral roof below. The ball, on which the cross is mounted, is visible behind girders on right of center platform. The ball and cross were to be lowered for the first repairs on them in 300 years. They will be returned to original position atop the cathedral, which dates to the fourteenth century.



An escalator is a prosaic convenience, but this one, when viewed from the end, forms a composition in smoothly molded surfaces, flowing curves, reflected lights. The escalator is on the United States super aircraft carrier, the Forrestal. It is used to carry pilots to and from the flight deck.

Bob Ingham asks:

SHOULD BUSINESS HELP SUPPORT OUR COLLEGES ?

BOB INGHAM, well-known radio and television sportscaster, KSD and KSD-TV, St. Louis

DR. LAURENCE M. GOULD, president of Carleton College, Northfield, Minnesota:

"Education has been described as the 'cutting edge of progress.' The phrase aptly shows the interdependence of business and education. Far-sighted businessmen already have seen the danger signs in rising educational costs and are doing something about it. The financial aid of organizations like Standard Oil has helped greatly to avert what might become a major crisis in education."

DR. FRANK H. SPARKS, president of the Associated Colleges of Indiana and president of Wabash College, Crawfordsville, Indiana:

"Almost everyone agrees that it is to the advantage of business, education, and the state that the privately-financed colleges of America remain independent and strong. Since privately-financed education and privately-financed enterprise have a common stake, contributions to colleges are sound, long-range investments for any business. Standard Oil has done great service to America in recognition and support of this principle."

HAROLD A. LINDAHL, graduate student, Illinois Institute of Technology, Chicago, Illinois:

"The great shortage of scientists and engineers is one of America's most serious problems. Fortunately, some companies have started to correct this situation by giving financial help and encouragement to students who are studying for such careers. In my own case, a Standard Oil Foundation fellowship has made it possible for me to study for my doctorate in chemical engineering at Illinois Tech."

RALPH F. KRAUSE, JR., senior at Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa:

"Large companies like Standard Oil rightly have taken an interest in education. Students often find it difficult to earn enough to meet their many college expenses and still devote enough time to studying. Scholarship grants, such as the one I have received from Standard Oil Foundation, permit a student to concentrate on the business of learning."

Financial aid to our colleges and a helping hand to serious and able youngsters serve to keep America strong and free. That is why we of Standard Oil believe very definitely that business should help support our colleges. Thirty-seven graduate and undergraduate college and university students are studying under Standard Oil Foundation fellowships and scholarships. Selection of all students receiving such individual awards is made by the colleges. The Standard Oil Foundation also has set up a yearly grant of $150,000 to aid privately-financed liberal arts colleges through their state associations in Midwestern states.

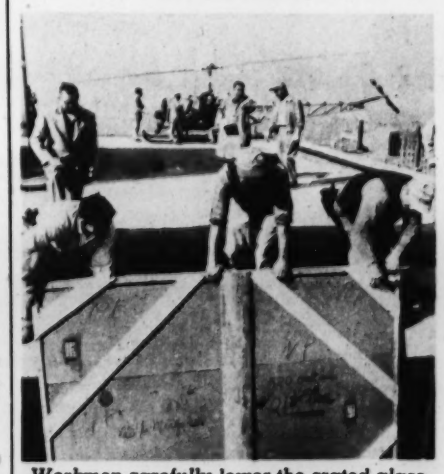
Problem of Replacing Broken Plate Glass on Top Floor Solved With Helicopter

The helicopter here seen about to make a roof-top landing is delivering a cargo—a seven-by-eight-foot, 300-pound sheet of plate glass. The pane is lashed between the aircraft's skids. After picking up the crated pane at a glass company on Chicago's West Side, the helicopter carried it safely to the roof of an apartment house on the city's North Side, where it was installed to replace a broken pane. When it was found that the building's elevator was too small to carry the glass, the choice was between raising by block and tackle and delivery by helicopter. The helicopter was resorted to because the $800 price for its service was $400 cheaper than the bid submitted for setting up hoisting equipment.
International News Photo

The 21-story apartment house, with helicopter perched on a corner of its roof, as viewed from a nearby building. Arrow points to bay of penthouse for which new pane was delivered. Building's overhangs were considered a possible hazard for raising the glass by block and tackle.
United Press Photo



Workmen carefully lower the crated glass over side of roof to level of twenty-first floor. The helicopter (in background) had a 15-by-15-foot space on which to make its landing. The pilot, Al Luke (wearing cap), talks with overcoated man.

Fire, Fanned by Typhoon Winds, Sweeps Japanese City

Aided by typhoon winds, one of Japan's worst fires since World War II sweeps through the port city of Niigata. Blocks of buildings already have been laid waste, while the flames and smoke pour from gutted structures as the blaze advances. Uncontrolled for eight hours, the fire razed 1100 buildings, injured 155 persons, and left another 4500 homeless.

International News Photo

A large portion of the business district is almost hidden under the clouds of smoke, as large numbers of the 250,000 residents stream along a main street already hit by the blaze. The fire started when an electric power line was broken by the typhoon and sparks ignited a frame municipal building. Niigata is on Honshu Island.

United Press Photo

Only smoking wreckage remains in what had been the busy shopping center of the port. During the fire the United States Air Force evacuated the families of American airmen who were stationed at nearby Johnson Air Base and living in Niigata. Medical supplies, food, and clothing were rushed into the city by the Air Force, and relief stations were set up.

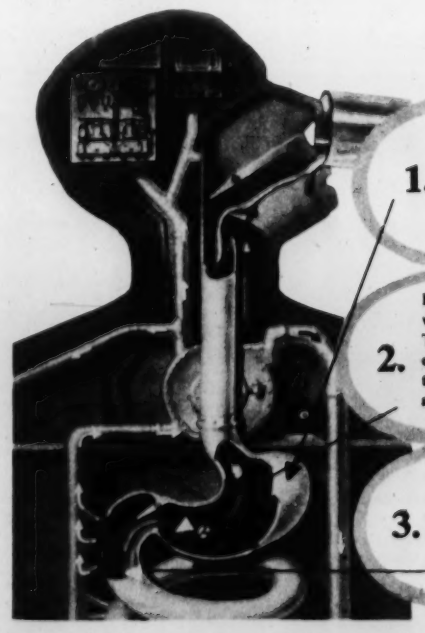
Won't upset your stomach!

A PRODUCT OF BRISTOL MYERS

Here's why:



1. Medical science knows that a pain reliever must go through the stomach and into the blood stream to relieve pain.

2. Bufferin combines aspirin with two antacid ingredients. These speed the pain reliever out of the stomach and into the blood stream twice as fast as aspirin. So . . .

3. Bufferin acts twice as fast as aspirin to relieve pain. And it won't upset your stomach as aspirin often does.

If you suffer from pain of arthritis or rheumatism, ask your physician about Bufferin

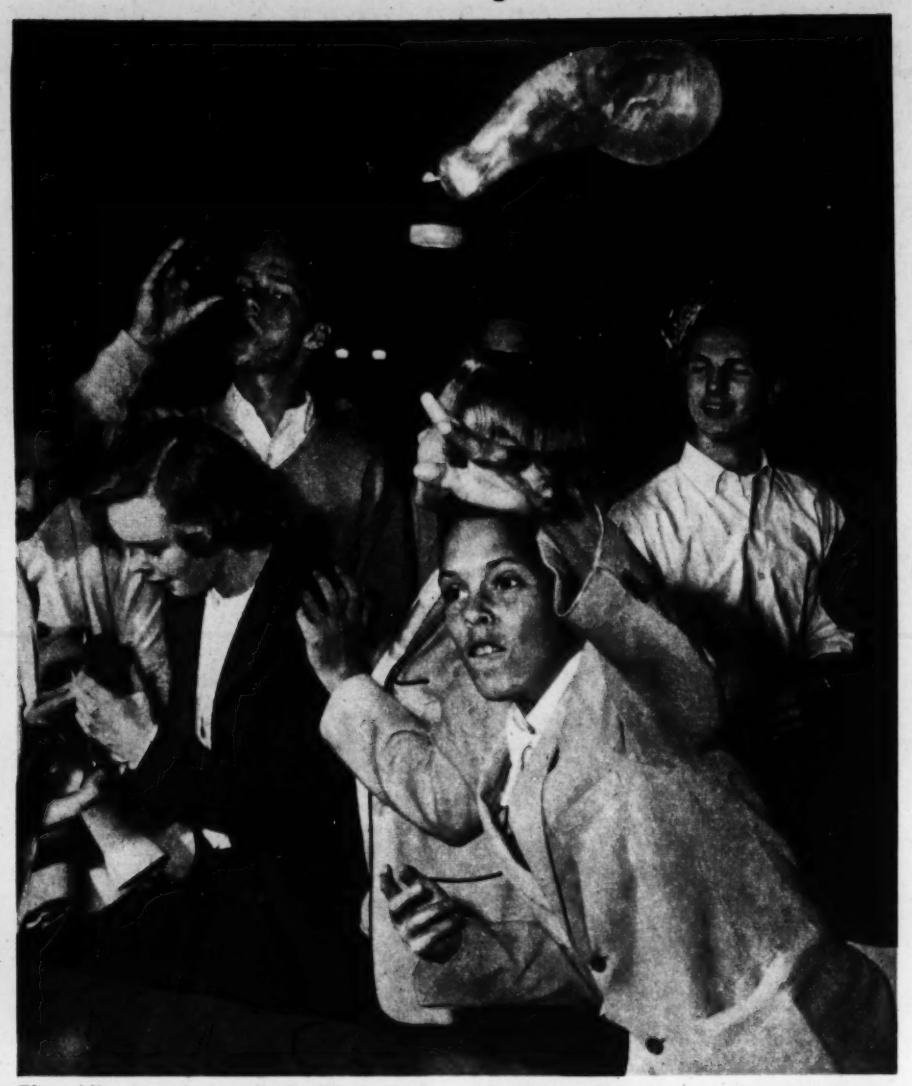
Wet Fun at St. Louis U. High School Fall Frolics



The oddly shaped object in the photo above has just been released in a left-handed fling by the young man intently biting his lower lip. It is a balloon filled with water. The missile is headed toward a human target seated behind a wide-mesh screen some 10 feet away. Striking the screen in precisely the right spot, the balloon bursts (photo at left). Its contents sail onward to drench the unflinching target, whose companion and fellow target looks on in open-mouthed sympathy. This damp sport took place at St. Louis University High School as a feature of the senior class Fall Frolics. Other diversions were provided in the basement midway for amusement of guests between dances, but the balloon-throwing booth proved most popular. It isn't everyday that freshmen like Tom Michel, the tosser shown, can throw water-filled balloons at seniors like Steve Gross (left, photo at left) and Kevin McGinnis (right) and get away with it.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH ACTION —AND ADVENTURE SECTION

OCTOBER 23, 1955

Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

By Harold R. Foster

Our Story: WHILE RECOVERING FROM HIS WOUNDS, PRINCE VAL IS TELLING HIS CHILDREN THE GLORIOUS STORY OF HIS BOYHOOD. HE CONTINUES: "AT THE TRIAL OF SIR NEGARTH, THE ROBBER-KNIGHT, IN CAMELOT THERE WERE MANY ACCUSERS. BUT I TOLD HOW HE RISKED HIS LIFE TO SAVE US FROM THE MONSTROUS SEA DRAGON. AND SO KING ARTHUR, MERCIFULLY, SPARED HIM."

Merlin Ambrosius

Queen Guinevere

"NEXT DAY I WAS PRESENTED TO KING ARTHUR AND QUEEN GUINEVERE AND TOLD THEM OF MY DESIRE TO BECOME A KNIGHT. I LEARNED I HAD TO WIN MY SPURS BY DEEDS OF VALOR. EAGERLY I AGREED TO BECOME SIR GAWAIN'S SQUIRE."

"THAT VERY AFTERNOON, AS SIR GAWAIN'S NEW SQUIRE, I STARTED POLISHING GEAR. MEANWHILE, FAR AWAY, A FRIGHTENED GIRL WAS RACING TOWARD CAMELOT."

"IT WAS THE MAID ILENE, AND IN CAMELOT GARDEN SHE TOLD HOW HER PARENTS WERE IMPRISONED BY AN OGRE. GAWAIN AND I WERE MOVED TO SWIFT ACTION BY HER STORY AND HER PLEAS."

"SO OUT TO ADVENTURE WE RODE. IT WAS A WONDERFUL THING TO TRY TO WIN KNIGHT'S SPURS AND HELP A PRETTY GIRL BESIDES!"

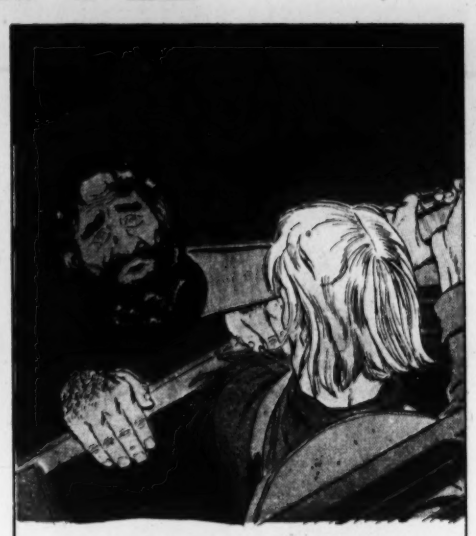
LANCE

LANCE and Blaze find an ally in Tom Fitzpatrick. Quickly, they barricade his door against the angry mob swarming after them . . .

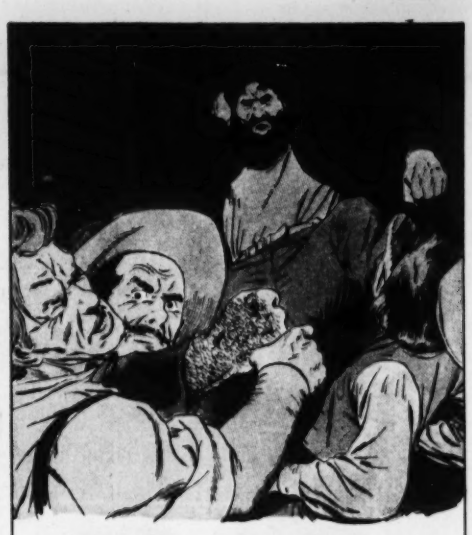
They jump to the window, their only escape—but the mob overflows to the street, cutting them off.

And now some vacationing mountain men, drawn by the sounds of battle, join the crowd . . . and one of them starts up the side of the building!



Just short of getting a faceful of Hawken butt he is recognized. "Big Fallon! You pig-eared pile o' weasel bait!"

"FITZ!" the big man groans. "Air YEW on t'other end o' this??"

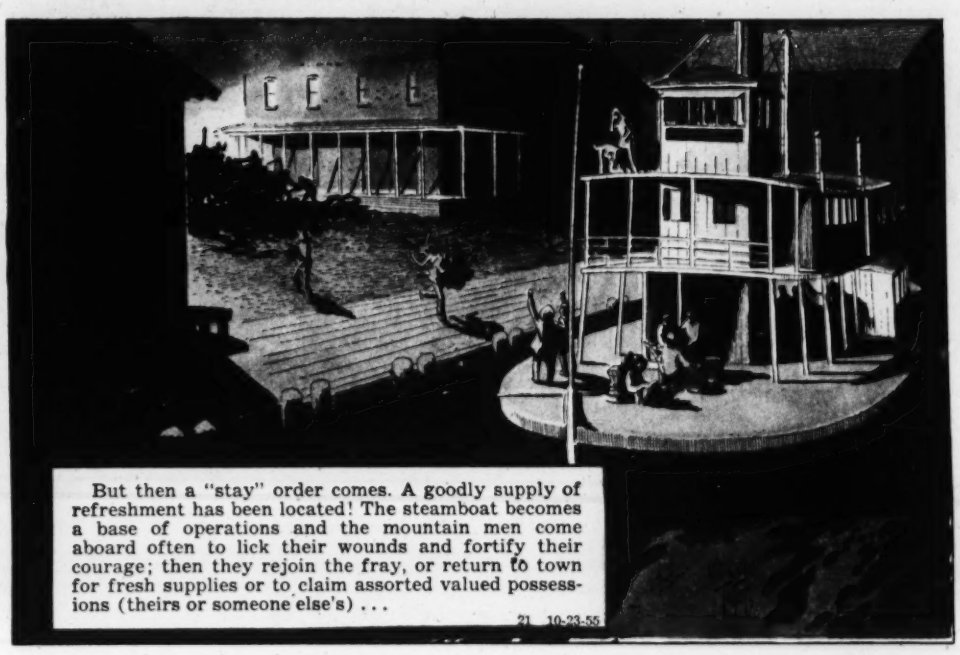


"Thar's ben a turr'ble mistake, boys," Big Fallon hollers down. "We're fightin' th' wrong people!" He drops to the ground, the war begins, and Lance, Blaze, and Fitz pile out of their prison.

The mountain man considers himself a match for any ten men. This is something of an exaggeration, however, for presently the trappers are outnumbered only 5-to-1 and find themselves backed to the river.

Above the din of battle a voice shouts: "We cain't swim this crik (the Mississippi), thar's snags an' bars out thar! Somebody rent us a boat!"

This is promptly done, at gunpoint . . . Boilers are fired and the boat made ready to move . . .



But then a "stay" order comes. A goodly supply of refreshment has been located! The steamboat becomes a base of operations and the mountain men come aboard often to lick their wounds and fortify their courage; then they rejoin the fray, or return to town for fresh supplies or to claim assorted valued possessions (theirs or someone else's) . . .
